YOUNG JAILS SHERIFF ALONG WITH HERRIN POLICE CHIEF, MAYOR

Leader of Ku Klux Klan Dry Raids Assumes Civil Authority Over Virtually All of County.

MILITARY PRISONERS HELD IN BASEMENT OF CLUB.

Fifteen Companies of Troops in or on the Way to Herrin—Galligan Charged With Complicity in Murder of Constable Cagle.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HERRIN, Ill., Feb. 9.—The Sheriff of Williamson County, the Mayor and Chief of Police of Herrin were under arrest tonight, and the Chief Deputy Sheriff lay in the local hospital, seriously wounded. Civil authority was centered in S. Glenn Young, leader of the force of raiders largely composed of Ku Klux Klan members, which has made many arrests of alleged liquor law violators. The quarrel between this raiding force and the Sheriff has now called State troops here for the second time within six weeks, 1 5companies of soldiers being here or on the way.

Sheriff George Galligan is in the Herrin jail, charged with complicity in the murder of Constable Caesar Cagle, Young's right-hand man in the liquor raids. Mayor C. E. Anderson and two of Galligan's regular deputies, Hezzie Burns and H. J. Trout, are three of a group which was arrested, also in connection with the Cagle murder, and held for a time in a temporary jail in the basement of the Elks' Club, the others in this group were Hugh Willis, miners' union officer and at one time a defendant in the Herrin massacre cases; Jim Davis, John Murray, J. W. Brown, Alvin Thomas, Pete Smith, James Johnson and Ora Thomas.

Sheriff Arrests Police Chief.

The killing of Cagle Friday night, which has the appearance of a deliberate assassination, followed the wounding of John Layman, Chief Deputy Sheriff. Layman was shot in the left breast and the bullet is believed to have penetrated the lung.

Sheriff Galligan immediately arrested Chief of Police John Ford of Herrin and two patrolmen, Harold Crain and Sim Stephens, and took them first to Marion, the county seat, and then to Murphysboro, county seat of Jackson County. At last accounts the three were still in the Murphysboro jail.

Though military authority is supposed to have supplanted civil authority here, Young was very active tonight as acting Chief of Police, a position he assumed after other local officers had been arrested. Young tonight sat beside the police magistrate and directed a number of specially sworn-in policemen, who wore starts cut crudely from sheet tin. Their duties appeared to be to gather evidence relating to the killing of Cagle, and incidentally to keep up with developments in the Layman case.

Young and the klansmen describe the murder of Cagle in a manner which makes it appear an atrocious crime. And the shooting of Layman, as related by the Sheriff, has also an ugly appearance.

Cagle's friends say that his 9-year-old son was used as a decoy to summon Cagle to his death Friday night. The child was sent with a message to his father, that he was wanted at the Masonic Hall. When Cagle arrived, it is charged, he was met by 15 or 20 men, some of whom opened fire on him. He fell in a doorway, with four bullet wounds.

Young charges that the men now under arrest for the murder of Cagle were deputized by Sheriff Galligan Friday evening. The inquest into Cagle's death, to be held today, is expected to bring out the charges of the Klansmen as to an apparent conspiracy to do away with Cagle.

"One of Two Real Officers."

"Cagle was one of the two real officers of this county," Young said. He did not name the other, but appeared to refer to himself. "His murder was one of the most cold-blooded that ever occurred. He was called for the purpose of knocking him off."

Sheriff Galligan's story of the shooting of Layman was told by him today, before Galligan was arrested in the Cagle case.

"I was called to Herrin last night," the Sheriff said, "to attend a meeting of the Flaming Circle, the organization opposed to the klan. Layman went with me, and we attended the meeting and advised them to be peaceable. While we were talking, someone came running into the hall and said Glenn Young and his bunch were coming upstairs.

"Layman and I left the hall, and at the head of the stairs we met Chief Ford and Patrolman Crain. Both were waving guns. I grabbed Crain and Layman grabbed Ford. A shot was fired, and Layman said, 'They got me, George.' Layman said he was satisfied it was Ford who fired the shot.

"I took charge of Ford, Crain and Patrolman Stephens, who came runnng up. Members of the Flaming Circle came out of the hall, declaring they would lynch the men who shot Layman. I saw a Hudson car standing near, and persuaded the owner, Charles Farris of Johnston City, to drive me and the three prisoners to Marion. From Marion I took them to Murphysboro for safe keeping."

The killing of Cagle occurred

GIRL TRIPLETS NUMBERED TO TELL THEM APART

Each of Children Born to Couple in County Look the Same and Weighs Four Pounds.

Girl triplets were born last Saturday night to Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Moore of Overland, St. Louis County. Each of the girls weighed exactly 4 pounds, and they look so much alike their clothing is numbered to tell them apart.

Moore, a lather, is 28 years old, and Mrs. Moore is 32. Besides the triplets they have two other girl children, Dorothy Elizabeth, 9, and Mildred Loretta, 4. The triplets are named Alma Mary (after the mother), Laverne Mary and Drucilla Mary.

Sunday 32 neighbors called to see the babies. Thursday afternoon the neighbors gave a "shower," and a table in the room where the mother and babies lie is heaped with blankets and bonnets and all manner of baby things. Mother and babies are doing nicely.

MAN DIES AS RESULT OF BEATING ON STREET

James Nicks Told Police Two Men Attacked Him for No Apparent Reason.

James Nicks, 27 years old, of 2637 Washington boulevard, died at city hospital at midnight from a skull fracture suffered Friday night, when two men attacked him in front of 2741 Olive street, for no apparent reason, according to Nicks' statement to the police.

Nicks said that he had gone to the Olive street address to call for a friend, Miss Alice Dittling. Miss Dittling told police she was waiting at her door for Nicks, and hearing a noise, looked out and saw him struggling gwith two men. She approached them, and the men ran at her, but she re-entered the house, after which the men jumped in a Ford coupe, she said, and drove west.

119-to-1 Shot Wins Race.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 9.—One of the longest priced winners in the history of the Tia Juana race track captured the seventh race at the course this afternoon when Voorgold, a bay colt bred and owned by A. B. Spreckels of San Francisco, captured the seventh race on the program. Voorgold's price in the mutuels machines was $240, or 119 to one to win; $30.60 to place, and $12.20 to show. The colt, by Voorhees and Love of Gold, found the soft going left by local showers much to his liking and got up in the last few strides to win by a narrow margin over a fast field.

LAWSON AND KING MURDERS LINKED BY 'FOLLIES' GIRL

Slain Actress and "Dot" King Had Been Pals and Moved in Same Clique, Police Are Told.

KILLINGS LAID TO SOCIETY CROOKS

Band That Frequents Cabarets Said to Be Quick to Notice Girls With Costly Jewelry.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—A girl from "The Follies" tonight disclosed to detectives a link between the Louise Lawson murder of yesterday and the still unsolved mystery of Dorothy King Keenan's slaying a year ago.

"Lou" Lawson, the 24-year-old actress-musician and playmate of wealthy men, was strangled to death in her luxurious apartment off Central Park west by two men who robbed her of valuable jewelry and escaped without leaving a clew.

Under almost identical circumstances, "Dot" King, another recipient of the attentions of wealthy men, was chloroformed to death and robbed last year in the costly home off Fifth avenue she called "The Nest."

Girls Were "Pals."

The Dot King murder remained a mystery and that of Lou Lawson promised to develop into one, until today the Follies girl, talking under a pledge that her name be kept secret, disclosed that Dot and Lou had been "pals." Her story, set alongside evidence already accumulated indicating that the crimes were almost identical in detail, convinced authorities that Dot King and Lou Lawson were slain by the same men or by members of a clique of cabaret habitues whom both girls had known.

The detectives' informant also disclosed that the two slain girls, besides being "pals," were equally close friends with Hilda Ferguson, a chorus girl who frequently has figured in the year-old investigation of the Dot King murder.

"Dot and Lou were together a lot before Dot was murdered," the Follies girl was reported to have told detectives. "I always thought Lou knew much more about Dot's death that she dared tell, and that she could have implicated certain people."

She told of a clique of musical comedy chorus girls, including herself, who had chummed together, associating with the same "gentlemen friends," dancing nightly attendance at chosen Broadway cabarets and entertaining at parties in each other's apartments.

Some at Palm Beach.

"Lou was friendly with that crowd, too," the girl continued. "Most of them are at Palm Beach now. There were only three of us left in New York. We met at some prominent hotel almost every afternoon for tea dancing and again at some cabaret at night. Now there are only two of us."

This girl's story was said by detectives who have worked on the Dot King case for a year to corroborate their evidence that she was only one of the victims of a well-knit organization of crooks who operate in the White Light zone. Members of the gang dress and dance well. They are quick, according to the authorities, to note and trail such a clique as that to which Dot King and Lou Lawson are reported to have belonged—appearing often in the most exclusive places, the girls exquisitely gowned, jeweled and beautiful; their companions big and easy spenders. Eventually these crooks, working in pairs, or trios, single out one of the girls, invade her apartment when she is alone, bind, rob and sometimes kill her. As the Follies girl was reported to have told detectives today: "The girl seldom squeals. She's afraid to. If they get her jewelry she tells her friends she 'lost' it or 'hocked' it."

Murders Perhaps Unintended.

It is now believed that Dot King's death was a "slip up"; that her assailants accidentally gave her the killing dose of chloroform; and that the death of Lou Lawson by strangulation yesterday, after she had been gagged and tied down, was similarly unintended by those who robbed her.

Although police said they knew the whereabouts of Gerhard M. Dahl, banker, broker, Brooklyn Manhattan Transit director and

ROBBERS HAD FLED, BUT 60 POLICEMEN DIDN'T KNOW IT

Vain Four-Hour Search of 9-Story Building Follows Shooting of Watchman.

About 60 policemen spent nearly four hours searching the nine-story Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co. building at Tenth street and Washington avenue, and the connecting annex at Eleventh and Locust streets, for two robbers who shortly after 6 p. m. shot Watchman Charles Graf when he surprised them on the ninth floor of the annex. At 10 p. m. a witness was found who saw the two men escape to the roof of the Kinloch Building before the search began.

Graf suffered only a scalp wound. As he stepped on to the ninth floor he heard sounds and saw a man lying on a packing case. The man dropped to the floor and started to run and another man joined him. Graf pulled his revolver and fired one shot.

After he was wounded, it took Graf 15 minutes to get to the first floor, where he called the police, and in a few minutes the task of searching the building was begun. In the aisle where the men were seen the police found a gunny-sack filled with safe-cracker's tools. It is thought that the men entered during the day and concealed themselves with the idea of finding a safe. They escaped by descending to the seventh floor, where windows open to the roof of the Kinloch Building.

TALK OF CLOSING WORK ON TUTANKHAMEN TOMB TILL 1925

Order for Installation of Tackle to Raise Lid of Sarcophagus Countermanded.

By the Associated Press.

LUXOR, Egypt, Feb. 9.—There is talk of closing this season's work on Tutankhamen's tomb at the end of this month, according to reports reaching here from ministerial circles in Cairo. Howard Carter returned to Luxor today bringing all of the gear necessary for raising the lid of the sarcophagus and the installation of this tackle was to have started this afternoon. The order was countermanded at the last moment, however, and the tomb remained closed.

If the Cairo reports of stopping work this month are correct, the unwrapping of Tutankhamen's mummy probably will be deferred until 1925, when it may be undertaken by the Egyptian authorities themselves.

An interesting discovery, which is greatly exercising archeologists, is the fact that the sarcophagus is placed in an opposite sense to the position of the outer shrines. On the other shrines the so-called "eye of Horus" which always indicates the position of the head of the mummy is on the eastern end of the sepulchral chamber while on the coffin it is placed at the western end. This may be another instance of the carelessness of the undertakers.

KLEPTOMANIA A FASHIONABLE EXCUSE, JUDGE FARIS SAYS

Jurist's Remark Occasioned by Plea For Youth He Sentences For Three Years For Theft.

Kleptomania is a fashionable excuse for criminal tendencies, in the opinion of Federal Judge Faris, who yesterday sentenced Ray Smith to three years in prison for taking a stolen motorcycle from St. Louis to East St. Louis.

Friends of Smith had urged the Judge to inquire into the prisoner's mental state before requiring him to make a plea.

"I've been informed that you are suffering from a mental disease called kleptomania," Judge Faris told Smith. "I am not a physician, but I have the right to express the opinion that there is no such disease. Kleptomania is a fashionable way of excusing larcenous behavior."

8 PERSONS ON MISSING BOAT

Hybrid Ice-Water Craft Left Island During Storm.

By the Associated Press.

LEAMINGTON, Ontario, Feb. 9.—Fearing for the lives of seven men and a woman who last Thursday set out for Pelee Island in a hybrid ice-water boat and have not been heard of since, authorities today began a search for them through three radio broadcasting stations on Point Pelee.

Heavy seas and moving ice have destroyed the telephone cables which were the only regular means of communication with the island.

Lake Erie was still being swept by the recent storm Thursday when the party of eight set forth for Pelee Island in a gasoline launch equipped with runners and air propeller, capable of traveling on either water or ice and piloted by Guy McCormick. All winter the hybrid craft had made regular trips carrying supplies and mail to the islanders. The island is 17 miles off shore.

BLACKMAIL QUERY PUT TO DENVER PUBLISHER IN A GRILLING ON OIL MONEY

WIFE OF ASA G. CANDLER ARRESTED AT 'LITTLE PARTY'

Taken With Two Men in Police Raid on Apartment—Quantity of Alleged Whisky Seized.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 9.—Mrs. Asa G. Candler Sr., wife of the millionaire "Coca Cola king" who last Tuesday won the jury's verdict in the $500,000 breach of promise suit instituted against him by Mrs. Onezima De Bouchel of New Orleans, this afternoon was arrested in an apartment house and charged with being an occupant of a "dive" along with W. J. Stoddard, head of a cleaning concern, and G. W. Keeling, president of a brick manufacturing company.

Acting on telephonic complaints which he says have been coming into police headquarters for several days, Police Chief James L. Beavers and Capt. A. J. Dolcombe went to an apartment at 48 Juniper street, on the fashionable North Side, and there, it is alleged, they found Mrs. Candler and her companions seated at a table on which stood a quart bottle almost emptied of whisky.

Mrs. Candler, according to the officers, assumed a defiant attitude when she was questioned concerning her presence in the apartment, but later said they were only "having a little party."

The three were taken to police headquarters in Chief Beavers' personal car and there were booked on charges of violating section 1768 of the City Ordinances, which is the general charge lodged against any one arrested in a place where liquor is being drunk.

Released on Bond.

Stoddard, who is president of the National Dry Cleaners' Association, posted bonds of $100 each for himself and two companions and their cases were set for next Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock in Recorder's court.

Mrs. Candler had left her car parked on Peach Tree street, in front of a North Side church, which is about two blocks from the apartment house where the raid was conducted, and according to the officers, Stoddard's car was parked on Third street, about a block away.

Following the brief words announcing the arrest of the three occupants of the room, Chief Beavers, it was said, addressing Mrs. Candler, declared: "You ought to be ashamed of this disgraceful situation. It is an outrage for you to bring this disgrace and humiliation to your husband.

"It brings shame and embarrassment to me to have to arrest the wife of my good friend under such circumstances as these."

In reply, Mrs. Candler is said to have retorted: "We are simply having a little party. There is no harm in that. Anyhow, there are other people in Atlanta besides the Candlers."

At police headquarters, Mrs. Candler was booked first. The record in each one of the cases was as follows:

"Mrs. Asa G. Candler, 34 years old, 1040 Ponce de Leon avenue (the Candler mansion)."

"W. J. Stoddard, 44 years old, Piedmont Drive."

"G. W. Keeling, 45 years old, 519 North Jackson street."

City Law Covers Charges.

The charges under which Mrs. Candler and her companions were docketed are covered in the section of the city code under which all arrests of "dive" keepers and inmates and proprietors of disorderly houses and those who live therein, or who frequent them, are booked.

After the bonds were posted, Chief Beavers took Mrs. Candler and Stoddard in his automobile and returned them to their automobiles.

Mrs. Candler, before her marriage last June to the millionaire capitalist, was Mrs. Mae Little Ragan, a public stenographer. Since her wedding, she had frequently been seen riding with her twin daughters by a former marriage in one of the Candler cars. During the trial of the breach of promise suit last week she did not appear in the courtroom.

No Statement From Attorney.

Friends of Stoddard stated that he and Mrs. Candler had been friends for some time prior to her marriage to Candler. Stoddard is one of the best known men in Atlanta and has achieved considerable success in raising blooded cattle.

Keeling referred reporters to W. D. Thomson, personal attorney for the Candler family.

"There will be no statement from any of the principals," stated Thomson. "It has only served to bring chagrin and embarrassment upon Mr. Candler."

DAUGHERTY NOT TO RESIGN BECAUSE OF OIL SCANDAL

Says He Will "Give Year's Notice" When He Intends to Give Up Cabinet Post.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Attorney-General Daugherty has no intention of quitting the Cabinet because of the cropping up of his name in the Teapot Dome expose. After seeing President Coolidge upon his return today from Florida, he denied reports that he intended to resign and added he will "give a year's notice" when he intends to surrender his commission.

The Attorney-General discussed the oil scandal situation with the President, but declined to say anything for publication. Attorneys Strawn and Pomerene, counsel for the Government, refused to discuss their plans prior to their confirmation by the Senate. Daugherty made known they were at liberty to call on the Justice Department for any data or reports on file there or for any Justice Department personnel, but Strawn intends to conduct the inquiry entirely independent from the department.

SINCLAIR INTERVIEWS STINNES

Oil Magnate Arrived in Cologne Yesterday—Will Return in Week.

By the Associated Press.

DUESSELDORF, Germany, Feb. 9.—Harry F. Sinclair, who arrived in Cologne from Brussels yesterday, had a long interview today with Hugo Stinnes. Sinclair will sail for New York on Feb. 12.

BONFILS ASKED WHETHER SINCLAIR BOUGHT SILENCE OF HIS PAPER

Senator Lenroot Dramatically Questions Witness and Goes Into His Career at Kansas City.

TROUBLE OVER LOTTERY ADMITTED

Owner of Denver Post Denies He Ceased Attacks Because of Getting Part of $250,000 for Claims.

BY CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, chairman of the Senate Oil Investigating Committee, which is following the sordid trail left by the Naval Reserve leasing transactions, this afternoon, put Frederick G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post, through as merciless a cross-examination as ever has been heard in a congressional committee room.

Bonfils had gone over again the details of the deal by which he and his partner, H. H. Tammen, shared in the settlement under which Harry F. Sinclair took over the claims of Leo Stack in the Teapot Dome reserve.

Sinclair paid, according to Bonfils' testimony yesterday, $250,000 in cash, in addition to 320 acres of the reserve, which he was to take back in 15 months at $750,000 or $1,000,000.

Lenroot's Cross-Examination.

The witness was about to leave the stand unscathed when Lenroot told him to remain.

Shooting questions with the rapidity of a machine gun, Lenroot developed a series of replies from the witness which led the examiner to thunder:

"You got five times as much as you said would have been proper under your contract."

He referred to the Stack contract with the Pioneer Oil Co—the contract which formed the basis of the claim against Sinclair, after the latter had obtained the Teapot Dome concession from Secretary Fall.

The purpose of the examination, as quickly become evident to the crowd in the committee room, was to bring out, if possible, that what Sinclair really bought when he settled with Stack and Bonfils was the influence of the Denver Post, which had been branding the Teapot Dome lease as a corrupt piece of business.

"What was the consideration?" demanded Lenroot. "Why were you paid $250,000 and 320 acres of land?"

Bonfils replied the payment was made because Sinclair owed it.

Asks If Silence Was Bought.

Lenroot, casting aside reserve, went at the witness with pitiless, searching questions. He asked whether the money was not paid to buy the silence of the Denver Post.

Bonfils, who never lost his nerve under the grilling, declared that his paper's attacks on the Teapot Dome lease had not ceased, and never would cease.

"Do you mean," said Lenroot, "that there was no change in the attitude of your paper from the beginning?"

"I do," replied Bonfils. "We fought the lease more than any other paper in the United States. There was not one change in the editorial policy of the Denver Post."

Lenroot asked him whether there did not appear in the Denver Post for Nov. 4, 1922, a one-column box announcing an article on Sinclair in The Great Divide, a weekly po-

SENATE TO VOTE TOMORROW ON DENBY OUSTER RESOLUTION

Skids Apparently Nicely Greased for the Secretary of the Navy as Result of Disclosures in Investigation of Oil Lease Scandals.

PROGRESSIVES LINED UP WITH DEMOCRATS

Majority Opinion Seems to Be That He Is Unfit to Handle the Oil Reserves When They Are Returned to That Department.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—All indications tonight point to the passage by the Senate Monday of the Robinson resolution expressing the sense of the Senate that, in view of the disclosures in the oil scandal, the President should immediately request the resignation of Secretary of the Navy Denby.

Apparently, the Democrats and a majority of the Progressives are lined up squarely behind the resolution introduced by the Democratic floor leader and the Senate skids are nicely greased for the naval secretary.

Senators of all parties concede that the Senate cannot compel President Coolidge to dismiss Denby. At the same time the Democrats and most of the Progressives insist that Denby was guilty of gross neglect, if nothing worse, and is not a fit man to have at the head of the Navy Department when the naval oil reserves are restored to its jurisdiction.

Stand of Senator Walsh.

This view was clearly stated today by Senator Walsh, (Democrat, Massachusetts) who concluded a brief speech with the declaration:

'Mr. President, it is no time for half-splitting, for technicalities, for the obstructionist methods of the attorney with a poor case. We are not responsible for the conduct of the President. Let us fix the blame, make our recommendations in no uncertain manner, and, having exhausted our power and influence, let the whole record go to the country."

A final vote on the Robinson resolution will come late Monday, the Senate this afternoon having agreed that all debate shall end at 5 o'clock on Feb. 11, at which time voting will begin on the pending amendment, to be followed by a final vote on the resolution.

Warning of La Follette.

The one dramatic incident in the debate today came when Senator La Follette, announcing that he would not object to the unanimous consent agreement for a vote Monday, took occasion to warn the presiding officer against preparing a list of Senators to be recognized in the closing hours of debate. La Follette declared it had become almost the universal practice under unanimous consent agreements for the occupant of the chair to prepare such a list and recognize only those Senators whose names appeared on it. He characterized this as "abominable," and declared the time had come to stop it.

Senator Jones (Republican, Washington) presented a substitute for the Robinson resolution, reading as follows:

"Resolved, that, in view of the disclosures made and the facts ascertained by the committee on public lands and surveys of the Senate in connection with the oil lease investigation now in progress, it is the sense of the Senate that the public interest would be served by the resignation of Edwin Denby, Secretary of the Navy."

Adoption of this substitute would not place on the shoulders of President Coolidge full responsibility for the retention of Secretary Denby in the Cabinet. The expectation is, however, that the substitute will be voted down, together with an amendment proposed by Senator Howell (Rep., Neb.), intended to soften the verdict of the Senate to the extent of requesting the President to demand Denby's resignation "if guilty of malfeasance or misfeasance in office."

Debate today was free from the spectacular. Senator Shortridge (Rep., Cal.), consumed the major part of the time, speaking about three hours. The California Senator stated the grounds for his opposition to the Robinson resolution, and in reply to a question by Senator Harrison (Dem., Miss.), declared he would not vote for the Jones substitute. His long speech was a rambling affair, winding up with praise for the virtues and accomplishments of the Republican party and a declaration that "we will meet you at the polls in November."

Blackmail Query Put to Bonfils by Senator

per, put out by Bonfils and Tammen.

(This article was not introduced in evidence today. It is said to have been an article highly eulogistic of the oil magnate.)

Bonfils replied that this article was a "pen picture" of Sinclair, not an editorial.

Lenroot said he wanted the witness to file that article with the committee, and Bonfils promised to do so.

How Committee Got Data.

Attention was called by Lenroot to an editorial which had appeared in the Denver Post, at the beginning of that paper's attack on the lease, describing the deal as a corrupt and fraudulent arrangement. He got the witness to admit that he still held that view.

"Then," said Lenroot, "why did you not send your information to the committee?"

Bonfils replied that he had given the committee everything that his paper had dug up.

"Yes," shot back Lenroot. "We got in on a subpena sent to your reporter."

He referred to the original Post attack on the lease, a copy of which was sent by the Post to every Senator, the members of the Cabinet and the President. Then he added, meaningly:

"I got nothing from you, sir, after you made your deal with Sinclair."

Pointing out that the contract between Bonfils and Tammen, on the one hand, and with Stack, on the other, under which the newspaper owners got a half interest in Stack's claims, was signed April 14, 1922, Lenroot said that on April 15—the following day—the Denver Post editorially condemned the Teapot Dome lease, and later printed an article charging that the transaction reeked with "graft to a crowd of exploiters."

Lenroot's manner and questions insinuated that in those articles the witness had been paving the way for the demand on Sinclair.

Dramatic Denunciation.

He reached a high point of his denunciation when, standing over the witness, he flung at him the direct accusation:

"And yet so long as you got your piece of it—$1,000,000—you were willing to stand on that rotten transaction."

His tones thundered through the committee room. There has not been such a dramatic moment in all this hearing, filled though it has been with drama.

"Isn't it a fact," Lenroot continued, "that the whole deal between you and Sinclair was for the purchase of your silence?"

Bonfils, hardly ruffled by the attack, declared the charge was false.

Then Lenroot went back into Bonfil's career. Bonfils said that he was born in Missouri, and for years was in business in that state. Asked what business, he replied "Real estate." He could not recall that he had ever been in any other business there, before going to Denver, and he could not recall that he had had any difficulties with the authorities.

Trouble Over Lottery.

"Did you ever get into trouble with the authorities when you were in Kansas City?" demanded the Senator. "No," replied Bonfils.

"Would you remember if you did?" "I imagine so."

Lenroot shook in the face of the witness telegrams telling of a prosecution of Bonfils on a charge of operating a lottery.

"Oh, that," broke in Bonfils before Lenroot could describe it. "I remember that. But that was in Kansas City, Kan. I thought you meant Kansas City, Mo." Laughter swept over the room.

With ease, Bonfils launched serenely into a long story of how an old enemy had pursued him—had tried to make trouble while Bonfils was a member of the party with the late President Harding on the Alaskan trip. A smile played over his face at times as he explained how his paper had grown, how vast a circulation it had. Line after line went into the official record glorifying this newspaper. Attempts to bring Bonfils back to more relevant matters gave way before his implorations to be allowed to finish his statement.

And, suddenly, he pointed at Lenroot and accused the Senator of being animated by this alleged defamer.

"It makes no difference one way or the other," observed Lenroot. "But for the purpose of accuracy I will say I am not."

What Committee Wanted.

Turning on him again, Lenroot said the committee was deeply interested to find out whether the money paid by Sinclair represented an honest compromise of an honest debt, or was a deal to silence the attacks of the Post.

Reading the captions of Post stories that appeared after the deal with Sinclair, Lenroot said he could find nothing in them to indicate that the fight was kept up. Bonfils replied that the captions had been gone over hastily and wired to him last night from the Denver Post. He said that he would supply the committee with the complete papers, from which it would be fairer to draw inferences than from the headlines only.

The inquisitors proceeded slowly to build up their case insofar as Bonfils is concerned. If they achieve their ends they will charge that this deal between the Denver publisher and Sinclair evidences the true nature of the Teapot oil lease.

Yesterday Bonfils went over the sequence of events surrounding his agreement with John Leo Stack, an oil man, to aid Stack in recovering his interest in a contract he had made with the Midwest and other oil interests connected with Standard Oil. Today Senator Walsh (Dem.), Montana, began by adding the transcript of a suit filed by Stack against the Midwest Oil Co., the Standard of Indiana, the Pioneer Oil and Refining Co., the Mammoth Oil Co. (Sinclair's company formed to operate the Teapot Dome lease), Henry M. Blackmer, L. L. Aitken and Sinclair. This suit alleged conspiracy to deprive Stack of his rights, but, so far as the committee could learn, it has never been filed.

Contract With Doheny.

Senator Walsh pointed out that Stack's original contract was with Edward L. Doheny and was taken over by the Pioneer. It provided merely that Stack should try to obtain leases in Teapot Dome, and if he succeeded he was to have a 5 per cent interest.

"The suit," Walsh went on, "alleged that the Pioneer entered into a conspiracy with Sinclair by which it withdrew practically of its applications for leases, surrendered all of its rights to Sinclair and allowed Sinclair to get the leases, thereby defeating the claim of Stack to a 5 per cent interest."

"I think that is a fair statement,' said Bonfils. Then he added that Stack's employers had "brought in three producing wells before Teapot Dome was constituted as naval reserve and withdrawn from any exploitation."

"Have any charges of blackmail been made against you?" asked Senator Dill (Dem.), Washington, evenly, near the close of the examination.

"Well,' said Bonfils, calm and possessed, 'if so, I haven't seen it."

Senator Walsh said the records of the Interior Department showed that Secretary Fall was kept fully advised as to the publications in the Post regarding the lease. The first, he added, was under date of April 5, 1922, two days before the lease was signed.

The clippings from the Post were sent to Fall by N. D. McEnery, a Land Office official at Denver, according to the record submitted.

After the examination of Bonfils had been concluded, he was given leave to proceed to Charleston, S. C., to board the naval transport Henderson, for a cruise to Panama to witness the naval maneuvers there at the invitation of Secretary Denby.

Rights Had Been Denied.

"The testimony before the committee," said Walsh, "is that no producing wells were drilled upon this ground until 1914, when three wells were drilled in the shallow Shannon sands; that the Pioneer had prosecuted applications before the Department of Interior for leases upon these so-called producing wells, and that the applications had been denied for the reason that they were not producing wells, as found by the Secretary; that thereafter an application for a rehearing was made and that was denied.

"So that every right which the Pioneer had or could assert to these claims had already been denied."

Since this proved the invalidity of the claims—even a last hope appeal for presidential intervention had been abandoned—Walsh asked if Sinclair had been aware of it when he paid out the $250,000 cash and promised from $750,000 to $1,000,000 more to buy the 'rights' of Stack and Bonfils.

Bonfils could not remember. Shown that Stack's suit alleged Sinclair was fully informed and admitted that Stack had been led "to wholly abandon all applications for leases and to surrender and abandon all locations," Bonfils answered that he was not informed about the suit.

"The only information I can give you on that," he said, "is the conversation I had with Mr. Stack when he came out to see if I would join him in this matter. It was very clearly in his mind there was a conspiracy and an agreement between Doheny, Sinclair and the Standard companies—I mean by that the Midwest and those allied companies—to let Sinclair have the Teapot Dome and let Doheny have the California fields, and that they did go in together and the leases were granted."

Walsh asked what Sinclair had paid the Standard to "get out of the way for Sinclair under this conspiracy."

"This Pioneer company got a million," said the witness. Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, testified early in the investigation that this money had to be spent to remove complicating "claims" of interests in the Teapot region.

But Bonfils could not offer any evidence of the alleged conspiracy other than to say "they were friendly to Sinclair" and "they treated Mr. Stack more as an office boy than anything else."

Bonfils said when he became interested and asked Sinclair to settle with Stack for Stack's alleged claim, Sinclair replied that it was up to the Pioneer company to make good, as Stack's contract was with them, not with the Sinclairs.

Attacks in the Newspaper.

Walsh suddenly shifted his line of questioning to put into the record copies of published attacks appearing in Bonfil's newspaper prior to the time he got the settlement from Sinclair. Bonfils stoutly insisted he had not stopped the attacks then. He presented a long telegram quoting headlines on the subject which had been sent him late last night.

But when Lenroot could find no signs in this telegram of newspaper attack subsequent to the Sinclair arrangement, Bonfils objected that, of course, the telegram was hastily assembled, the headlines would scarcely be conclusive of what the articles said, and he promised to send the committee all the copies of his paper during the time embraced.

Then Walsh brought out that Bonfils printed on April 5, 1922, an article saying Fall had given the Teapot Dome lease to Sinclair—although the lease was not signed until two days later.

"How did you secure this information so far in advance?" asked Walsh, pointing out that the public was kept in ignorance of it by Fall for several weeks.

Bonfils could not recall, but thought "some oil men' had given his paper the information.

Walsh read into the record a statement issued by the Interior Department on April 7, flatly saying "no definite contracts have been made" and merely mentioning that "serious consideration" was being given to "a permanent policy" about the handling of the naval reserves.

Walsh also produced telegrams sent by M. D. McEnirey, a Department of Interior agent, to Fall, saying: "Think some of the lawyers in Denver who are retained by some of those oil companies are giving the financial reporter this dope."

Chairman Lenroot then began his examination of the witness.

Vague Concerning Claims.

Concerning Stack's alleged claims, Bonfils was vague. First Bonfils said Stack had not discussed the contract which he had with the Pioneer with him at all, and when Lenroot showed his amazement Bonfils said he had misunderstood his question. "I thought you said adjust it, not discuss it," he said. He said he did not remember reading the contract.

"Is it a matter of common practice," retorted Lenroot, "for you to enter into an agreement whereby you make a half-million dollars without reading the contract that is the basis of it?"

"I have a good many interests," replied Bonfils, smiling.

He did not know whether the suit charging conspiracy was ever filed or complaints served, but said they must have been or else they would not have been drawn up.

"They might have been drawn up to show to them," shouted Lenroot, with his first outburst of vehemence, "and not for the purpose of serving on them."

"Well, I do not know about that," said Bonfils softly.

When he insisted lawyers had said the Stack claim was good and that Thomas Dines, president of the Midwest Oil, said so, Lenroot asked why offers were not made to settle.

"They were passing this backward and forward, and Mr. Sinclair had gotten the lease," said Bonfils.

"But Mr. Sinclair," said Lenroot, "had nothing whatever to do with the contract, did he?"

"That is true," conceded Bonfils, "but he was the beneficiary of this property, which he finally got."

Zevely Went to See Him.

He told how Col. J. W. Zevely, Sinclair's lawyer, came to see him.

"I went out to see him at the Midwest offices," said the witness. "He said they recognized that this contract was entered into in good faith and something ought to be done about it."

"How did they figure Sinclair's liability on this contract?" asked Lenroot. "Well, I am not a lawyer, and I do not know, but I knew somebody ought to pay on that contract."

"Why?" "Well, in the first place, he was the beneficiary. The property had gone from them to him. I meant they had released it. They got their $1,000,000 out of it, the Midwest crowd did. They did not want to settle this with Stack, and some one ought to settle. That's the only theory I had."

"You did not think there was any legal liability?" "I thought there was some."

"On what ground?" "Well, I can't answer that. I thought in a general way—the property having gone from the Midwest crowd, who made this contract with Stack—and I did not know whether it having been transferred that he might not have some rights under the assignment to the Midwest. But I was not a lawyer, and I don't know about these things."

Bonfils hesitated to say whether he thought Sinclair was a party to the alleged conspiracy, and he offered no further explanation of why Sinclair should pay out the $250,000 cash and promise the additional $1,000,000. He was shown that Stack's interest at best under the contract's terms would have been but $50,000—5 per cent of what the Midwest got from Sinclair.

"You got from Sinclair," declared Lenroot, "five times as much as you have stated would have been entirely proper under your contract so far as your contract liability was concerned."

Bonfils made no direct answer. Lenroot asked more about what reason Bonfils gave Zeverly why Sinclair should pay. "I do not remember," said the witness.

"On that very important point you do not know what was said?" demanded Lenroot. Again Bonfils entered upon a long explanation telling how he went to New York and saw Sinclair. He was accompanied, he said, by his counsel.

"On what ground did he claim that Sinclair should pay?" persisted Lenroot. "I can't remember," said Bonfils, nervously. "I can't remember the details of a conversation two years ago."

Sinclair's Rejection of Claim.

'You don't remember a detail of that kind?" "No, I do not. I know he said he had come to see if we could adjust this little difference between our people, or our crowd and his crowd. And Sinclair said—I remember this very distinctly because it was very shocking to me—'I think your claim is against the Midwest company and not me.' "

Whereupon, according to Bonfils, he returned to Denver. Several times he met the question of why Sinclair should have paid by the always vaguely stated remark that Midwest and Sinclair were "very closely mixed up."

Suddenly Lenroot jumped to his feet as the witness rambled on in generalities.

"Has it occured to you," shouted the chairman, "that if this lease that Mr. Sinclair had secured was a straight, a legitimate transaction, he would not be interested in you at all?" Lenroot again demanded to know what argument was used, legal or otherwise, to force Sinclair to pay over the $250,000 plus. Always Bonfils pleaded that he could not remember the conversations.

"Was the matter of your attacks upon Sinclair discussed?" Lenroot shot at him. "It was not," said Bonfils, leaning forward.

"Was the question of your ceasing attacks upon him discussed?" "I would like to know," Bonfils flared, his face red and jaw outthrust, "what is the inspiration of these questions. Did they originate here or in Colorado?"

Denies Attacks Ceased.

"I am asking these questions," Lenroot retorted, "and I am asking them for the purpose of getting a response. You will answer, please."

"They are most extraordinary questions," Bonfils asserted, "they did not cease." He then exclaimed, his voice rising, "They have not ceased. They shall never cease."

Lenroot asked why there were no articles in the Denver Post "during the entire year 1922 and most of the year 1923," following the payment by Sinclair.

"Do you mean to testify," continued Lenroot, "that there was no change in the attitude of your newspaper?" "I do." Bonfils exploded. "I do!"

With great vehemence he insisted his paper had kept up the attacks on Sinclair "more than any other newspaper in the United States," and took all the credit for precipitating the whole oil investigation. Senator Kendrick (D., Wyo.), objected that he personally did not act from such inspiration.

"What steps did you take to help him enforce his contract?" asked Lenroot. "I furnished the money and the lawyer, and had the complaint drawn up."

Lenroot went over the story of how Bonfils sent a reporter to New Mexico, who returned with a story so shocking that Bonfils said he dared not print it for fear of libel.

"Did you believe Mr. Fall could have been corrupted in the making of the Teapot Dome lease and Sinclair not?" Lenroot roared.

Bonfils admitted he thought the entire transaction corrupt, and Lenroot asked why Bonfilts then failed to send the reporter's "shocking" evidence to the investigating committee if it could not be printed. Bonfils demurred he had sent other material earlier.

He could not recall any editorials attacking Sinclair after the bargain was made, but explained he could not keep in touch with "all the details." Lenroot quoted form editorials before the Sinclair settlement, which pronounced the Teapot least "graft," and the witness slowly conceded that he took that view of it then and now.

"And yet," cried Lenroot, "so long as you got your piece out of it, a million dollars, you are willing to become a party to it and stand upon this rotten lease and contract?"

"That has nothing to do with it at all," insisted Bonfils.

Lenroot then charged that the deal with Sinclair had no basis in any alleged legal rights of Stack—they having expired nine months before, even if they ever were of value according to the evidence.

"This whole deal," Lenroot flung, "was for the purpose of Sinclair purchasing your silence in your newspaper——"

"Absolutely false," Bonfils cut in.

Digs Into His Past.

Here it was that Lenroot dug into the publisher's past, getting the witness to admit: "Well, I have had a pretty active life and have had some little difficulties."

Lenroot was asked about a time when Bonfils testified at the trial of Thomas O'Donnell of Denver.

"I think you are speaking for him now," said Bonfils heatedly. "He is the one," continued the witness, "who is the inspiration of this attack on me. I will tell you about Tom O'Donnell."

"No, you will not," said Lenroot, "not until you answer this."

He produced evidence of Bonfils' having been in the lottery business in Kansas City, Kan., whereupon the witness dexterously explained how he had misunderstood before, thinking Lenroot's question about difficulties applied to Kansas City, Mo.

"Yes," said Bonfils, "I was in the lottery business in Kansas City, Kan. I was there two years. That's all there is to it. There was no law against it. One could be in the lottery business as legally as in banking."

Next Lenroot read Bonfils' trial testimony, when he could not recall an alleged indictment against Bonfils, "alias L. E. Wynn," to which a plea of guilty was entered.

"Would that be your answer now?" Lenroot asked. "I wouldn't say that," came slowly from Bonfils. "I will say this much. That has been 30 odd years ago when I was a boy. There was a charge—I think it was a charge nuisance, I don't know the legal word—of maintaining a nuisance, and that was the only charge that would apply to a lottery."

Lenroot reminded him that he had just said he would have remembered if he had "been in trouble with the authorities," and had said he had not been.

"I could hardly be expected to go back that far," he said hotly. "I should think you'd feel very proud bringing it out."

Why Matter Was Gone Into.

"There is just one reason," Lenroot answered, measuring his word, "and that is, this committee is very much interested in ascertaining whether this deal that you made with Sinclair was an honest compromise of an honest debt or whether it was a deal between you and Sinclair to purchase the silence of the Denver Post."

Bonfils plucked at his mustache, gazed at the floor, and began the narration of a long story about Tom O'Donnell. "I am proud to have earned the hatred of such a character," he said. O'Donnell had tried to assassinate him, he declared. "I could have killed him with his own pistol," he said with a wave of the hand. "But I turned him over to an officer."

"And O'Donnell was tried for that assault and promptly acquitted?" interjected Lenroot.

"Not completely," went on Bonfils calmly, "though he was acquitted. I will add that this man O'Donnell has been following these same processes for years.

"I can say," he put his thumbs in his vest and glanced at the spectators, "that when I was on the presidential trip with President Harding this last summer up in the Northwest," and he told of a notice sent to members of the party about the lottery matter.

Asks About Shooting.

Lenroot asked about a shooting affair in which both Bonfils and his partner, H. H. Tammen, who also shared in the Sinclair agreement, were hit, and asked why Bonfils never prosecuted the offender. Thereupon came another long story—it sounded like a chapter from a dime novel—and when Lenroot tried to break it off, Senator Adams of Colorado remarked, "This is one of the famous stories of Colorado."

It was about a "man by the name of Packer." "The ground was covered with snow" and Packer and his companions were lost in "the Crow's Nest." "They were getting weaker and weaker." Packer went up on a hill to look for aid and when he came back somebody had killed all his companions. He survived the winter by feeding on "these dead men," Bonfils related, "but at early signs of spring he came out and staggering down mountain side——"

Slowly Bonfils wound up with how Packer was sent to Sing Sing as murderer and was financed by a lawyer, a shark," out of his own money. Bonfils then gave Civil War history of this man. It eventually came out that, according to Bonfils, one of those who shared the pension spoils sending Bonfils' charges of shooting.

"But," said Lenroot, "was there ever any trial for bribery relative to Tammen?"

"No, sir," said Bonfils, "but there was a charge against Tammen for embracery. I think it was. It wasn't bribery."

And once more the witness went into a long statement, this time telling his paper and boasting of its circulation.

After Bonfils' speech on the virtues of his paper, in which he boasted the number of the readers of the Post, Lenroot remarked:

"And I suppose Mr. Sinclair knew all that. Maybe you can tell us now why he gave you a million dollars?" "You never heard of him giving anybody anything for nothing, did you?" asked Bonfils.

"In your case, sir, I am not to believed he was getting full value for his money," was the reply. "We all know that your paper consistantly attacked the Teapot Dome lease before your deal but we have no evidence that it ever said a word in criticism afterward."

"Well, you will. The papers show it when we get them."

The committee cleared the way to hear William G. McAdoo on Monday with reference to his professional services with the Doheny oil companies. McAdoo, who is a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, will appear in his own request.

Announcement was made to the committee by Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, that George Otis, chairman of the committee on public information during the war, had sent him a request by telegraph for a hearing. It was agreed, however, that a number of other witnesses now in Washington would be examined first. Creel's request grew out of testimony by E. L. Doheny that he had advanced $100,000 to Creel, who was to undertake to prevent the leasing of the oil reserves to Republicans after the Democratic administration ended.

"THE PAPER WITH A HEART AND SOUL," SLOGAN OF THE DENVER POST

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Colo., Feb. 9.

THE Denver Post, housed in a white-fronted building on Champa street, in the heart of the business district, has the following slogan, bestowed upon it by Tammen and Bonfils:

"The Paper With a Heart and Soul."

Across the front of the building is this inscription:

"O Justice, When Expelled From Other Habitations, Make This Thy Dwelling Place."

Bonfils, after years of hard fighting to achieve it, is definitely "in" Denver society, but Tammen, who was a Kansas City bartender, doesn't bother about such things. Individually neither Bonfils nor Tammen makes a great impression but united it seems as if nothing can stop them.

Makes Autos Go 40 Miles On a Gallon of Gasoline

The Western Specialty Co. of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., announces the perfection of an amazing new device called the "Wesco," which is enabling car owners all over the country to more than double their mileage from each gallon of gasoline and, at the same time, remove every particle of carbon from their motors. With this device attached, automobiles have made over 40 miles on a gallon of gasoline, increased their power and pep tremendously, and eliminated all their spark plug trouble.

A remarkable feature of this inexpensive little device is that it is entirely automatic and self-regulating and can be easily attached by anyone in a few minutes without tapping or drilling.

This company wants agents everywhere to handle the business which is bound to spring up wherever this amazing little device is shown, and are so confident that any auto owner will be more than delighted with it, that they are making an introductory offer to send a Wesco to one person in each locality. This startling introductory offer is made because the device has been given rigid tests under all sorts of conditions by enthusiastic auto owners everywhere.

You are not asked to send any money. Simply your name and address and they will send you the sample immediately with the understanding that it does not cost you a cent if it is not entirely satisfactory. Merely send your name and address and when the regular $3.00 Wesco arrives, deposit only $1.00, plus a few cents postage, with the mailman. This will be payment in full and is a special introductory offer good only for a few days.

Send just your name and address for your Wesco today. Use it 30 days. If you are not satisfied that it is the most remarkable money-saver you ever saw, return it and your money will be refunded. Write today to the Western Specialty Company, 144 Lacotah Bldg., Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and get more mileage at less cost from each gallon of gasoline you use.

TO NEW EAST AND WEST TRAFFIC ROUTES PROPOSED

E. Smith Submits Plans for Thoroughfares to Relieve Congestion in Central Business Area.

SEVERAL VIADUCTS WOULD BE REQUIRED

Streets Selected Would Be Widened and Connected; Wash and Clark Among Those Suggested.

Two new east and west traffic ways, one north and one south of the central business district, have been planned by C. E. Smith, consulting engineer, who has submitted his plans to Director Hooks of the Department of Public Utilities.

The new traffic routes which Smith proposes to create, for the relief of more central streets, would be made by widening and connecting the streets selected, and by building several viaducts above the north and south cross streets. Construction of the Clark avenue viaduct over the Union Station train sheds, required in an ordinance passed 32 years ago, is also part of the plan.

The routes of the proposed traffic ways are:

Northern: Wash street, from North street to Easton avenue; Franklin avenue, from Easton to Grand boulevard; Enright avenue, Grand to city limits; these to be widened and connected to form a continuous route.

Southern: Clark avenue, from Seventh street to Compton avenue, and extended to Grand boulevard; thence, Forest Park boulevard west to the park, and the park driveways; plan includes widening and connections where necessary, with viaducts over chief cross streets and over Union Station train tracks.

Viaducts to Relieve Congestion.

"It is practically certain," Engineer Smith's report says, "that within a few years numerous gaps will be built along the north and south edges of the downtown congested district to solve the parking problem. The proposed driveways will afford expedited routes in connection with such gaps without getting automobiles into the business district at all.

"As time goes on, Chouteau avenue will develop more and more as the Municipal Bridge approach. Its streets north of Union Station will continue to become more and more congested. The south half way lying between will remain both conditions. With the development of the Plaza, and the construction of the Auditorium, Kiel Coliseum and other buildings there, these traffic ways will be needed more and more.

"The recent improvements of Jefferson avenue and Twelfth street have helped considerably, but the additional facilities offered by them will probably not keep up with the growth of traffic.

"The widening of Market street will expedite the movement of traffic on that street except in the vicinity of Union Station, where the congestion is already so great that it will be difficult to see how any more traffic that might come from a widened Market street can get through that point. The south half way suggested in this report will offer a bypass for that congestion.

"To relieve this situation, the plan proposes, in connection with the north-south traffic way, the elimination of the use of Market street by trains, by providing taxicab tracks at the Twentieth street end, with taxicab routes over the new traffic way connected by an incline to the west of the station."

To Obviate Grade Separations.

The proposed new traffic ways, Engineer Smith says, will make it unnecessary to carry out grade separations at crossings of the streets are centrally located. Such separations would be very costly, because of the inadequate width of most of the streets, and the heavy damages to be paid. It would be cheaper, he says, to construct the new traffic ways with separated crossings.

The plan for the southern traffic way calls for elevated structures on Eighteenth street, extending over the station yards, over Jefferson avenue and Compton avenue, over Grand boulevard and over intervening avenues.

Acceptable overhead structures could be built, Smith says, so erected as to improve rather than injure the neighborhoods. Except on Grand, overhead structures would be preferable to depressed ways, as the latter might be in the way of future subways. At Grand, the elevation is such that depression would not apply.

"The intersecting streets not separated should be controlled by traffic lights," Smith states. "At points where there are street car tracks, east and west traffic should yield immediately when street cars are ready to cross, but at other times should be given long green lights so as to get the maximum capacity out of the traffic ways."

Complete Removal of Tracks.

Interference with street car traffic would be decreased by carrying out the plan, Smith says, because

And once more the witness went into a long statement, this time retelling his paper and boasting of its circulation.

After Bonfils' speech on the virtues of his paper, in which he gave the number of the readers of the Post, Lenroot remarked:

"And I suppose Mr. Sinclair knew all that. Maybe you will tell us now why he gave you a million dollars?" "You never heard of him giving anybody anything for nothing, did you?" asked Bonfils.

"Well, you will. The papers will show it when we get them."

The committee cleared the way to hear William G. McAdoo on Monday with reference to his professional services with the Doheny oil companies. McAdoo, who is a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, will appear at his own request.

Announcement was made to the committee by Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, that George Creel, chairman of the committee on public information during the war, had sent him a request by telegraph for a hearing. It was agreed, however, that a number of other witnesses now in Washington would be examined first. Creel's request grows out of testimony by E. L. Doheny that he had advanced $5000 to Creel, who was to undertake to prevent the leasing of the oil reserves to Republicans after the Democratic administration ended.

Boy Found Frozen to Death.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARSONS, Kan., Feb. 9.—Eugene Cook, 16-year-old high school boy, was found today frozen to death in a snow drift on a county road eight miles north of this city. The last heard of Cook was late Monday, when he started to walk the eight miles to his home in the razing storm.

O NEW EAST D WEST TRAFFIC OUTES PROPOSED

E. Smith Submits Plans for Thoroughfares to Relieve Congestion in Central Business Area.

VIADUCTS WOULD BE REQUIRED

reets Selected Would Be Widened and Connected; Wash and Clark Among Those Suggested.

Two new east and west traffic ways, one north and one south of the central business district, have been planned by C. E. Smith, consulting engineer, who has submitted his plans to Director Hooks of the Department of Public Utilities.

The new traffic routes which Smith proposes to create, for the relief of more central streets, would be made by widening and connecting up the streets selected, and by building several viaducts above the north and south cross streets. Construction of the Clark avenue viaduct over the Union Station train sheds, required in an ordinance passed 13 years ago, is also part of the plan.

The routes of the proposed traffic ways are:

Northern: Wash street, from Fourth street to Easton avenue; Franklin avenue, from Easton to Grand boulevard; Enright avenue, from Grand to city limits; these to be widened and connected to form a continuous route.

Southern: Clark avenue, from Seventh street to Compton avenue, and extended to Grand boulevard; thence, Forest Park boulevard west to the park, and the park driveways; plan includes widening and connections where necessary, with viaducts over chief cross streets and over Union Station train tracks.

Garages to Relieve Congestion.

"It is practically certain," Engineer Smith says, "that within a few years numerous garages will be built along the north and south edges of the downtown congested district to solve the parking problem. The proposed traffic ways will afford expedited service in connection with such garages without getting automobiles into the business district at all.

"As time goes on, Chouteau avenue will develop more and more into a Municipal Bridge approach, and streets north of Union Station will continue to become more and more congested. The south traffic way lying between will relieve both conditions. With the development of the Plaza, and the construction of the Auditorium, Municipal House and other buildings south, these traffic ways will be used more and more.

"The recent improvements of Chouteau avenue and Twelfth street have helped considerably, but the additional facilities offered above will probably not keep up with the growth of traffic.

"The widening of Market street will expedite the movement of traffic on that street except in the vicinity of Union Station, where the situation is already so great that it is difficult to see how any more relief that might come from a widened Market street can get through that point. The south traffic way suggested in this report would offer a bypass for that congestion.

"To relieve this situation, the engineer proposes, in connection with the south traffic way, the elimination of the use of Market street by taxicabs, by providing taxicab stands at the Twentieth street end, and taxicab routes over the new traffic way connected by an incline to the west of the station."

Will Obviate Grade Separations.

The proposed new traffic ways, Engineer Smith says, will make it unnecessary to carry out grade separations at crossings of the streets are centrally located. Such separations would be very costly, because of the inadequate width of most of the streets, and the heavy damages to be paid. It would be cheaper, he says, to construct the new traffic ways with separated crossings.

The plan for the southern traffic way calls for elevated structures at Eighteenth street, extending over the station yards, over Jefferson avenue and Compton avenue, to Grand boulevard and over Kingshighway avenue.

"The overhead structures would be built, Smith says, so ornamental as to improve rather than injure the neighborhoods. Except for Grand, overhead structures would be preferable to depressed ways, as the latter might be in the way of future subways. At Grand, the elevation is such that depression would not apply.

"The intersecting streets not separated should be controlled by traffic lights," Smith states. "At points where there are street car tracks, east and west traffic should yield immediately when cars are ready to cross, but street car times should be given long enough so as to get the maximum capacity out of the trafficways."

Extensive Removal of Tracks.

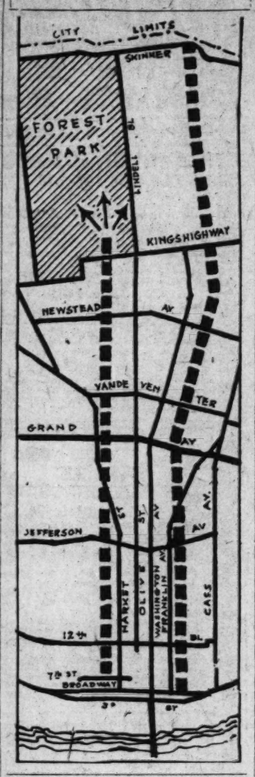
The interference with street car traffic would be decreased by carrying out the plan, Smith says he believes the United Railways Co. would be willing to remove its tracks from the streets forming the proposed trafficways, other streets to be provided for their use.

It is proposed to remove the street car tracks from Clark avenue, making it an 80-foot roadway not requiring further widening east of the station. West of the station, it would be widened to 125 feet and extended to the connection with Forest Park boulevard, which is 150 feet wide.

Smith cites the clause of the Union Station ordinance, requiring the Terminal Railroad Association to pay $150,000 toward the cost of the Clark avenue viaduct. This payment has not been made, and the matter was in controversy between the city and the Terminal as far back as Mayor Ziegenhein's administration. Smith believes such a viaduct would fit in with the present plans for removal of the station train shed, and construction of modern umbrella coverings over pairs of tracks.

The plans for the northern trafficway have not been worked out in such detail as those for the southern one.

ROUTES PROPOSED FOR TWO NEW TRAFFICWAYS



PERSONS who have changed addresses since the last registration and wish to vote at the election on proposed changes in the State Constitution, Feb. 26, can have the necessary transfers on the registration books made by applying at the offices of the Board of Election Commissioners in the City Hall.

After Feb. 16 no further transfers will be recorded and those who have moved and have not been transferred cannot vote.

LAWSON AND KING MURDERS LINKED BY "FOLLIES" GIRL

close friend of the Lawson girl, reporters were unable to find him today. Before dropping the veil over Dahl, however, detectives disclosed they had found in the murdered girl's apartment $12,000 worth of B. M. T. stock.

Her apartment also yielded up today several notebooks and diaries containing the names and addresses of persons prominent in society here, in San Francisco, Chicago and Texas, Miss Lawson's home state.

Friends to Be Quizzed.

"She traveled in pretty high company," said Inspector Coughlin. "We're going to summon every one of her known friends for a little quizzing." He declined, however, to reveal their names.

As the result of the Follies girl's story, squads of detectives in plain clothes were guests at all the principal afternoon-and-night cabarets in search of two men she described to them. Descriptions of these men also were circulated throughout the department here and in nearby large cities.

Several witnesses, including the elevator operator who saw two "express men" enter Miss Lawson's apartment—the last persons known to have visited her—examined rogues' gallery photographs at Police Headquarters.

Montana Bank Unable to Open.

By the Associated Press.

HELENA, Mont., Feb. 9.—Due to constant withdrawal of funds by depositors and because of heavy land and cattle loans, overdue, the Commercial National Bank in Miles City was unable to open forbusiness today. The Commercial National was reported to have had footings of approximately $2,000,000. It was a member of the Federal Reserve Banking System, and about 90 days ago absorbed the Miles City National Bank.

ROSS CASE JURY FOREMAN INDICTED ON FRAUD CHARGE

Clay L. Schroeder and 10 Others Accused in $500,000 "Lawful Larceny" Case.

Clay L. Schroeder of 1016 Louisville avenue, who was foreman of the jury which two months ago convicted Donald W. Ross of embezzlement of funds of the defunct Night and Day Bank, and fixed his sentence at 10 years' imprisonment, is one of 11 men indicted yesterday by the Federal grand jury, on charges of using the mails to defraud.

The indictments grow out of the disclosure, last October, of a "lawful larceny" scheme, which proved not to be so lawful as was supposed by those practicing it. The men are alleged to have ordered goods from wholesale and jobbing concerns, submitting false financial statements to gain credit. At the time of the arrests, it was estimated that the amount of goods thus obtained, in apparently lawful manner, but with no intent to pay, was more than $500,000. The goods were sold in job lots for whatever they would bring, or were retailed at very low prices.

Was Foreman of Jury.

Schroeder was under bond in the mail fraud case at the time when he was called as a juror in the Ross case, but the Circuit Attorney's office did not learn of his connection with the case until the trial of Ross had begun. It was then too late to change the jury, as Ross had been legally placed in jeopardy. When the verdict was returned, it developed that the other jurors had chosen Schroeder as foreman.

Of the indictments returned yesterday, one, containing 17 counts, charges a scheme to defraud, use of the mails to defraud and conspiracy. The defendants named are Edward M. (Red) Allen, erstwhile leader of the Cuckoo Gang of police characters; Harry Trippett, previously charged with unlawful sale of morphine; John (Duke) Lynam, John J. Brennan, Louis A. Guenther, Ben Horrick, Sam Eastman and Sam Manewitz.

The indictment sets out that under the name of the Ludwig Remedy Co., 712 North Second street, the defendants obtained large bills of goods from wholesalers and jobbers with no intention of paying for the goods.

Charged With Fraud.

Three indictments, each charging five counts, were returned against Schroeder, In two of them John J. Schroeder, his cousin, and Ben Dewoskin are charged jointly with him. These indictments allege that under the names of the St. Louis Merchandise Co., and Central Mercantile Co., both of 816 North Eighteenth street, and the American Specialty Co., 706 Pine street, the defendants used the mails in a scheme to defraud merchants and manufacturers by methods similar to those stated in the other indictment.

The grand jury returned indictments against 127 persons, most of the charges involving minor infractions of the prohibition law or Harrison antinarcotics act. Among those indicted was Edward (Red) Powers, a member of the Egan gang, who was named with three other men in an indictment alleging that they operated a still in St. Louis County.

Session of the jury will be resumed next Friday.

YOUNG JAILS SHERIFF ALONG WITH HERRIN POLICE CHIEF, MAYOR

soon after the wounding of Layman. Glenn Young thereupon went from Marion to Herrin and took charge of the civil authorities. Young says he has worked in harmony with the increasing military forces. He obtained a warrant against Sheriff Galligan, and the Sheriff was arrested in Carbondale, Jackson County, and was first placed in the city jail there, then brought to Herrin.

The action of Sheriff Galligan, in taking the three Herrin policemen to Jackson County, was denounced by Young as "kidnaping." Young said steps would be taken to obtain the men's release. Young said Sheriff White of Jackson County was "very impudent" in a telephone conversation with him, and refused to release the three Herrin policemen, though Young insisted that there was no valid charge against them.

Young said, in reply to questions, that his authority as acting Chief of Police came, in the emergency, from the Assistant Chief of Police.

Restricted martial law prevailed here tonight, by proclamation of Col. Albert Culbertson, in charge of the militia force stationed here. Troops guarded the Herrin hospital, where Layman, the wounded deputy, is a patient. Four machine guns have been set up opposite the City Hall.

Col. Culbertson said martial law would not be applied outside of Herrin, unless the disorders should spread. The militia companies were directed to keep visitors from entering Herrin for the next day or two.

POLICE CLAIM 'EVIDENCE ENOUGH TO HANG MILES'

Grand Jury to Take Up O'Neal Murder Tuesday; Fugitive Expected to Surrender Soon.

The Police Department has "enough evidence to hang" Deputy Constable James P. Miles Jr. for the murder of Charles O'Neal, Washington Hotel bar proprietor, Detective Sergeant Archey declared last night. Archey is head of the police homicide squad.

The grand jury is to take up the O'Neal murder Tuesday. There seems to be an expectation, in police circles, that Miles, who disappeared after the killing of O'Neal last Tuesday afternoon, will surrender himself tomorrow or Tuesday. Circuit Attorney Sidener has announced that no bond will be accepted for Miles, but if the grand jury should indict him for a lower degree of homicide than first-degree murder, the case would become bailable. There is no present indication that the expected indictment will be for anything but murder in the first degree.

Named in Inquest Verdict.

Miles was charged with the crime in the Coroner's jury verdict.

Among those summoned as witnesses for the grand jury are Mrs. Ellen Farrell of 4517 Enright avenue, at whose home Miles is said to have been shortly before the killing, and the proprietors and bartender of Walsh Brothers' saloon at 708 North Taylor avenue, the last place to which the police have been able to trace him after the shooting.

Mrs. Farrell's daughter, Margaret Farrell, whom the police wished to question as to Miles' movements, was not found yesterday, and the police believe she has left the city.

Mrs. Farrell Questioned.

The mother, who is elderly and infirm, was questioned by Detective Sergt. Linder yesterday, and insisted that Miles had not been at the house, to her knowledge, for some time past. She denied a statement, which she was said to have made to two reporters posing as gangsters, to the effect that Miles was at her home after the shooting, and that a politician helped him in getting away.

The Walshes have denied that Miles was at their saloon. Verne Emmons, a chauffeur, testified at the Coroner's inquest that he drove Miles to a saloon, the location of which, as described by him, is that of the Walsh place, and that Miles borrowed $2 there, paying his taxi bill and tip with $1 of this amount.

The police have found another witness who saw Miles leaving the bar immediately after the shooting, and who has not, thus far, been affected by the fright which seems to have caused other witnesses to change their stories, introducing one or two additional men to cloud the issues of Miles' guilt.

The new witness, Louis J. Fehr of 2201 Angelica street, has said to the police that he was in the hotel poolroom, adjoining the bar, when O'Neal was shot, and that the only man he saw running away was one whom he described as resembling the description of Miles. He saw no other man leaving. He was in the bar a few minutes before Miles entered, and saw only O'Neal and his partner, Rudolph Schaefer, there.

Schaefer's Stories.

Schaefer, in his first statement to the police, said he, O'Neal and Miles were in the room at the time of the shooting. At the inquest he said two other men were in the bar at the time of the shooting. R. L. Brooks, proprietor of the poolroom, said in the first inquiry that he saw one man leaving, but testified at the inquest to seeing two.

Detectives said yesterday that the apparent fear of testifying frankly, in the case affecting Miles, was an exaggeration of "gangphobia." The detectives expressed doubt whether Miles had friends who would take any great risk to punish those against whom Miles might have a grudge. Miles was unpopular, the detectives say, because of his ugly manners when he was intoxicated, and because of the frequency with which he became drunk.

Mrs. May O'Neal of 4743A Washington boulevard, mother of the murdered man, said yesterday that her son's partner, Schaefer, had not visited her to offer his condolences, and had seemed to avoid her. This was in contrast, she said, with his former friendly manner toward her. She denied a report that Schaefer had told her that her son, when dying, said that Miles shot him.

PLAN NEW EFFORT TO DRAIN POND FOR BODY OF HALL BOY

Belleville Authorities Hope to Obtain Use of Three High-Pressure Pumps Today.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of 3-year-old Lester Hall from his home, 419 North Third street, Belleville, a week ago, deepened yesterday when eight hours continual pumping with a fire engine and the discharge of additional dynamite in the pond adjoining his home failed to bring his body to the surface.

The child's father, John Hall, and Belleville police do not believe Lester met his death in the pond. However, in the absense of any clew, it was decided to drain the pond, formerly a small quarry adjoining the Hall home. Due to the fact that the pond is fed by springs, a city fire engine, pumping eight hours yesterday, was able to lower the water but 14 inches. When it was found that the pond could not be emptied by the fire engine, the ice covering was chopped into blocks and removed. Dynamite was then used without avail.

Pumping Effort Today.

Belleville authorities hope to obtain the use of three high-pressure pumps from the Aluminum Ore Co. of East St. Louis today in an effort to drain the pond and satisfy the child's mother that Lester's body is not caught in some crevice or sinkhole. The pond was examined by searchers when Lester's disappearance became known and found to be covered with ice sufficiently thick to support a man. There were no holes through which the child might have slipped. The ice was open near one bank but the mud revealed no footprints or other signs of anyone entering the water.

Chief of Police Arbogast of Belleville, admitted yesterday that he was without a clew in the case. James Brown, a negro, who formerly occupied a cottage on the Hall premises, presented himself to Chief Arbogast yesterday and offered his services in the search for the missing child. Brown and his family had been asked to move from the cottage by Hall Jan. 20, and this fact was recalled when the child disappeared. Brown told police he was working in a foundry in East St. Louis and had hurried to Belleville to deny a rumor that he had kidnaped Lester through a spirit of revenge. The Halls and Chief Arbogast accepted Brown's story and he was not arrested.

Last Seen Monday.

Lester Hall was last seen by his mother, Mrs. Hattie Hall, playing with his wagon in the yard in front of his home at 4:30 p. m. Monday. A thorough search of the vicinity and a house-to-house canvass of Belleville proved of no avail. A crowd estimated at more than 1000 persons yesterday watched the pumping operation. Every person able to spare the time in Belleville has assisted in the search, including 150 Boy Scouts.

Hall said yesterday that he would offer a reward for information of his son and was planning a national search. Hall is a saloonkeeper and has eight other children.

HENRY FORD HOLDS HOUSE WARMING PARTY AT OLD INN

Everything Old-Fashioned at Gathering in Place Made Historic by Longfellow.

SUDBURY, Mass., Feb. 9.—Wayside Inn, relic of an age that has already faded into the background of American history and which, since the days of Longfellow's "Tales of a Wayside Inn" has known the vicissitudes of a changing era and declining fortunes, was radiant tonight with life and light and laughter. Twenty couples led by Henry Ford, as master of ceremonies, celebrated Ford's long-planned for "old fashioned New England party" as a house warming for the old place which he bought last year that it might be saved in commemoration of old New England.

There was an old fashioned dinner with old fashioned food and there were old fashioned dances and old fashioned amusements and old fashioned music.

The party, some of the members of which arrived with Mr. Ford last night, passed a quiet day at the ancient hostelry. The motor manufacturer and his guests went skating on the rink near the Inn. Ford apparently enjoying the occasion to the fullest extent. Most of the rest of the day he passed in rambling across the snow-covered fields and through the acres of woodland which form part of the estate.

As night came there was more of life. The windows of the old building blazed with lights and the old-time dinner was served. More guests arrived and the evening's entertainment was begun. There was little of jazz and just a few modern dances were mixed in the evening's program, for the benefit of the younger couples, for although Ford enjoys dancing, he knows only the older dances and he has steadfastly declined to learn the present day steps.

WOULD TRY PARENTS IN TRUANCY CASES

Judge Ossing Says "Real Offenders" Must Appear When Court Aid Is Sought.

The parent, and not the truant child, must be brought into Juvenile Court when the Board of Education wishes court aid in truancy cases, Judge E. G. Ossing of the Juvenile Court points out in a letter he is preparing to send the Board of Education.

Truancy charges against the child alone will not suffice, as the school authorities have full power to deal with the youthful truant through special or "parental" schools, the Judge declares. Because facilities for such truant schools have not been provided, however, children have frequently been brought into the court, the charge being delinquency, based upon truancy.

Judge Ossing does not think the court should be resorted to in such cases, but says the Board of Education should either provide truant schools, with compulsory attendance, or should make arrangements for sending the truants to Bellefontaine Farm.

With the parents of such children, it is a different matter. Under the law a parent or guardian who willfully neglects or refuses to send a child to school can be fined $10 to $25, imprisoned for two to 10 days or placed on probation. The statutes make it mandatory upon school attendance officers to lodge complaint against such persons, and Judge Ossing is asking the Board of Education to co-operate with him in seeing that these "real offenders" and not the irresponsible child be brought into court.

"Not once has a parent been brought before me as a defendant in a truancy case," the Judge told a reporter last night. They have been in court for questioning about the child's truancy, but when the child is on trial the Court cannot punish the parent, except indirectly by committing the young truant to some institution."

The Judge added that he had found truancy to be a contributing cause in a large portion of the delinquency cases in his court.

The Missouri law giving school authorities full power over truants by providing special schools or parental farms has been in effect since 1921? but Judge Ossing said he knew of no locality in which such special institutions had been established.

MRS. HART WOULD ACT AGAIN

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 9.—Mrs. Winifred Westover Hart, wife of William S. Hart, film actor, from whom she is separated but not divorced, today filed suit in the Superior Court attacking her agreement with Hart whereby he established a trust fund for her maintenance with the proviso that she was not to appear in the films until a divorce is obtained or Hart dies.

The complaint alleges that the income from the $103,000 trust fund and monthly payments from Hart are not sufficient and that Mrs. Hart's agreement with her husband prevents her earning a livelihood. For this reason, she says, she wishes to resume her work on the screen.

FLORENCE MACBETH IS BEWITCHING SUZANNE

Prima Donna Coloratura Is Tender and Mischievous in Wolf-Ferrari's Opera.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

MISS FLORENCE MACBETH, a coloratura soprano of American birth and training, whose indomitable pluck has finally been crowned by an engagement to sing Galli-Curci's roles next season with the Chicago Civic Opera Co., appeared at the Odeon last night with her miniature concert company. The program was in two parts—a song and instrumental recital, and a charmingly intimate production of Wolf-Ferrari's sprightly operatic frifle, "The Secret of Suzanne," which was given in English. The cantatrice was supported by Joseph Royer, baritone; and Luigi della Molle, both of the San Carlo Opera Company; the Scandinavian String Quartet, a pianist and a flutist.

This, we believe, was Miss Macbeth's third appearance in St. Louis. Some years ago she sang a joint recital at the Odeon with Pasquale Amato, and last season she won a sensation as soloist with the Knights of Columbus Choral Club. Her artistry has not as yet attained its just deserts in this city, for the audience last night was not large. But its applause had the timbre of sincere pleasure.

Delightful Vocal Quality.

The singer disclosed once more a voice which is light, but of exquisite and limpid quality; a style of extreme finish and a gift for expression which gives every word of the text its just meaning. As the tender, arch and mischievous heroine of "The Secret of Suzanne," she also revealed excellent talent as an actress.

The concert began with a rather robustious rendition of the Largo al Factotum, from "The Barber of Seville," by Mr. Royer, who has a sonorous voice and is aware of it, and who dispatched the rapid text with a certain volubility. Miss Macbeth followed with the "Charmant oiseau" aria from "La Perle du Brezil," a display piece for the familiar coloratura exploits.

The two singers were next heard in Mozart's immortal duet, "La ci darem la mano," from "Don Giovanni," which they gave with such grace and humor that the audience required its repetition. The String Quartet, a respectable but by no means model organization, followed with two movements from a quartet by Svendson and a Swedish folk song.

Opera in English.

Thanks to the courtesy of the singers in presenting Wolf-Ferrari's one-act morceau in English, and to their painstaking enunciation, the auditors had the enjoyment for once of following an opera almost word for word. Miss MacBeth was a delicious Suzanne; her delivery of the love music was particularly lovely.

As most persons know, Suzanne, a bride of a month, has taken to smoking cigarettes to while away the time which her husband spends at the club. Discovering the odor of tobacco smoke, the jealous bridegroom leaps to the conclusion that a rival is being entertained in his absence. He sets a trap, but is enlightened by burning his hand on a cigarette which his wife is hiding behind her back. Mr. Royer put on a domestic storm of horrific thoroughness, in which almost everything movable in the room was smashed.

HILLQUIT SAYS U. S. NEEDS COALITION LIKE LABOR PARTY

New Yorker, Here for Meeting of Socialist National Committee, Discusses Political Situation.

"BOTH OLD PARTIES ARE REACTIONARY"

Plan to Unite Liberal, Labor and Farmer Group on Joint Candidate for Presidency.

Best hope for political, social and economic progress in the United States depends upon the formation and success of a political coalition similar to the British Labor party, declared Morris Hillquit of New York, one of the most outstanding leaders among American Socialists. Hillquit is here attending a meeting of the Socialist National Committee, which yesterday determined to hold the national convention of its party in New York, May 17.

Hillquit yesterday discussed with a Post-Dispatch reporter viewpoint and purposes with which the Socialist National Committeemen will enter the National Conference for Progressive Political Action which will convene here tomorrow. He indicated that if the developments of that conference indicate that members of the powerfully organized groups of union labor, farmers and liberals and radicals of the nation, regard the time as ripe, a joint candidate for the presidency may be named. The Socialist committee discussed this contingency throughout the day yesterday.

Tendencies in Old Parties.

"Predominating tendencies in both the Republican and Democratic parties are reactionary," said Hillquit. "So the producing classes and the great bulk of the middle classes can expect no real improvement in conditions through either of the old political groups.

"We have tried to make the Socialist party the real labor party in the United States and to that end, as Socialists in England have done, we are ready at all times to participate in any joint movement which promises betterment to those classes which suffer most from the effects of reaction.

"Events of the last two years in legislation, in the courts, in industrial fields, have marched steadily to the strains of reaction. Incident after incident, of common knowledge to all, has been symptomatic of the underlying current, flowing to the benefit of the possessing class.

"No 'third party' conceived by disgruntled politicians of either of the old parties and born of a desire for office can offer any relief. The only avenue of reform, as we see it, lies in the direction of a joint movement by the classes suffering from this reaction.

Co-operation Plan.

"In such a movement the Socialist party would preserve its autonomy as such, and the other co-operating groups would do likewise, accepting help of whatever members of the old parties who have the idealism to join.

"We will hold our national convention and preserve our party structure. If a labor party is formed and nominates a candidate, those groups which accept the common cause would ratify his nomination and put his name on their tickets in all probability.

"It would be premature to say now that this will be done this year. The proper implement for the purpose may not be welded this time. But if not now, then next year or the year after or some other year. It seems to be inevitable."

Resignation of Otto F. Branstetter of Chicago as executive secretary of the Socialist National Committee, pending for some time, was accepted yesterday and a successor will be elected before the committeemen depart.

Eugene V. Debs of Terre Haute, Ind., chairman of the committee, was not here because of illness. Those present also included: W. M. Brandt, St. Louis; Birch Wilson, Pennsylvania; Leo M. Harkins, New Jersey; W. R. Snow, Illinois.

306 Births, 244 Deaths for Week.

There were 306 births and 244 deaths reported in St. Louis last week. Forty-nine persons died of organic heart trouble, 24 of Bright's disease, 21 of lobar and 19 of broncho pneumonia, 17 of cancer, 12 of tuberculosis and a like number of apoplexy. There were seven suicides, six homicides and 12 accidental deaths last week.

Lincoln Birthday Celebration.

Frank P. Blair Post, Grand Army of the Republic, will have its thirty-fourth celebration of Lincoln's birthday Tuesday evening at its hall, 1708 Market street. Judge George H. Williams will speak on "Lincoln and the Constitution." There will be a program of music.

Pope's Gift to Austrians.

ROME, Feb. 9.—On the occasion of the anniversary of his coronation, the Pope has donated 500,000 lire to Austrian relief, according to the newspaper Epoca.

PETER GOUNIS BEGINS SERVING 6-MONTH CONTEMPT SENTENCE

Proprietor of Eden Park Had Been Given Respite to Raise Money to Pay Fines but Failed to Do So.

Peter Gounis, one of the "four notorious law violators" named in the recent county grand jury report, who was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $700 for contempt of court for selling liquor at Eden Park, Meramec Highlands, which he conducts, began serving his jail sentence at Clayton yesterday.

The first night after he was sentenced he had spent in jail, but he obtained a respite the next day on the plea of his counsel that he wanted to arrange his affairs and to raise money to pay fines he has owed for a long time, for liquor and other violations, some dating to pro-prohibition days.

The fines have not been paid and Gounis told reporters upon arriving at Clayton yesterday that he did not intend to pay some of them, which he characterized as the result of "frameups" against him. He said he has run Eden Park seven years under a 30-year lease and that his wife would be in charge during his enforced absence.

$5500 Holdup Reported.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 9.—Three unmasked robbers bound three men and a woman in a diamond broker's office here today and escaped with $5500 in cash and $15,000 in checks, but failed to get $300,000 worth of gems, according to the report of Theodore Welk, the broker, to the police.

HIRAM LLOYD ENTERS RACE FOR GOVERNORSHIP

Lieutenant Governor Announces Candidacy for Republican Nomination and Outlines Platform.

Lieutenant-Governor Hiram Lloyd of St. Louis last night announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the Governorship at a meeting of about 200 business and professional men at the Washington Hotel. At the conclusion of Lloyd's speech a Lloyd-for-Governor Club was formed. About 700 names appeared on petitions which had been circulated by Lloyd's supporters.

The St. Louisan, in declaring his candidacy, outlined his platform as a pledge to "the continued development of the State of Missouri through vigorous promotion of road construction, with adequate maintenance; liberal support of the State's eleemosynary and correctional institutions; co-operation with farmers in obtaining better marketing conditions; control of public expenditures through budget system; consolidation of related offices to increase efficiency and decrease cost; assistance in waterway development, especially in improvement of the Missouri River; enactment of a fair workmen's compensation law; better regulation of elections and a fair senatorial and congressional redistricting."

Two in Race So Far.

Lloyd is the second Republican to announce for Governor, Sam A. Baker of Jefferson City, former State Superintendent of Schools, having entered the race some time ago. Unless State Auditor Hackmann should get in, Republican politicians expect no further entries, no other candidate being in sight at present.

Lloyd, who was born in St. Clair County, Ill., in 1863, has spent the greater part of his life in St. Louis and since 1895, when he began a four-year tenure in the Municipal Assembly, has been active in Republican politics. He was a State Representative from St. Louis in 1909 and 1911, being Republican floor leader of the House in both sessions. At various times he has been a member of both the Republican City Committee and the Republican State Committee.

Elected Lieutenant-Governor in 1920, Lloyd dominated the Legislative session of 1921, forming the alliances by which Gov. Hyde's consolidation program was forced through the Legislature, only to be defeated later through a referendum invoked by the Democratic State Committee.

Hyde Backing Still Uncertain.

Whether Lloyd will have the backing of the State administration in his present ambition, yet remains uncertain, though influences powerful with Gov. Hyde, among them Chairman Theodore Gary of the State Highway Commission, are reported to have urged such action. Members of the Republican City Committee of St. Louis, having taken a lesson from their disastrous alliance formed with E. E. E. McJimsey of Springfield, early in the pre-primary campaign of 1920, are maintaining a discreet silence as to their gubernatorial leanings at this time. They want to be sure which way the breezes are wafting.

From the complexion of Lloyd's other backing in St. Louis and the fact that State Senator Peter Anderson, Frank Warner and William F. Delepheuer, Republicans, have signed Lloyd's petitions, it is expected that the St. Louis candidate will obtain substantial support from the committee.

Charles Espenschied of 3600 Washington boulevard, a retired business man, was elected president of the Lloyd club, William L. Niekamp of 7104 Delmar boulevard, president of the Beck & Corbitt Iron Co., treasurer, and George Coombes, secretary.

Introduced by Isaac Hedges.

Espenschied presided over the meeting last night, Lloyd being introduced by Isaac Hedges, manager of the Washington University-Cupples Station property.

Among the signatures on the Lloyd petitions were: Walter T. Koken, Phillips W. Moss, former State Senator Henry W. Blodgett, William R. Orthwein, Edward A. Faust, Arnold G. Stifel, H. Linton Reber, Thomas C. Whitmarsh, M. Skrainka, Robert C. Newman, Allen P. Gamble, Dr. Harvey G. Mudd, George R. Merrell, Fred Krey, John F. Queeny, Circuit Judge H. A. Hamilton, United States District Judge Charles A. Davis, Charles A. Houts, W. D. Heminway and George D. Riddle.

Republican State Committee to Meet Here Tomorrow.

Republican leaders from throughout the State will begin arriving today for the meeting of the Republican State Committee tomorrow afternoon and the Lincoln Day Banquet Tuesday night, both at the Jefferson Hotel.

The State Committee has been called to select a time and place for the Republican State Convention and to fix the apportionment basis upon which the counties will elect delegates.

Considerable milling and conferring will take place also between the friends of Dr. E. B. Clements, chairman of the State Committee and candidate for National Committeeman to succeed Jacob L. Babler.

Developments of the meeting are expected to indicate whether Clements and Gov. Hyde, who is supporting him, still hold control of the committee.

Aspirants for Republican nominations for various offices State and local will be here in force, to avail themselves of the opportunity for repairing old fences and building new ones.

INDICTED ON MURDER CHARGE

By the Associated Press.

STILLWATER, Ok., Feb. 9.—Indictments charging murder and rioting were returned by a district grand jury here against Roy G. Doak, David D. Zink and I. Earl Nutter, students at the Oklahoma A. and M. College here, as the result of the death of Mrs. Matilda Hodges, who was accidentally shot and killed Feb. 1, while the students were target shooting in the back yard of their fraternity house.

Woman Choked By Gas On Stomach

Doctors and X-ray Specialist Could Not Help

"I have been to many doctors and also to a specialist who took X-rays—none could tell what caused my stomach trouble. I was bothered with gas so much I thought I would choke. I was nervous, my heart acted bad and was dizzy. Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) has done wonders for me. Gas is gone, heart acts better and no more dizzy spells. I am very thankful." (Signed) Mrs. T. A. Derosia.

Intestinal Antiseptic

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows: It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacill in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can disclose. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long-standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports from Physicians

"I found Adlerika the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eayers.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. E. M. P. (name given on request).

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have tried only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 7th and Washington, and Enderle Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

What 40 years have taught.

On February 12, 1924, Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen celebrates its Fortieth Birthday and Forty Years of continuous leadership in prestige and sales.

The first Waterman's Ideal had a rubber barrel and every Waterman's Ideal made today has a rubber barrel.

40 years of experience has proven that rubber is the only proper material for the purpose.

80 separate operations are required to make a perfect gold point.

40 years of experience confirms that it cannot be done in less and that more are unnecessary.

To fit every individual preference in points, it requires over 1000 different styles, shapes, sizes and tempers.

40 years of experience has demanded that we make them in this wide variety.

No one can write comfortably with a barrel that is too large or too small to be a perfect fit for the hand.

40 years of experience has enabled us to produce the variety of sizes necessary to fit any hand comfortably.

Waterman dealers the world over have learned these facts also, and will gladly aid you in selecting a

The February Furniture Sale

A Once-a-Year Opportunity

KEEPING faith year after year with our patrons—giving them the ultimate in value—maintaining always the high quality of our Furniture—has made the Prufrock-Litton February Sale an institution—a once-a-year event eagerly awaited by St. Louis homemakers.

AND the reductions—the savings—are real! The original price tags have been left on everything—you can see for yourself the sale tags are 15% to 50% lower than the former marked prices. Stocks are now complete—it is the opportune time to select that much-needed Furniture.

Everything Reduced 15% to 50%

$336 Two-Piece Wool Mohair Suite

Sketched above are two stylish pieces modestly priced. They are made in the Prufrock-Litton factory, and a close inspection will reveal the beauty of the materials used and the quality of the work.

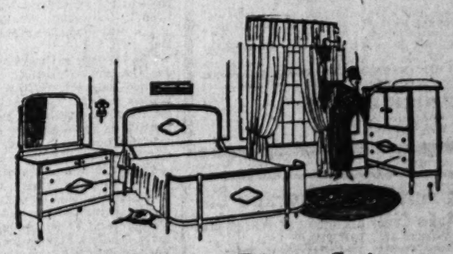
The davenport and low chair are the kind you sink deep into. They will be covered in $7 per yard wool mohair in your choice of mole, taupe or beaver, with reed back. The base and legs are of solid walnut, handsomely carved. Heavy silk tassels trim the arms.

These two pieces marked down from $336 to $224

Upholstered Furniture Made to Order at Sale Price

"No finer furniture is shown in the Grand Rapids market than that from the Prufrock-Litton line," was the comment of the Grand Rapids Herald on our exhibit of fine upholstered furniture, one of the attractions of the January Furniture Exposition.

This elegant upholstered furniture will be made to order at big savings during the February Sale!



$240 Three-Piece Suite

Quiet and restful is the bedroom that is furnished with the attractive pieces shown above.

This Suite is finished in American walnut, dull rubbed, and is well made throughout. Each piece is ornamented with a motif. The dresser is 48 inches wide, the bed is full size and the chiffonette has ample drawer space.

Three pieces, a $240 value, now $173

$217 Eight-Piece Suite

The Suite sketched above is veneered in dull walnut. The design is of Italian adaptation and is always stylish. The buffet measures 66 inches in length, the extension table is 42x54 inches and the five side chairs and one armchair are upholstered in tapestry. This is a strong, well-made Suite.

Eight pieces, formerly priced at $217, a February Sale value at $180

Same Suite, nine pieces, with china cabinet, a $270 value, now $215

Same Suite, ten pieces, with china cabinet and serving table, a $300 value $235

Our Deferred Payment Plan

Has helped many home-makers to furnish a home of character at a minimum outlay. No interest is charged and you pay in convenient monthly payments.

Deliveries Made Later

We want everyone to take advantage of these sale values. If your home is not yet ready, Furniture will be held for later delivery.

JURY HOLDS DRIVER FOR DEATH OF MATA STODDARD

Carelessness Charge Against Man Following Accident Fatal to Former St. Louis Girl.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 9.—Hal J. Conlin, race driver, was held on a charge of criminal carelessness by a coroner's jury here today after an inquest into the death of Miss Mata Stoddard, formerly of St. Louis, who was crushed when an automobile in which she and Conlin were riding crashed into a telephone pole in South Hollywood early Friday morning.

Miss Stoddard was the daughter of Mrs. Lucy Stoddard of 2753 Cherokee street, St. Louis, owner of a string of motion picture theaters. She had received prizes in beauty contests and was urged to try for a career in the movies. She left St. Louis two months ago.

Mothers!! Apply Common Sense

THIS is the era of the prevention of disease and sensible people do not wait until sickness has actually come before remedying the trouble. The crowded hospitals everywhere are sad examples of the results of neglect. Be especially watchful of children. Restlessness, lack of normal appetite and feverishness usually indicate constipation. Stop it that instant with a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and you will have prevented real sickness. Mrs. Ida Williamson of 1637 Pine St., Long Beach, Cal., and Mrs. Lou Brawley of Self, Ark., never have illness in the family because of their prompt use of Syrup Pepsin.

A Great Family Laxative

It may be difficult to decide just which medicine to use out of the many that are offered, but it would not be if you knew the facts. There are laxatives, cathartics, purgatives and physics, and they vary in their reaction on the system. Naturally, the stronger the medicine the more it shocks the system, so wise parents never give anything but a laxative to children. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a mild laxative, a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and desirable aromatics, and so appreciated that it is now the largest selling preparation of its kind in the world, over 10 million bottles being used annually. The formula is on every package.

Three Rules of Health

Purchase a bottle of Syrup Pepsin at a drug store and always keep one in the family medicine chest. Give it to anyone from infant to grandparent, for it is safe, and the cost is less than a cent a dose. You can keep a family healthy with just this simple medicine. Give it for constipation, torpid liver, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, colds and other evidence of bowel obstruction. Dr. Caldwell, who was a practicing physician for 47 years and who originated this formula, had three rules of health that he found very effective among his patients and which you can follow with great benefit: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

If You Want to Try It Free Before Buying

COMMITTEE PLAN FOR NEW GERMAN BANK FORMULATED

Dawes Experts Submit Their Ideas of Stabilizing Currency to Head of Reichsbank.

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—A new gold bank for Germany has been decided on by the committee of experts and President Schacht of the Reichsbank has agreed to the plan. It will be a bank of issue and the rentenmarks and marks issued by the Reichsbank will be interchangeable with the new gold marks.

The new bank will be put in operation as quickly as possible. Announcement of it came at the end of a hectic day, during which the fall of the mark in New York showed the necessity of prompt action. The committee and Shacht brought their negotiations to an end this afternoon and immediately issued a carefully worded statement which avoided the difficult questions of where the bank will be and under whose control. The committee explained that only the broad outline of the plan had been settled.

Committee Much Worried.

Whatever caused the decline of the mark in New York, it gave the committee much worry. The experts were inclined to see in it a maneuver by some agency against the success of their work. As has been pointed out, they consider that the continued stability of the mark is essential. And this wobbling came at a time when negotiations for a solution of the financial problem were nearing completion.

Over the proposed gold bank the negotiations reached their crisis. Schacht, an able negotiator, was insisting on German control of the bank board.

Schacht was eager to have the bank organized as soon as possible, to safeguard the rentenmark from the danger of further decline, but he was unwilling to yield any more than was necessary to attain this end. He wants to continue the Reichsbank and the Rentenbank for the present.

Details Worked Out.

It is understood that the gold bank plan has been worked out more in detail than today's broad statement would indicate. The committee of experts prefer that detailed announcement of it should come from the Reparations Commission, without whose approval it cannot be put into effect. The American experts, it is believed, will insist on publication of the plan as soon as the Reparations Commission receives it, however.

Gen. Dawes and Owen D. Young, American experts, both played important roles today in the struggle toward a compromise, which was successful only after several hours' discussion. Not that there was any conflict, but all parties hesitated to commit themselves.

Rumors that he was thinking of resigning were denied indignantly by Gen. Dawes, chairman of the committee today. It was the first time Gen. Dawes has been ruffled since coming to Berlin. "I haven't the slightest intention to resign; the idea never occurred to me," the General ejaculated. "I'd like to know who started that rumor and what he did it for."

COLOGNE RAILROAD AGREEMENT BY THE FRENCH AND BRITISH

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—An agreement between the French Railway Administration and the British authorities in the Cologne zone by which the normal circulation of railroad traffic in the Cologne area which has been interrupted since the Ruhr occupation, will be resumed was reached this afternoon at Coblenz, according to official information.

The accordance given by the British, Belgian and French Rhineland high commissioners is on the basis of the agreement between the French and the Reichs railways which was signed at Mayence on Dec. 14.

The Cologne railways remain under German direction, but the Franco-Belgian railway administration enjoys the right to send all its trains through the British zone, thus restoring the conditions existing before the occupation of the Ruhr. The British authorities it is stated here have given guarantees for the security and safety of traffic in case of strikes. Technical commissions of British, French and German experts will meet Monday at Mayence to work out the details of the plan.

The greatest satisfaction is expressed in French official circles at the settlement of this question and it is emphasized that the agreement was the result of a spirit of friendly conciliation on both sides.

With the thorny question of the Cologne right of way settled and the palatinate problem well on the road to solution French official circles feel that France-British relations are assuming an excellent posture that will assist in disposing of the paramount issues upon which a general European settlement depends.

COMMONWEALTH LAND PARTY NAMES PRESIDENTIAL ENTRY

Direct Descendent of Abraham Lincoln Nominated for the Vice Presidency.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—William J. Wallace, of Newark, N. J., tonight was nominated for the presidency by the National convention of the Commonwealth Land Party, formerly the Single Tax Party. J. E. Lincoln, of Cleveland, O., a direct descendant of Abraham Lincoln, was nominated for the vice presidency. The party slogan in the national campaign will be "The Rent of Land Belongs to the People."

After an all-day discussion, the 60 delegates from 17 states adopted a platform affirming that of 1920. The five basic planks are: Proportional representation; the initiative, referendum and recall; public ownership and operation of public utilities; collection of rent for use of land to obtain funds for public expense; and the abolition of all taxes levied on private property and incomes.

VETERANS' COMMITTEE REPORT SUBMITTED

Finding of Appraisers Who "Whitewashed" Liv Morse Deal Termed Extraordinary.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The finding of the appraisers, who whitewashed the deal by which "Liv" Morse, Missouri Republican politician, got $90,000 from the Government for his Excelsior Springs property, is characterized as "extraordinary" in a report made to the Senate Committee on the Veterans' Bureau by its counsel, Major-General John F. O'Ryan of New York. Making this report public today, the committee said that it agreed with virtually all the conclusions set forth by Gen. O'Ryan.

In its report today, transmitting O'Ryan's brief, the Veterans' Committee said:

"The report of Gen. O'Ryan is transmitted herewith as a part of this preliminary report of the committee. While the findings and recommendatifons in Gen. O'Ryan's report are his own and are not the findings or recommendations of the committee, it is nevertheless the fact that the committee fully concurs in nearly all of his findings, and that the committee has embodied in its proposed code (to govern the Veterans' Bureau) nearly all of his legislative recommendations.

"The committee agrees with Gen. O'Ryan's characterization of the wretched incompetence, waste, and dishonesty of the administration of the Bureau under Director Forbes.

"The committee will make a further report dealing particularly with the hospitals of the Veterans' Bureau and giving a summary of the reasons why the previous administration of the Bureau has failed to obtain the results intended by Congress."

Portions of the report, which in general is a scathing indictment of the "dishonesty and neglect" that marked the administration of the Veterans' Bureau by Charles R. Forbes as director, have already been published. Forbes is charged with having been the "leading actor in a conspiracy" to defraud the Government through the award of hospital building contracts to a favored "ring."

Comment on Reappraisal.

The report then makes the following comment on the recent reappraisal of the Morse property:

"During the course of the hearing when Mr. Morse was on the stand, he offered to have the property reappraised as of the date when the Government took title and to pay back to the Government any difference between the amount of such new appraisal and the purchase price of the original plot which might be found to be due the Government. Accordingly, and in furtherance of this offer, the Veterans' Bureau designated one of its employes as one member of the committee of three, Mr. Morse designated the second, and the two thus selected agreed upon a third.

"The Senate committee was later advised that after taking considerable testimony in Missouri this committee found the price paid by the Government was a just and reasonable price.

Value Not Over $35,000.

"This finding seems extraordinary in view of the statement of expert real estate appraisers who acted for the committee and who fixed the value at not over $35,000. Reference to the evidence taken by the committee referred to, which is on file in the Veterans' Bureau, will indicate that the committee concerned itself not only with the value of the original Morse plot, which, as stated, was appraised by the Senate committee's expert at $35,000 and for which received $90,000, but that such appraisal committee went into the question of the value of the hospital buildings erected by Mr. Morse under his contract with the Government.

Forbes is not connected in the report with the Excelsior Springs case, but is cited as "a striking example of the manner in which the interests of the Government and of the disabled were subordinated to individual interests."

The report states that the Excelsior Springs hospital was "forced" upon the Public Health Service, which was then in charge of providing hospitals for ex-service men, by the joint action of Ewing Laporte, then an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and E. L. Morse of Excelsior Springs, who is described as "a prominent politician in that section of the country."

Not only, the report continues, was the price agreed upon for the original Morse plot, $77,000, an excessive one, but this figure was raised overnight to $90,000 by agreement between Morse and Laporte. A real estate expert employed by the Senate committee estimated that the property was worth only $35,000.

Contained in the report are the charges of fraud and corruption in the Veterans' bureau under the directorship of Forbes, and of conspiracy to defraud the Government that were in the original draft.

St. Louis Man Named.

Forbes, C. B. Hurley, president of the Hurley-Mason company of Tacoma, Wash., J. W. Thompson, a St. Louis contractor; the late James W. Black of Chicago, and Elias H. Mortimer of Philadelphia, still are named as parties to an alleged conspiracy.

TEN MILLION DOLLAR HOME BUILDING PROGRAM

Homes of the future must be built by large, well-organized, well-financed institutions in the same practical and efficient way that automobiles, typewriters, sewing machines, farm machinery, etc., are manufactured. Specialization and quantity production must be resorted to, in order to meet the largely increasing needs and to offset high costs. In other words, homes must be manufactured in an efficient factory, so to speak, and sold at wholesale prices to the masses. Such methods are not questioned in other lines. We are proud of our large factories and their reliable products.

The Majestic Homes Corporation, seeing this new order of things, has laid the foundation, built up an organization and is operating its "Majestic Homes Factory" at full capacity. Every tested business method used in other successful enterprises, which is applicable to home building, is employed.

Locations for home buildinz are selected with far-sighted but shrewd caution. These properties are paid out and public improvements installed as soon as purchased, to make possible immediate development. Home buildinz quickly follows to effect carrying charges on vacant ground.

Houses and lots are sold together, requiring one sale at a nominal selling cost, instead of two sales, one for the lot at a large cost and one for the house and lot at the regular rates. The rate of cost of selling newly developed vacant lots is usually five times as great as it costs us to sell our house and lot together.

Our efficient organization can build a home in about one-half the time required by the builder of a single house, for we plan our operations far enouzh ahead to avoid delays.

Every house is financed complete the day it is started, so that no unforeseen element can prevent the perfect operation of our plans.

We buy materials and supplies in enormous quantities of large and responsible firms, who can guarantee delivery, thus preventing delays. We buy only the best materials, for that is what we sell and charge for.

No house is ever priced for sale until its cost has been correctly ascertained, thus eliminating all speculation and risk. We never have two prices on the same house and we will not accept a cut-price offer, even for cash, for our product is always offered at the lowest possible price consistent with value.

Every part of our operations is under our control and supervision, from the unsurveyed land to a completed home, including shades, fixtures, wall decorations, screens, sodding and landscaping. Even the electric light and gas meters are ordered and house is perfectly cleaned by our janitor the day before purchaser moves in.

All public improvements are installed and paid for in advance by us. There are no special taxes or assessments on any property we sell.

Every house we build is designed by our architectural staff and is distinctive, convenient, refined and conforms in every way with the best architectural and engineering practice.

Each department of our work is in charge of men who have had years of successful experience at their respective work. Nothing is left to guess or chance. Estimates are prepared in advance from the plans, and a perfect cost system maintained to keep operations under control.

In advertising our homes, we confine ourselves to an invitation to visit them, for we know they can "speak for themselves." People today know what a home ought to be and we are willing to leave it to their good judgment to make a decision.

Our financing of home buyers is the simplest, easiest and most practical plan obtainable. All but the modest cash payment is carried in one first deed of trust, payable in 120 equal monthly installments including both principal and interest. However, privilege is given to pay off $100 or any multiple, any month in addition to the regular installments, which will reduce the monthly payments. There are no second mortgages, interest dates, or loan renewals in our financing.

The selling of our homes is done by our own "all-star" sales force, composed of cultured and refined gentlemen whom homeseekers are glad to meet and deal with.

"Majestic Homes" are our product and we endeavor at all times to have on hand a number of various sizes, designs and costs to meet the demand.

We now own over 1000 large building lots in choice, highly restricted locations, all of which are being prepared for immediate development. We have upward of 100 homes now under construction which will be ready for spring buyers. 100 more will be started during the next few months and more still follow. The cost of the development now under way will exceed $10,000,000.00 and will require three years' time to complete it.

The shortage of homes, the growing demand for the practical and stable home in a choice location, the high rents which approximate the payments required where homes can be bought on 10-year terms make necessary and possible our home building institution.

We maintain convenient but modest offices at 4035 Delmar Bl., from which all our extensive operations are managed.

COUNTESS SUED FOR $500,000 DAMAGES

Brooklyn Woman Alleges Husband Left Her to Join the Former Margaret Carnegie.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Alienation of her husband's affections was charged today by Mme. Madeline Helen Modica in a suit she filed in Supreme Court asking for $500,000 damages from Countess Margaret Carnegie de Perigny a sister of Harry K. Thaw.

The Countess is alleged to have won the affections of Emanuel Victor Modica some time between October, 1922, and November, 1922. She, with Count de Perigny, are at the Plaza Hotel, having come to America shortly after their marriage in Paris last November.

Wants Letters Produced.

Mme. Modica's $500,000 suit was made known when her attorneys filed application for an order directing Countess de Perigny to show cause why she should not appear in court next Tuesday to testify concerning telegrams and letters in her handwriting she is alleged recenty to have sent to Mme. Modica's husband. The Countess also is alleged to have given him money, automobiles and other valuable gifts.

The Modicas, who were married three years ago, lived in Brooklyn. They had one child. The plaintiff sets forth that her husband deserted her last July to join the Countess in Paris, and that he has not been heard from since.

Mme. Modica's complaint sets forth that she was informed the Countess possessed 25 letters and telegrams sent by her to Emanuel Victor Modica and demanded that the Countess produce these messages in court. Mme. Modica also asserted her attorney had obtained two dozen similar messages sent her husband by the Countess from New York, Woods Hole, Mass., and Pittsburg, Pa.

Case Set for Monday.

Declaring the de Perignys were prepared to sail for Paris next Thursday, and that it would be necessary to examine the Countess before that time, Mme. Modica urged the court to act before the defendant left its jurisdiction. The court put the case first on the calendar for next Monday morning.

YARDMASTER KILLS HIMSELF

George S. Brooks, 58 years old, a yardmaster for the Terminal Railroad Association, killed himself with a revolver at his home, 2749 Ellendale avenue, at 3:30 p. m. yesterday. A son, Daniel Brooks, said that his father had arrived home shortly before, and after a brief conversation, had gone to an upstairs room, the report of the revolver following soon afterward. A physician was called, and Brooks, who had shot himself in the left breast, was taken to city hospital, dying on the way. No reason for his act is known, the son said. He is survived by his wife, Lucy, and 7 children.

OKLAHOMA

Sooners Hand M. V. Leaders First Defeat

Norman Five Outplays Jayhawkers in Second Half and Gains Victory by Score of 26 to 20.

LAWRENCE TEAM HAD WON 34 STRAIGHT

Close Guarding of Both Teams Is Feature of Game — McBride and Wallace High Point Scorers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORMAN, Ok., Feb. 9.—The proud Kansas Jayhawker basketball team has been humbled. The Sooners took the measure of the Kansas five here today, 26—20, and thereby abruptly ended the long string of 34 consecutive victories the Kansans have enjoyed in the past two seasons.

The two quintets fought evenly throughout the first half and the score stood 10 to 10 at the end. In the second period, Oklahoma started a rushing offensive which was apparently too fast for the visitors, and this rush resulted in the Sooners going eight points in the lead.

Great goal shooting by McBride, Valley scoring leader, who tossed five field goals and two free throws, and the brilliant work of Wallace, who registered five field goals, were the deciding factors of the game.

Kansas broke the ice when Ackerman tapped the ball into the cage after the first two minutes of play. Oklahoma retaliated with McBride's angling shot two minutes later. Immediately afterward Kansas came up with another goal by Ackerman and three in a row by Engel from long distances.

Sooners Outplay Rivals.

This sent the Jayhawkers into a five-point lead. The Sooners were able to tie the score, 10—10, just before the first half whistle, when Wheeler's field goal came.

In the second half, Oklahoma showed a superiority throughout. With Wallace and McBride alternating with difficult shots, Oklahoma quickly gained an eight-point lead. The Hawkers came back desperately and cut the lead to four points, where they stayed during most of the second period.

Magnificent guarding of the Kansans forced the Sooners to do their goal shooting from difficult angles. Black and Moseby seldom allowed the Sooners to follow a shot and the superb work of Ackerman in midfloor in intercepting Sooner passes saved Kansas from a worse defeat.

Game Is Cleanly Fought.

While Black and Moseby were dealing misery to the Sooner forwards, Wallace and Dunlap were handing the Jayhawk forwards the same brand of defense, thereby causing the Hawks to resort to long shots. Five times during the game Kansas was able to break through Sooner defense and register short shots and the Sooners turned the same trick seven times.

Few fouls were called during the game. From this standpoint, the contest was one of the cleanest ever played here. Five fouls in all were called, four on Kansas and one on Oklahoma. But two free throws of the seven granted for these infractions were scored.

Both teams fought fiercely, but cleanly. The largest crowd that ever attended a basketball game crowded the Sooner Armory, while many others were turned away.

OKLAHOMA BEATS KANSAS; PIKERS LOSE TO NEBRASKA

Sooners Hand M. V. Leaders First Defeat

Norman Five Outplays Jayhawkers in Second Half and Gains Victory by Score of 26 to 20.

LAWRENCE TEAM HAD WON 34 STRAIGHT

Close Guarding of Both Teams Is Feature of Game — McBride and Wallace High Point Scorers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORMAN, Ok., Feb. 9.—The proud Kansas Jayhawker basketball team has been humbled. The Sooners took the measure of the Kansas five here today, 26—20, and thereby abruptly ended the long string of 34 consecutive victories the Kansans have enjoyed in the past two seasons.

The two quintets fought evenly throughout the first half and the score stood 10 to 10 at the end. In the second period, Oklahoma started a rushing offensive which was apparently too fast for the visitors, and this rush resulted in the Sooners going eight points in the lead.

Great goal shooting by McBride, Valley scoring leader, who tossed five field goals and two free throws, and the brilliant work of Wallace, who registered five field goals, were the deciding factors of the game.

Kansas broke the ice when Ackerman tapped the ball into the cage after the first two minutes of play. Oklahoma retaliated with McBride's angling shot two minutes later. Immediately afterward Kansas came up with another goal by Ackerman and three in a row by Engel from long distances.

Franklin Defeats Concordia, 63-19

Indiana Collegiate Champions Exhibit Wonderful Passing Game Against Locals.

The Franklin College basketball team, collegiate champions of Indiana, ran rough-shod over the Concordia Seminary quintet, winning, 63 to 19, at the Armory last night. Franklin, which has not been defeated in three years, exhibited a wonderful passing game, while players of the five were able to shoot from any angle.

Right forward Gaut was the high point getter with a total of 21, which included 10 field goals and one free throw. Vandivier and C. Friddle each counted seven field goals. For Concordia, Buchheimer and Heins were the outstanding stars.

Concordia's next game will be with St. Louis University, at the Armory, next Saturday night.

CORNELL DEFEATS PENN AND TAKES LEAD IN EASTERN BASKET RACE

By the Associated Press.

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Cornell went into first place in the intercollegiate basketball league today by defeating the University of Pennsylvania, 17 to 14, in a desperately fought game in which the strong defense of both teams was the feature. At the end of the first half the score was: Cornell, 12; Penn, 11.

Penn, however, was unable to gain the tying point in the second half, even though it held down Cornell's scoring and kept the issue in doubt until the last few minutes, when Capron, Cornell right forward, made a spectacular basket that clinched the game.

KENRICK WINS 39—10 GAME FROM TROY, MO.

Kenrick romped over the quintet from Troy, Mo., in annexing its second victory of the week yesterday afternoon on the Kenrick court. The score was 39 to 10. The guarding of the Kenrickites featured the game, while the forwards hit the hoop with regularity.

George Morris and Chartrand divided scoring honors for the Purple and Green, each caging six markers from the field. Chartrand, a newcomer on the Kenrick team, showed his ability in the first game he played, and has displayed stellar basketball ever since.

PRINCIPIA DEFEATED BY WESTERN, 25—19

The Western Military Academy basketball team defeated Principia Academy last night, 25 to 19. At the end of the first half, Western was leading, 18 to 6. Belding was the high point scorer for the winners, with 11, while Clark and Rice topped the losers. In the preliminary, the Western seconds won from the Principia seconds, 21-17, in an overtime game.

THREE SYRACUSE STARS DECLARED INELIGIBLE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 9.—Syracuse University was today given an athletic sensation when Capt. Fasce, star forward, Charley Trout, forward, and Albert Ackley, guard, of the varsity basketball squad, were declared ineligible, because of scholarship deficiencies.

Harris Named New Manager Of Senators

Second Baseman, One of American League's Stars, Is Only 27 Years Old—Succeeds Owen Bush.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.— Appointment of Stanley Harris, regular second baseman on the team since 1920, as manager of the Washington American League Baseball Club, to succeed Owen (Donie) Bush, released at the end of last season, was announced tonight by Clark Griffith, president of the club.

Harris is the youngest manager in the major leagues. He was 27 years old last November and is therefore four years younger than George Sisler, manager of the St. Louis Browns.

His name was recently connected with a proposed trade between the Washington Senators and the Chicago White Sox. It was the desire of Clark Griffith to obtain Eddie Collins of the Chicago team as manager of the Senators, but when Chicago demanded that Harris be included in the trade, Washington balked and the negotiations failed.

Griffth last week made an unsuccessful attempt to engage Ed Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees and former manager of the Boston Americans, as manager of the Senators.

Harris has been a fair hitter and a sensational fielder ever since he joined the Washington club, in 1920. He has been especially conspicuous as the pivot man on double plays and his team has been a consistent leader in double killings for several years.

Washington bought Harris from Buffalo in 1919 for $4000.

DODGE DEFEATS WATSON IN 1000-YARD RUN IN KANSAS CITY A. C. MEET

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 9.—Ray Dodge of the Illinois A. C. defeated his teammate, Ray Watson, in a spectacular 1000-yard match race, one of the features of the annual K. C. A. C. meet here tonight. Dodge pulled out in front near the finish and crossed the line in 2m. 16 1-5s.

Kimport of the Kansas Aggies won the mile open run, nosing out McIntyre of Ames in 4 m. 34 s. Cox of Notre Dame, with a great burst of speed, nosed out Moulder of Missouri in the 880 in 2 m. 3 3-5 s.

Irwin of the Kansas Aggies won the 100-yard run, while the high jump brought a three-cornered tie between Hal Osborne, Tom Poor and Emerson Norton at 6 ft. 4 in. Krogh won the 50-yard high hurdles, while Lee Talbot was the victor in the shot put. The 440-yard open went to Corsett of Des Moines U. Hammerly of Ames was the victor in the 600-yard Missouri Valley championship run. The 50 low hurdles were won by Simpson of Missouri.

Kansas defeated Notre Dame in a mile relay, while Missouri defeated Nebraska's quartet.

Yale Defeats Harvard.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.—Yale defeated Harvard, 3 to 0, in a fast hockey game here tonight, the Blue presenting a passing attack and a tight defense that baffled the Crimson players. After the first period, which was scoreless, the game was all Yale's.

Iowa Wrestlers Win.

ANN HARBOR, Mich., Feb. 9.—The State University of Iowa defeated the University of Michigan in a wrestling match here tonight, Iowa won three matches by decision and three by falls. Michigan won the 145-pound class match by a decision.

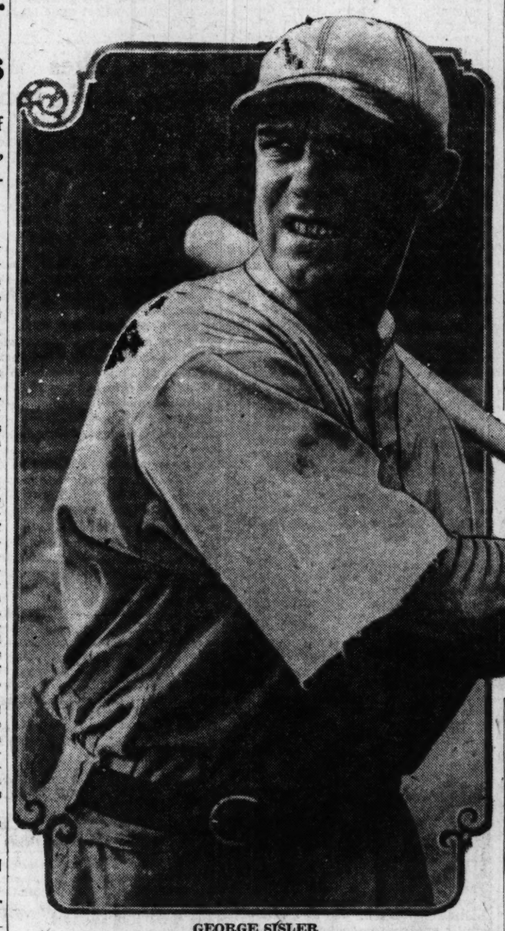
Wilbur Cooper, Star Lefthand Hurler of Pirates, a Holdout

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 9.—Wilbur Cooper, star left-hand pitcher of the Pittsburg Nationals, in a statement made here last night, declared that he and the management of the club had failed to agree upon the terms of a 1924 contract and that he would depart for his home in Columbus, O., tomorrow, without further conferences with club officials.

Barney Dreyfus, president of the club, when questioned concerning Cooper's assertion that there had been a disagreement, said it was because the club refused to permit Mrs. Cooper to accompany her husband to the training camp at the club's expense.

May Pitch if He Can't Play First



GEORGE SISLER

Sisler Will Try to Pitch for The Browns if His Eyes Prevent Him From Playing First Base

Brownie Manager Practicing Daily in California With Idea of Trying His Hand in the Box—Great Slugger Was a Star Hurler as Youth—Beat Walter Johnson Twice.

By J. Roy Stockton.

George Sisler will try to pitch for the Browns the coming season if his eyes do not improve sufficiently to enable him to return to his regular position at first base, the Brownie manager announces in a letter to Walter Fritsch, vice-president of the club.

"I am very confident that I will be able to get into the game at my old place," the letter states. "I have been working out regularly with Jimmie Austin and each day I can note improvement. But even if I should decide that I am not ready to play first base I am absolutely certain that I can try my hand at pitching and I am training with that possibility in view. I am devoting much attention to throwing and to the business of regaining whatever skill I once had as a hurler."

When Sisler joined the Browns in 1915 his fame as a college and semiprofessional pitcher was greater than as a fielder or batter. In 1911 when attending Michigan University he set a record when he struck out 20 men in a seven-inning game. In that game, an inter-class affair in which he faced one of the strongest teams in the university, only six batters made as much as a foul and nobody made a hit.

NATIONAL COLLEGE SWIMMING RECORD SET FOR 100 YARDS

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—One national intercollegiate record and two Western conference records were broken in the Western Conference swimming meet between Northwestern University and Indiana University natators at Evanston tonight, Northwestern winning, 50 to 18.

The Northwestern swimmers broke the Conference 160-yard relay record for a 60-foot tank, making it in 1m. 18 4-10s., two-tenths of a second better than Minnesota did at Iowa last night. Dick Howell, making his first appearance for the purple, established a new national intercollegiate 40-yard crawl when he negotiated the distance in 8 4-5s., one-fifth of a second faster than the old record. He also established a new conference record for the 100-yard free style event which he made in 55 1-5s., one and one-fifth seconds less than the old record.

BOWMAN EQUALS MARK IN JUNIOR TITLE MEET; MOORE SETS RECORD

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 9.—One record was broken and another equaled at the National Junior A. A. U. indoor track and field championships here tonight. R. F. Moore of Columbia clipped 2 1-5 seconds off the record in the two-mile run held by H. S. Helme of La Fayette High School, Buffalo. Moore's time was 9:33 1-5.

Chester Bowman, Syracuse University, equaled the record for the 60-yard run. His time was 6 2-5. The record is held by H. B. Lever of Pennsylvania.

NOTRE DAME WARS ON MIGRATORY ATHLETE

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 9.—Mike Nyikos, star basketball player, who withdrew from Indiana University last week and entered Notre Dame, will be barred from representing the latter school in athletics of any kind, according to a ruling handed down by the Notre Dame athletic board today. The board's action was prompted by a desire to avoid any tinge of irregularity in attracting athletic talent to the school, it was said.

Vespers Oppose Akron Team in Soccer Cup Game

Goodyears Have Clean Slate in Cup Series—Preliminary Game at 1:30 P. M.

By Dent McSkimming.

St. Louis today has an opportunity to add to its remarkable record for conquests in the national soccer championship cup competition when the Vespers of this city oppose the Goodyears of Akron, O., in a western division semifinal match at High School Field.

This city has been represented in the national title competition for the past four years and without fail the local team reached the final although there have been over 100 teams entered each season.

Goodyear has a clean record in cup games this year, having won four games without having a single goal scored by the opposition. This bespeaks a stolid defense, although the class of the opponents is not specifically known in this city. The Vespers, on the other hand, have been scored against three times in five cup games, but the opposition in this case is known to have been of the highest order.

Fink Will Be Missing.

Thoughtful, yet fast and aggressive halfback play has been the most impressive feature of the successful drive of the Vespers this season. This team asset may not be so prominent in the scheme of things this afternoon for the reason that one-third of the halfback line is missing. Capt. Ollie Fink, the regular right halfback for several seasons, is out with a serious knee injury. His understudy, Irv Wimer, is nothing amiss as an attacker, but it is probable that he will not prove so valuable a man as Fink on the defense. His ability to move up with the forwards may offset his limited knowledge of defensive tactics. The Vespers, on the whole, will not be tremendously affected by the absence of their field captain.

Goodyear is a team of foreign born players, one of them captain of the French international team in 1921. That is a matter of but three years ago and it is therefore expected that Armand Young, the center forward, will prove a star today. He is said to be an aggressive fellow and a good goal getter. He was ejected for fighting in a cup game last Sunday at Akron but the evidence proved that he struck a punch only after being illegally attacked by an opponent and the cup committee declined to rule him ineligible for today's game.

Imported Scotch.

Fourteen players, officials and a small contingent of fans made up the Goodyear party when it arrived here yesterday.

Cornhuskers Surprise Local Team by Running Up Early Lead—Hold Advantage at End of First Half by 12-10.

Washington University's hopes for a Missouri Valley Conference basketball title were shot to pieces last night by the accuracy of the University of Nebraska players, who crushed the Piker machine by a 32 to 24 score before a capacity crowd at Francis Gymnasium.

Referee—Fred Williams (Mo.).

The defeat was all the more bitter to the Piker fans, for Oklahoma had earlier in the evening defeated the leading Kansas quintet and a victory last night would have put the Red and Green machine within striking distance of the title.

The Pikers earlier in the contest showed that they were off form.

Machine Out of Gear.

The passing was loose and inaccurate and the players seemed to be without their usual confidence. Minner and Wagener, the Piker forwards who usually play a stellar brand of ball, were woefully off their stride. Minner, usually one of the deadliest shots in the conference, failed to scare a single basket from the floor, while Wagener slipped in one late in the game.

The game was not as one-sided as the final score might indicate. Nebraska led all the way during the first half, and when the period closed were in front by a 12-10 score. However, the Pikers had been climbing steadily and were still considerably in the running.

When the second half started the Pikers began with a rush and the score was soon evened at 16—16, largely through the splendid work of Russ Seago, center, who, however, received strong support from the guards, Cox and Well.

Pikers Lead Twice.

The Pikers went ahead twice—once at 17—16 and again at 21—20. Minner and Wagener had, however, been removed from the game to rest for a few minutes, but the Pikers couldn't keep up the pace, and Nebraska again forged into the lead. The Piker forwards were again sent into the fray, and a basket by Wagener had the Pikers within striking distance at 24—25, with about two minutes to play.

Then it was that Black, who had been substituted at forward for Nebraska in place of Capt. Usher, broke loose and scored seven straight points to clinch the game for the visitors. He made good on three free throws and two goals from the floor, while the Pikers were unable to score.

Seago Individual Star.

Although Nebraska captured the game, individual honors went to Russ Seago, Piker center. Seago led the scorers, with six field goals, for a total of 12 points, but even his fine shooting was excelled by his brilliant floor work. Time and again he would dart and dribble his way through the Cornhusker defense to make good on a shot that seemed all but impossible. Cox and Well, the Piker guards, also played superiatively.

Goodson, the visitors' lanky center, led his team by scoring 11 points, a number of them the result of some unusually difficult shooting. However, Goodson's steady service was overshadowed by the flashy conclusion of the game furnished by Black, who scored nine points for his teammates, all of them in the second period, when Nebraska needed points most.

Nebraska Scores First.

Nebraska began with a rush and drew first blood when Volz caged a shot from the middle of the floor. Cozier made good on two free throws and Nebraska was leading, 4-0. Cox, Piker guard, dribbled through the Cornhusker defense for a pretty shot, but Cozier sank another long shot for Nebraska and registered on two free throws shortly afterwards, and the Cornhuskers were leading, 8-2.

The Pikers then took time out to think it over. The Red and Green players were evidently off their game as inaccurate passes and wild shots were frequent. Nebraska was getting three and four shots at the basket for every Piker attempt to score.

Pikers Come to Life.

When play was resumed, Minner added a point to the Piker score by sinking a free throw and Seago added two more on a shot made possible by his clever floor work. Well threw a free goal and the

UNITED STATES SQUASH PLAYERS LEAD ENGLAND IN INTERNATIONAL EVENT

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 9.—The United States was leading England by two-thirds of a point tonight as a result of the first day's play in the squash racquets international championship played today at the Merion Cricket Club, Haverford. The winner will be decided tomorrow at the Germantown Cricket Club when the United States and England will play five matches, the victor gaining possession of the International Lapham Cup.

The United States today won 14 of the 15 matches played with the Canadians, the only loser among the Americans being R. Paddock of Detroit, who fell a victim to R. H. Parmenter, Canada.

Each match counted one-third of a point, the American score being 4 2-3 points to Canada's 1-3 point.

England won four of the five matches from Canada in this round, each match counting one point, giving England a score of four points to Canada's one.

ST. LEOS INCREASE LEAD IN GROUP TWO BY BEATING STAGS

The St. Leos strengthened their hold on first place in Group Two in Fairground divison of the Municipal Soccer League by winning from the Stags yesterday, 6 goals to 0. The Ben Millers and Trumbulls, tied for second place, played a 1-1 tie. The Saturday double-header was made necessary to play off postponed games.

With six games remaining to be played, the Leos have a lead of one and one-half over their rivals. The same teams play today.

LEADERS UNCHANGED IN CITY PIN EVENT

M. Fredericks and F. Wedig with a score of 1157 paced the two-man teams rolling in the city scratch tournament on the Congress alleys last night, while A. Sharpe, with 629, was high in the singles. These totals, however, failed to gain a place in the first five.

Bostic and Feuser with 1152, Lenz and Bechmeyer 1115, Steinman and Arthur 1112, Sharpe and Lechler 1110, and Jelinek and Welz 1107 were others to roll good totals in the doubles.

Sharpe's total was the only 600 score in the singles. Other good marks were Pfyl 597, Welz 595, Fox 591 and Lechler 578.

Doubles and singles will be rolled today.

Brookins Sets New Indoor Record for 60-Yard Hurdles

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Feb. 9.

CHARLES R. BROOKINS, world's champion hurdler, set what is believed to be a world's record for the 60-yard low hurdles event on an indoor track at the University of Iowa relay carnival here today, covering the distance in 6 2-5 seconds.

No official record for this event has been recognized, but university officials say they will apply to the National A. A. U. Records Committee to have Brookins' time accepted as official.

McKinley Beats Soldan and Goes Into First Place

Poor Goal Shooting of Members of Both Teams Holds Score Down to 12 to 9.

CENTRAL FIVE IS VICTOR

Mid-City Quintet Holds Yeatman to One Field Basket and One Free Throw.

McKinley High School defeated Soldan, 12 to 9, in the interscholastic Basketball League tonight and went into first place in the race for the championship. While the low score would indicate that both quintets played a fine defensive game, this was not the truth. It was the poor basket shooting of the rival players that held down the score.

McKinley was the first to score, Ittner netting a free throw. Soldan came back with field baskets by Shaw and Lawrence, and just before the first quarter ended, Freeman netted a field basket for McKinley. In the second period, three free throws brought McKinley's total to six, while the West Enders failed to tally.

Two pretty field baskets by Freeman and one by Ittner brought the McKinley total up to 12 in the third quarter, Soldan again failing to tally. With a shifted lineup in the final period, Soldan held McKinley without a point, while Hemker, who went to left forward for the West End five, netted a field basket and three free throws for the only points of the quarter.

Central Wins Easily.

Central, which in actual play has won five games, but is credited with one victory and four defeats in standings, because four contests were ruled forfeited because of the ineligibility of Player Thomas, defeated Yeatman, 13 to 3, in the second clash. The mid-city team exhibited a tight defense and the North Siders scored but one field basket that in the fourth quarter.

In the first period, but one point was scored, that by Gockel on a free throw. In the second, Browne tossed a field basket for Central while Layton counted a free throw for Yeatman, the half ending 3—1 in favor of the mid-city five.

Central spurted at the start of the second half and two field baskets by Cristal, a shot from beyond center by Hunt and another field goal from below the basket by Connors brought the score up to 11 to 1. In the final period, Connors scored for Central, while Muchow netted the only field basket for Yeatman.

RUSSIAN CHESS EXPERT TO PLAY IN ST. LOUIS

Alexander Alechine, Russian chess expert, will give an exhibition of his prowess in St. Louis on Monday night, Feb. 18, when he meets 40 local chess enthusiasts in simultaneous play. It has not been decided as yet where the games will be held.

A committee of chess players representing the Missouri Pacific, People's, St. Louis and Washington University chess clubs has been formed to promote interest in the game here and to insure the success of Alechine's exhibition. L. T. Maener of the Missouri Pacific Club is chairman of the committee.

Alechine came to this country from Russia recently and has been attracting much attention by his playing. At Montreal recently, while blindfolded, he played 21 opponents simultaneously. He is said to be in line to challenge Capablanca, the Cuban marvel, for the world's chess championship.

games with the Browns in 1915. The record book shows that he won four and lost five games. The opposing batters made 62 hits in 251 times at bat, scored 22 earned runs for an average of 2.33 a game. He gave 38 bases on balls and struck out 38 batters. One of his four 1915 victories was a 2—1 triumph over Walter Johnson.

After that year Sisler's prowess as a hitter and fielder prevented his being used as a pitcher. In 1916 he worked only three games. He lost to Reb Russell of the White Sox, 2 to 0; beat Walter Johnson of the Senators, 1 to 0, and lost to Siebold of the Athletics, 2 to 0.

His game with Walter Johnson will long be remembered. That one game probably was responsible for thousands of queries each year from fans who wanted to know why George wasn't pitched regularly. It was a Sunday game and it was widely advertised long in advance that the great George Sisler was going to pitch against the great Fireball King. The box office was right. The game packed the park and Sisler made it a perfect day by blanking the great Johnson, 1 to 0.

Six Hits off Sisler.

The box score of that game, played Sept. 17, 1916, shows that Sisler gave six hits while Johnson held the Browns to four. Two of the six hits off Sisler were fluke hits, so the sport pages of the following day tell us. Shotton and Ward Miller missing flies after hard runs.

In that game Johnson struck out eight men and Sisler six. Each gave two bases on balls and each hit a batter. The victory gave Sisler two straight over Johnson, the Brownie having scored his first triumph over the Fireball King on Aug. 20, 1915.

In 1917 Sisler pitched only one inning and that was in an exhibition game. In 1918 he worked in only seven innings as a pitcher and thereafter stuck regularly to his position at first base where he made his great reputation, gaining fame as one of the greatest players in the history of the game.

Rickey Selects Toney to Coach Young Pitchers

Mountaineer, Despite Vocabulary, a Master of Technique, Branch Explains.

Politics may make strange bedfellows, but there could be no stranger combination than the one announced by the Cardinals this week-end. Imagine Branch Rickey, picking Fred Toney, mountaineer with a mountaineer's vocabulary, to guide the destinies of green young men who may stray into the Cardinal fold with a desire to become pitchers.

"I can't imagine it," said Bill Veeck, president of the Cubs, when he was told of the plan at the recent National League meeting by Sam Breadon. "I know Rickey's reputation and I know that Toney would not call a spade by any such innocent monosyilable unless he was lockjawed out of his usual string of more or less beautifying adjectives. How come? Are the Ku Klux Klan and the Knights of Columbus going to play a basketball game at the negro Y. M. C. A. for the benefit of the Jewish Relief? I would not be surprised at anything now."

Rickey was asked about the plan yesterday.

A Master of Technique.

"Certainly Toney is going to coach my young pitchers. And there are scores of reasons why he is one of the best coaches I could pick for such an assignment. In the first place, you ballplayers flock to Toney like little chicks to a mother hen. Toney is a natural teacher. He has the patience of a Job and is the best instructor in pitching technique I ever met. Perhaps his environment during adolescence caused his vocabulary to be a little warped, but he has a wonderful personality.

"He must have the stuff when college men like Stuart and Dyer will come to him and beg for lessons. Not that anyone has to beg long. Just show a little interest and Toney will give you hours and hours. Why, Toney changed Stuart's curve and gave him his best pitching asset. He taught Eddie Dyer to throw his fadeaway. He gave Clough a slow ball and taught another member of the staff a change of pace.

"Toney will give a youngster hours on the field, and demonstrate for additional hours using the hotel lobby or dinner table as his laboratory. I consider Toney one of the most valuable instructors among the Cardinals and count heavily on his developing my pitching staff.

"He won't tolerate indifference or big headedness. When a pitcher does not follow his instructions and does not toil to perfect his curves Toney does not call him an indifferent person. He uses beautifully expressive—though scarcely parlor language—to describe those fellows who are lazy or who know it all. But that's just language with Toney. It's not vulgar language. It's just language, the only kind he knows."

Toney Has Will to Win.

Rickey says that Toney's interest in the young pitchers and his desire to teach them will result in his reporting early at training camp this year for the first time in his career.

"I agree with John McGraw, who said he wished he could always have nine men on the field with Toney's winning spirit," said Rickey. "He is a hard loser. He loves to win. After a losing ball game he will sit for an hour after a game, on the bench or in the clubhouse, moping and replaying the game. He hates to lose. He can't tolerate a loser, an easy loser. He instills in men the spirit, the will to win, and that is another reason he is an invaluable baseball coach for my young pitchers. Too many pitchers think of what salary they can get. Toney thinks only of how he can win. I wish I had more like him."

Chicago Takes Lead in Big Ten

Maroons Come From Behind to Defeat Michigan Five, 20 to 18.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—University of Chicago tonight took the lead in the Western Conference basketball race by defeating Michigan, 20 to 18, in a hard fought game in which Michigan led throughout the first half, which ended 9 to 4.

The game put Chicago in the lead with five games won and one lost, and caused Michigan to recede to a tie with Wisconsin for third place, with three games won and one lost. Purdue going into second place with four games won and one lost.

Chicago launched a strong offensive at the start of the second half, tying the score at 11 all. After that each team alternately took the lead, the final whistle blowing when Chicago was leading by two points.

Hagerty, Michigan forward, was the star of the game with 12 points. Dickson and Barnes, forwards, starred for Chicago.

Lineup and summary:

CHICAGO (20)	Pos.	MICH. (18)

score was 8-6; Nebraska leading. After several Nebraska attempts, Volz poked the ball in from under the Washington basket and the visitors were leading, 10-8.

Seago scored on a nice pass from Minner. Goodson, however, made good on a toss for Nebraska, and the visitors were still leading, 12-8. Lyle was substituted for Wagener, who was evidently not playing in his usual flashy form. Cox again raised a storm of applause by throwing a basket for the Pikers from a difficult angle as the first half ended with Nebraska leading, 12-10.

PIKER FOOTBALL STARS AWARDED SWEATERS

Varsity sweaters, with letters, were awarded to 13 Piker football players last night between halves of the Washington-Nebraska basketball game. A sweater and letter also was awarded to the manager of the team, and two letters were awarded for cross-country running, in addition to a number of freshmen football numerals.

The football players who received the award were: Capt. Cantwell, Capt.-elect Walsh, Lyle Hutton, Levy, Weil Kurrus, Hersch, Semple, Neupert, Claypool, Goessling, Floun and Manager Wylie.

Letters for cross-country running were awarded to Capt. Shirley Capps and Dave Savignac.

Don't Use the Brassie Unless You Have a Good Lie, Sarazen Advises

When in Doubt Take Your Spoon or Iron and Make Sure of Getting the Ball Up, Is Professional Champion's Tip—Don't Hurry the Back Swing.

By GENE SARAZEN
(American Professional Champion).

One of the most difficult shots for most golfers is the brassie. The majority of players I know never play this club with any confidence and they miss the shot oftener than they make it because of this lack of confidence.

Before proceeding with any suggestions as to how to play the brassie, I want to say that unless you are extremely adept in handling your brassie never try to use it unless you have a good lie. The chances are you will top the ball. And if is better, when your ball is not lying in good position, to use your spoon or iron and to make sure of getting the ball up.

Your brassie should be a bit heavier than your driver. Select a club in which you can feel the weight of the club head. Do not get a brassie with a straight face in the club head. The face of the club should be laid back considerably, but not too much so.

Whenever my pupils complain of topping their brassie shots I advise them to turn both hands over so that they are on top of the shaft. You will probably lose some power in gripping this club in this manner, but you will be more certain of obtaining direction and also of getting the ball into the air.

Address the ball about opposite the center line of the feet. Unless you use an open stance, play the ball more off the left foot than the right. If you have a tendency to hook, abandon the open stance and address the ball with both feet in line.

Hurrying Swing a Drawback.

Many golfers miss brassie shots because they hurry the back swing too much. Having taken your stance properly the next thing to do is to take the club back slowly and evenly. Don't hurry the swing under any circumstances. The slower the back swing the more certain will you be of getting your shot away correctly.

If you find you are pushing your brassie shots as so many do, stand closer to the ball. You want to hit a brassie shot as easily as possible and if you have to reach for the ball your shot will cost you considerable effort.

Don't overswing. Keep the left arm as straight as possible and endeavor to complete the stroke without bending the elbow of the left arm during any part of the stroke. This suggestion doesn't mean you must keep the left arm rigid. There is a difference between keeping it fairly straight and keeping it rigid.

Of course it should be needless to tell you to keep your eye on the ball. Nevertheless, more brassie shots are missed because of lifting the head and of hurrying the swing than any other reasons I know of.

Keep Elbows Close.

In order to make sure of getting the ball into the air think of hitting through the ball. Do not try to take the ball cleanly from the turf with the club head, but rather drive it downward as if you were going to smash the ball into the ground.

Many golfers use their brassies for their second shots, regardless of conditions. Even if you are 200 yards or more from the green it is better to make sure of getting off a good shot with an iron and depending on your chip shot for your par, rather than miss with the brassie. In that case you will have a much longer shot to green for your third and if the course is trapped properly you very likely will be in trouble.

If you have a down-hill lie and you want to use your brassie, address the ball fairly well forward of the center line of the feet. If you have an uphill lie play the ball more off the right foot.

One thing more to remember: Always keep the hands well down and in close to the body. This will aid you in taking the club back correctly and will also help you to keep the elbows in close when you are swinging the club.

Municipal Team To Face Pros in Olympic Benefit

Eleven Will Battle to Help Send American Team to Europe.

ST. LOUIS QUOTA $20,000

League and Wrestlers Pledged to Volunteer Aid for U. S. Team.

Charles S. Reber, former world's champion high jumper, who recently was appointed local representative by the Olympic Games committee to head a drive to raise $20,000 from this district for the expenses of the American Olympic team at Paris yesterday disclosed some of his plans.

One of the features of the drive to help put the American Olympic team over the top financially, according to Mr. Reber, will be a soccer game between a picked eleven representing the Municipal League and another picked team from the professional league.

Superintendent of Public Recreation William F. Yorger when approached on the subject of enlisting a municipal eleven said that he would not only guarantee one but that he could also guarantee a victory over the professional team. Municipal League has developed some surprisingly strong players.

Will Have Strong Eleven.

While no municipal team as now constituted would be able to defeat any of the "pro" league teams, I can select one that will be hard to beat. The Olympic committee can count on the full support of the municipal association in this matter.

President Winton E. Barker was first approached about the question of supplying a picked team to oppose the municipal eleven was not enthusiastic. Secretary T. W. Cahill and Barker, after a consultation, decided that the Olympic cause needed an uplift from the professionals and decided to lend their aid also. A picked team from the professional league which will include leading players of the four elevens will be announced later.

All expenses of the game will be defrayed by the competing clubs and the net will be given to the Olympic fund. It is expected that a municipal-professional game will yield not less than $5000 profit, one-fourth of the total amount to be raised by the Olympic committee here.

Wrestlers to Give Support.

Another move made by Mr. Reber and his first aid, Bernard Duff, was to enlist the support of local wrestlers. A carnival of wrestling and other events to be held at the Coliseum is being arranged. Promoter Tom Packs, when advised of the purpose of the Olympic committee, readily consented to help out and guaranteed that Jim Londos or perhaps Champion Ed Lewis would appear in behalf of the Olympic fund.

Further plans for raising funds are to be forwarded by the committee and will be announced later.

Mr. Reber said yesterday that the drive was not merely one of civic duty to support members from the home district, but was national in scope.

"The fact that this Olympiad is in St. Louis with only one representative, Loren Murchison, would not cause St. Louisans to forget that we still owe a national duty to the team. In times past we sent Joe Forshaw, Mark Charts and other St. Louisans to the front. We were certain then to win the track and field title, one we have not failed to win as the games were inaugurated in 1896. This time, however, the situation is different. The last time at Antwerp, we won by a margin of only one first place. This time, if we have any accidents, we may not get that extra first. We therefore will have to rely upon seconds and thirds. Only in case we have sufficient funds will we be able to send the full quota of seven men, which, under the rules, is the limit allowed from each nation in each track and field event."

First Speedway Entry.

Bonus System to Be Abolished by National League

Mathewson to Bring Up Subject at Meeting of Magnates Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Legislation against the bonus now writ... into baseball contracts and offe... either for playing excellence or ... games won by pitchers will ... pushed at the midwinter meet... of the National League here ... Tuesday, it was revealed today.

Abolishment on the bonus ... urged by Christy Mathewson, pre... ident of the Boston club, at ... annual meeting in Chicago last D... cember, but it was opposed by New... York and Philadelphia magnates. ... Mathewson will bring the matter ... up again next week.

Adoption of the 1924 schedu... appointment of the umpire staff ... President John A. Heydler, a re... port on the league's golden jubil... celebration in 1925 and a plan to ... select the most valuable player ... each club will be among other im... portant matters before the meeting.

To Select Valuable Players.

The scheme for selecting each club's outstanding star is expected to be introduced by Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis club. It is a modification of the plan pro... posed by the Baseball Writers' As... sociation to both major leagues several years ago to select the most valuable player in each league. This was accepted by the American League but tabled by the senior circuit which, it is believed, favors having the baseball writers pick the most valuable player on each of the eight clubs. Out of this selection, according to Breadon, and as a result of the tabulated vote, the league's outstanding star might emerge, but this would be secondary. It is proposed to give an appropriate award to the stars selected under this plan.

The league may act to limit the number of coaches each team may have. Under the changes made at Chicago, men who act exclusively as coaches are not counted under the player limit rule.

Instructions to umpires to throw fewer new baseballs into play in games, as a curb on the liveliness of the sphere, probably will be announced by President Heydler. It is pointed out that in 1923 the league used 42,756 balls, an increase of 5280 over 1922.

Plans for the golden jubilee will be reported by the special committee composed of Christy Mathewson, Boston; William Veeck, Chicago; Barney Dreyfuss, Pittsburg, and Charles H. Ebbets, Brooklyn.

She Established World Record for 300-Metre Swim

MISS HELEN WAINWRIGHT.

WOOSTER LAMBERT TEAM SETS TWO HIGH MARKS

The Wooster Lambert team of the Major City League established two records for the bowlers of the city to shoot at when the quintet counted 3110 for high three and 1127 for high single game. The team started with 1017, came back with 966 and then came the record count—one of the best rolled here in years.

In compiling the 1127, Vierheller totaled 209, Grubb 202, Meyer 279, Oberbeck 199 and Whitehead 238.

Meyer had a total of 695, high three for the league this season; Vierheller totaled 642, Whitehead 607, Oberbeck 591 and Grubb was low with 575. In spite of the record total, the team won but two of the three from the Schaefers.

Earlier in the week, the Schaefer Recreations bowled a high single game of 1106 in the Business Men's League. The team went over the 3000 mark for the three.

Navy Wins Swim Meet.

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 9.—Navy varsity swimmers easily defeated University of Pittsburg today, 37 to 16, winning the 160-yard relay and all other events with the exception of the 200-yard breast stroke, in which Brodie and Kern finished first and second, respectively.

McGill and Lewis to Open Mat Game In New York City

Jack Curley, Granted a License, Will Hold His First Show on Feb. 12.

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Champion Ed Lewis, the leading catch-as-catch-can wrestler of the world today, astonished all St. Louis fans by presenting himself for his match with Renato Gardini here in good condition. Instead of the 15 or 20 pounds of blubber, dotted with boils or carbuncles, with an occasional protection of adhesive tape over the more sensitive ones, Lewis was well trained when he stepped into the ring last Tuesday. His ribs were all but showing and there was some definition to his muscles.

This most unusual condition attracted the attention of St. Louisans—who wondered at it until it was learned that Lewis is all set for a comeback in New York Feb. 12, when he meets Pat McGill.

Lewis' hard training was not due to fear that McGill will defeat him, although he thinks highly of Pat. The fact is Lewis expects the New York campaign to lead ultimately to a defense of his title against some good man, name unknown, possibly Joe Stecher, with a big prize such as only New York promoters can guarantee as the reward of the champion win, lose or draw.

Lewis After Big Game.

For two years or more, since Muldoon put the lid on Jack Curley and the wrestling game, Lewis has been gleaning through Western fields picking up small crumbs.

The grand total is imposing, it is true; probably in two years Lewis has earned for himself $100,000. But that's only about one-third what Dempsey makes in one fight and Lewis is ambitious to emulate Dempsey's finances. New York can turn the cards for him, and hence Ed is out to be in shape to take advantage of his new opportunity.

STUFF THAT PENNANTS ARE MADE OF

By Herman Weeks

This is the first of a series of articles giving information about the recruits who will receive tryouts this Spring with major league baseball clubs. The first deals with new comers who will try for places on the St. Louis clubs. The others will appear from time to time.

No. 1—THE ST. LOUIS CLUBS

Nine players who batted better than .300 in the minors last season will be given tryouts with St. Louis' major league teams this spring. Of this total, five will go south with the Browns and four with the Cardinals.

Included in the list of rookies, who will strive for regular berths with the Browns, is a player who swatted better than .300 in two leagues in 1923. He is Rice, an infielder, who made the 1923 spring training trip. Rice played 101 games at Danville and finished with a mark of .355. Then he went to Tulsa and in 34 clashes compiled a mark of .403. Combined he rapped out 22 home runs. His combined batting average for the two circuits was .368.

All the other select circle hitters who will be taken to Mobile by George Sisler were on the reserve list of the team last spring. They are Rich, a pitcher and outfielder, who did not report last season and who swatted .367 at Morristown in the Appalachian League; Herschel Bennett, recalled from Tulsa, who hit .336; Mizeur, back from Saginaw, .328, and Simon, third sacker, who comes back from San Antonio, who had a mark of .322.

Kane Leads Cards' Rookies.

Of the Cardinal youngsters, the leader is Kane, an outfielder, who was drafted from the Birmingham club, but who played with Saginaw last year. He compiled a batting mark of .336 in 126 battles. Lester Bell, the shortstop from Houston, who finished the 1923 campaign with the Cardinals, comes next with .315, and then come Douthitt, an outfielder, and Dyer, pitcher, who had marks of .305 in the Western Association and Texas League, respectively.

Among the new pitchers who will strive for places with the local clubs, Lyons, obtained in the trade with the Los Angeles club by the Browns, stands out prominently. While Lyons won but 18 and lost 16, his efficiency record places him ahead of all the other candidates. In 269 innings he permitted 102 earned runs, an average of 3.43 a game. Meine with 5.13 and Payne 5.76 were the only other flingers in leagues in which pitchers were ranked on the efficiency basis.

Of the others, Voight, who comes from the Denver club and had a brief tryout with the Giants at one time, looks best. He won 19 and lost 22 with Denver, one of the tailenders in the Western League flag race, and pitched in 322 innings, being the iron man of the youngsters coming to the Browns. Rich won nine and lost six in the Appalachian circuit, while Blaeholder and Grant both finished under .500 in the Three-I League.

Delaney Won 15, Lost Five.

Of the Cardinal newcomers who were members of clubs in organized baseball last year, Delaney has the best record. He won 15 and dropped but five with Dubuque in the Mississippi Valley circuit, and ranked second among the hurlers of that circuit. In 172 innings he yielded 53 runs, which includes earned as well as unearned markers.

Next comes Fred Wigington, right-hander, brought back from Fort Smith. He labored in 270 innings and won 18 contests and lost 12. Allan Sothoron comes next, while Berley and Dyer bring up the rear. Although he yielded 5.85 earned runs a game in the Texas, Dyer hurled good ball after joining the Cardinals late last fall.

While Rice stands out as the star batter among the Brownie rookies, his fielding mark is nothing to boast of. With Danville he played at second, third and short. As a shortstop he fielded .885; at second, .952, and at the far corner, .937. With Tulsa he fielded .856 in 34 games at third, which seems to indicate that Rice is quite a batter, but a bit shy on fielding.

Miss Bauer Sets Two World Marks

Two Other Records Are Shattered in Women's Swimming Meet.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 9.—Three world's and one American record were added today to the list of those already broken in the women's swimming meet here, bringing the total of new records established to 14 world and three American marks.

Sybil Bauer established her fourth and fifth world's records of this week, and Helen Wainwright, in breaking her first record of the week, clipped almost 15 seconds off the Olympic record and 10 and a fifth seconds off her own world's record for the 200 meters free style. Miss Wainwright's time was 4:19 3-5, while her old world's record was 4:29 4-5 and the Olympic record is 4:34.

Sybil Bauer's new records were established in the 200 meters and the 200 yards. Her time in the 200 meters was 3:03 4-5 against her former record of 3:06 4-5, while in the 200 yards her time was 2:46 3-5 against the old mark of 2:49 4-5.

Agnes Gerahty in the 100 meter breast stroke event set a new American record of 1:33 4-5. The old mark was 1:51 2-5.

FEELING BADLY?

Iron Starvation

Of the blood, perhaps and your worn - out, exhausted nerves need to be revitalized.

For this purpose there is nothing better than Organic Iron, not metallic iron which people usually take, but pure Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. One dose of Nuxated Iron is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one quart green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat.

Over four million people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich the blood.

Nature Put Iron for Your Blood

In the husks of grains and the peels and skins of fruits and vegetables.

But modern methods of cooking throw all these things away—hence the alarming increase in anemia—iron starvation of the blood, with its never-ending trend of symptoms of nervous irritability, general weakness, fatigue, disturbed digestion, headaches, pains across the back, etc.

Either go back to nature or take Organic Iron — Nuxated Iron — to help enrich your blood and revitalize your worn-out, exhausted nerves.

Flintstone Wins Esplanade Stake At New Orleans

Ivan Parke Scores Victories With Dr. Clark and Wilmer the Wizard.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 9.—L. McDermott emphasized the belief of many that he ranks close to Ivan Parke in the matter of horsemanship at the local track, after he got home in front with Flintstone in the Esplanade handicap, which featured today's card. Flintstone beat Rinkey and Cloughjordan.

Parke Scores on Dr. Clark.

When Dr. Clark returned to the judges' stand after defeating Exodus and Certain in the third race, Jockey Ivan Parke openly displayed pleasure as he affectionately patted the Goldblatt racer. It is hard to say whether it was the fact that it was his first triumph in two days, or a nose decision over what was probably the best horse in the race—Exodus, that pleased him most.

Parke had just failed to score with Jou Jou, a heavily played odds-on favorite in the second and the race he rode on Dr. Clark was one of the do-or-die kind.

Parke came back again in the fifth and won the John Philip Sousa purse aboard Wilmer the Wizard.

PUBLIC RECEPTION FOR AMERICAN SKATERS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Plans for a public reception for America's Olympic skating team when they arrive Feb. 12 on the Berengaria, were announced today by Joseph K. Savage, president of the International Skating Union.

A citizens' committee with a band will go down the bay to meet the Berengaria and serenade the skaters. The reception ashore, if there is time, probably will be held in one of the big ice rinks, after which they will go to New Rochelle for the Metropolitan championships, to be held the afternoon of Feb. 12.

The skaters will leave that night for Saranac Lake, where the national outdoor speed championships will start Feb. 13.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. Then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips. By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

An Excellent Plan for Everybody

Those persons and agencies who are working for the promotion of better Health among the American public, particularly emphasize the importance of guarding your eyesight.

You are urged to adopt the plan of having your eyes tested at least once each year, whether or not you feel the necessity for glasses.

If you do this you will in all probability save yourself much pain and annoyance and likewise conserve your energy—for very trivial defects of vision which are not promptly corrected—are a great drain on your nervous energy.

My careful system of eye testing is the result of over twenty years' practice and research in the field of defective vision. I employ no drops or drugs nor is there any pain or annoyance of any kind. One moderate charge includes testing, lenses, frames and fitting.

When His Child Whispered the Truth

Daddy Woke Up!

—He was weak, nervous and run-down. Overwork and worry had played him out.

—His blood was pale, thin and watery. His face looked tired and lined with care. His shoulders stooped,—his footsteps dragged.

THEN—to please his little girl he tried NUXATED IRON—which contains iron, like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and like the iron in your blood.

TODAY—He is Strong, Vigorous and Well—He looks years younger—Always ready and keen for active work or play,—in fact—LIKE A NEW MAN AGAIN!

NUXATED IRON is a powerful strength and body builder. It helps make rich, red blood, steadies the nerves and gives added resistance against disease.

TRY taking NUXATED IRON for two weeks and note the amazing change in your general health, vigor and energy. You should be astonished at the results in even a few days time. Success guaranteed or money refunded. At all druggists.

"What's the Matter, Daddy? You used to look so young and strong I thought I would marry you when I grew up; but now you seem so tired and worn-out all the time. You never want to play with me any more. I heard Mamma tell Auntie that if you would only take some of that NUXATED IRON that helped her so much, it would soon make you strong and well again. Won't you, please, take NUXATED IRON, Daddy, so you will want to play with us like you used to?"

'WORLD'S LARGEST MIGRATION COMING UNLESS U. S. ACTS'

Report on Immigration Bill Points Out That Present Act Expires June 30 Next.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Present plans call for the House to consider the Johnson immigration bill as soon as it disposes of tax legislation. Chairman Johnson of the immigration committee today filed a report on the measure, signed by 14 committee members. Dissenting views will be presented by three other members.

Pointing out that the present 3 per cent law, based on the 1910 census, expires June 30, next, the report declared there was "immediate and urgent need for enactment of immigration legislation."

"The committee is advised," the report continued, "that the number of aliens desiring to enter the United States is very large. It is reasonable to assume that, despite unfavorable exchange rates, high steamship tariffs and other untoward factors, an immigration of between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 would have entered the United States during each of the past two years if the 3 per cent law had not barred the way.

"Largest Migration in History."

"If the 3 per cent law is permitted to expire, and if no other legislation is enacted, the movement to our shores of the largest migration of peoples in the history of the world may be expected to begin July 1, 1924. The exclusion clauses of the act of Feb. 5, 1917, will be powerless to stay the tide.

"Such a situation should not be permitted to arise. The country demands the restriction of immigration. The public demand is not only for restriction but for more rigid and more effective restriction than that imposed at present."

Provisions of the Johnson bill were summed up in the report as follows:

Preserves the basic immigration law of 1917.

Retains the principle of numerical limitation as inaugurated in the act of May 19, 1921.

Changes Quota Base.

Changes the quota base from the census of 1910 to the census of 1890.

Reduces the percentage from 3 to 2, plus a small base quota for each country.

Counts certificates, not persons.

Provides for preliminary examination overseas.

Exempts wives, children, under 18, and parents over 55, of American citizens.

Reduces classes of exempted aliens.

Places burden of proof on alien rather than on the United States.

Meets the situation with reference to admission of persons ineligible to citizenship.

Carries numerous sections to lessen hardships of immigrants.

Japanese Section.

In tightening the bars against immigration of Japanese and other Orientals, the bill provides that the only ones eligible for admission to the United States are Government officials, their families and attendants, tourists, business men and seamen entering the country for a temporary stay, ministers, teachers and students, and those previously admitted lawfully who are returning from a visit abroad.

One section of the report was devoted to the need for repopulating American farms through immigration. The public has been led to believe that "selection" means some system of hand picking of the nationals of other countries by persons in the United States who might give them employment on land at specified places, the report said, adding that the committee had found no plan which could be written into a restrictive immigration law without overriding peonage laws or without doing violence to the ideas of liberty and freedom which are fundamental to our form of Government."

"The prosperity of the United States," the report continued, "does not depend upon additional unskilled alien laborers coming to this country. Industry and activity have survived the slackened immigration caused by the European war, and the quota law (the two covering a stretch of almost 10 years) and the United States has had one spell of great unemployment during that period. Our gain in population through natural sources is large—10,000,000 in the period of 1910-1920. Some thought must be given to the welfare of the coming generations.

"Farming is declining. The number of farms is decreasing. The farm population is leaving for the cities. To pass a restrictive act, with an exemption for farmers and their families, is to defeat restriction. Farm organizations, labor organizations, the American Legion, and patriotic societies generally have declared by firm resolution for suspension or restriction."

The report said that complete suspension of all general immigration had been exhaustively considered by the committee. A majority, it was added, consider such a step inadvisable at this time, although a minority favor it.

PROFIT-TAKING IN LATE WEEK ON STOCK MARKET

Recessions Not Severe — Federal Reserve Statement Discloses Further Decrease in Credit Demands on Central Banking System.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"After a remarkable display of sustained strength, the markets gave way moderately toward the end of the week on profit-taking and fresh experiments on the short side. The reactions which occurred were perfectly natural in view of previous advances. Arrival of a resting period was only to be expected. Technical positions needed to be strengthened. A flurry in call money, perhaps, was of some influence, as was the slight jar to sentiment brought by the news that the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice are to investigate the oil and gasoline situation. However, the principal reason why the markets paused and reacted undoubtedly was that they were somewhat tired. Recession was not severe and did not suggest that there are weak long positions of any considerable magnitude, or that fundamental conditions have changed in any important particular. Easy money and signs of improving business still are the outstanding features of the situation.

"Industrial news has remained encouraging. Pig iron production during January revealed the first increase since the early part of summer. The price of this commodity remained firm. Steel production gained even more sharply as compared with December and several of the independent manufacturers have now reached the Steel Corporation's rate on 50 per cent of capital. All this confirms the impression that the demand for steel has increased substantially. Lead prices also have risen under the impetus of buying, which reflects a high rate of consumption by the makers of paint, storage batteries and electrical equipment. It may be inferred that the automobile and building industries are still going ahead vigorously. Additional advances, including crude oil, show that large consumption is demanding an increase in production. The textile trade still is waiting for a decision in the matter of high prices for raw materials and a conservative attitude on the part of buyers. But the heavy industries certainly show all the signs of a vigorous recovery."

The Money Situation.

"Despite the temporary firming up of the call money market, the weekly Federal Reserve statements disclose a further decrease in the amount of credit which the country is demanding of its central banking system. Holdings of interest bearing paper are at a new low since 1918, a time when the country entered the World war. These earning assets are $212,000,000 smaller than a year ago. The decrease would even be larger were it not for the fact that the reserve banks have increased their open market purchases of bills to the extent of $58,500,000. All this implies an enormous reserve banking power. And there are still no signs that the influx of gold is about to slacken.

"A contract with our own money market that London has firmed up. The end of the British Government's fiscal year is approaching; with it comes the period of heavy tax collections. In addition, British trade has improved slightly. London bankers are moderately apprehensive, in fact, of what might happen if they are called on to finance a materially expanded European trade. A year ago they had an extremely easy money market, based partly on large amounts of foreign funds. Now they have lost a considerable part of the foreign money, and, probably, part of their own. The Bank of England's ratio of reserve is consistently a per cent or two below the figure of a year ago. Meanwhile the exchanges indicate that the panicky transfers of funds of New York have ceased. Recent recessions in sterling have been due to European buying of our products rather than to distrust of European currencies.

The Japanese Loan.

"An impending event of large importance is the flotation of an international loan for Japan. Cables from London indicate that an exceptionally strong syndicate has been formed there and that there has been a rush to participate in the underwriting. Precise details are not available, but it is understood that the amount to be offered on this side of the water will be large and that the price will be attractive. Japan always has held a high rating as a borrower and any amount which is likely to be raised will be trifling in proportion to her resources. The interest charge on it will be small in proportion to her revenues. Part of the money obtained will be reserved to meet maturities which come due next year, but a large proportion will go to buy American materials called for by Japan's reconstruction program. The release of this purchasing power should give a further stimulus to this country's industrial revival.

"Recovery was the keynote in the closing financial markets of the week. While short covering was a potent factor in the rally in most departments, the stronger tone in stocks had for its base the renewal of accumulation, particularly of the steel, sugar and oil shares. At the opening stocks still showed the effects of the selling pressure of the past day or two and the list presented an irregular appearance. Demand for steel common, however, in anticipation of a favorable unfilled tonnage report, soon appeared and bidding for this stock brought selling in other shares to a halt and turned the market. Short traders took fright and covered freely in various directions. Trading was on a fairly active scale.

"The market, in short, gave every indication that bullish interests are still in control and that they are not yet willing to give the bears too free a hand. Bonds also turned steadier, sugar issues meeting with a good demand.

Sterling Up Saturday.

"Although foreign exchanges continued a downward flag on the London market, a moderate recovery was had by the principal European currencies in the trading on this side. Actual transactions were only moderate and the better tone doubtless reflected reassurance over the progress of the expert committee on reparations, advices from London indicating that earlier disquieting rumors were premature. Sterling rallied 1½ cents to $4.31, while French francs rose seven points to 4.60 cents, German marks, which suddenly came to life yesterday and dropped sharply, rallied from 20 to 21 cents for a trillion marks. It now appears that weakness in the mark was due largely to curtailment by the Reichsbank allotments of marks for current business. Japanese yen remained steady.

"An increase of $28,670,000 in surplus reserve is shown by the weekly statement of the Clearing House, the total excess reserve standing at $41,831,000. Sharp decreases occurred in loans and in demand deposits. Loans and discounts declined $53,176,000 and demand deposits fell $81,546,000. Other changes were unimportant.

Unfilled Steel Orders.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation on Jan. 31, made public today, amounted to 4,578,... tons, an increase of 253,000 tons over orders at the end of December.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review, says:

"The foreign exchange market during the past week (including) irregular movements starting with declines at the beginning of the week, which were followed by rallies, but at the end leading exchanges showed material losses. Sterling suffered a moderate rally from the low level, indicated that the moderate upward movement was without substance and that the last half of the week heeded rapidly, showing a loss of about 6 cents as a result of the week's trading. French exchanges had intervals of strength after early weakness, but yesterday had a sudden decline of over 10 points, the movement coming in connection with the developments in Paris, which were construed here as unfavorable to the French financial outlook. Business on both the unturned and declines in these leading exchanges was extremely small, a feature of yesterday's trading being a disposition to fill bids on a declining market, but the transactions were small in amount, and made it evident that the demand had been exceedingly thin.

"Other exchanges moved in about the same way, declines following rallies, with operations generally recorded as a result of the German exchange attempted at the week's cause of decline yesterday to the lowest to the trillion mark basis. Scandinavian exchange was moderately improved in its relation to connection with financing that in practically been completed. South American exchanges were irregular, with Argentina strong at the end and moving up to 13.3/8 a new high for the year. Uruguay and Brazil also conducting financing here, which advancing 90 to 96, declined yesterday.

"Although foreign exchanges have been rather flat on the London market, a moderate recovery was had on the part of the European currencies in the trading on this side. Actual transactions were only moderate and the better tone was doubtless reflected reassurance over the progress of the expert committee on reparations, advices from London indicating that earlier disquieting rumors were premature. Sterling rallied 1.5/8c to $4.31, while French francs rose seven points to 4.60 cents, which suddenly came off yesterday and dropped about from 20 to 21 cents for a trifle. Sterling is now 1 per cent that weakness in the mark was due largely to currency buying by the Reichsbank allotments of marks for export business. Japanese yen remained steady.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COTTON SELLS HIGHER AS THE WEEK CLOSES

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 20 to 41 points in response to relatively firm cables and overnight buying orders in the belief were believed to include further price-fixing by the trade as well as covering and May contracts sold up to 24.00 during the first few minutes, a gain of 30 points, but the market showed a fairly steady tone during the early trading. Private cables reported continental buying in Liverpool with a good demand for spot cotton arrivals and exporters buying in the Liverpool spot market.

After selling off to 33.56c for May, the market was quiet, but generally steady, on covering and bullish spot advances from the south.

May closed at 33.72c, with the general market closing barely steady at net gains of 35 to 38 points on old crop and of 4 to 20 points on later sales.

Trade and figures showed that the world has already marketed 9,488,000 bales against 7,253,000 to the same period last season. Spinners have taken 7,315,000 for the season and 4,050,000 last week.

Exports of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance was estimated at 97,000 bales, compared with 115,000 last week.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Spot cotton steady; middling 33.85.

OIL SHARES FEATURE SESSION ON THE CURB

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Oil shares attracted most attention in today's brief session on the curb market. Covering orders for the purpose of evening accounts brought about higher prices in those which had been under pressure recently, but new buying was on a small scale.

Swan & Finch continued to dominate the market, opening 2 points lower at 67, then rallying to 62, where it was only 2 points under its top price of Friday. Buying operations in Chesebrough Manufacturing kept on, the stock advancing 8 points to a new top at 360. The feature of the low-priced oils was Latin-American, which reached the new high.

Anglo-American Laster was dealt in for the first time in several days, getting up a half point in sympathy with the strength in the leather stocks on the big board.

In the last hour a good demand appeared for Dubilier Radio, carrying the stock across 20 to a new high record.

Closer control of the Standard Oils stocks following developments at the congressional investigation, which created uncertainty over the position of the holdings of many of those companies featured the market on the curb Exchange the last week. This condition was indicated most sharply in the general withdrawal of nearly bids in the last half of the week making it hard to contract liquidation except at sharp declines. Producing companies were the greatest sufferers and, while those issues declined, some of the manufacturing issues were exceptionally strong.

Chesebrough Manufacturing moved up more than 20 points to a new high record, and an advance of about 20 points was made in Swan & Finch. Many of the other issues in the Standard Oil group, after nominal gains early in the week, yielded from 4 to about 20 points. Standard Oil of Nebraska ranged from 240 to 255 and Prairie Oil, after selling at 260 fell to below 250. Standard Oil of Indiana, which made a gain of 2 points in the first half of the week, later dropped 4 points.

Independent oil stocks moved within a narrower range and some of them made moderate gains. Mutual Oil and New Mexico Land were in steady demand.

Industrial issues were irregular The motor stocks developed a healthy tone. Durant Motors fell about 4 points and Ford Motors of Canada, after advancing 6 points, yielded more than 20 points. Ward Baking Co. issues sold at new high records, but receded with the rest of the list at least two days. Dubilier Also was strong, selling at a new high record with a moderate reaction later. Lehigh Coal gains of 2 to 3 points, but subsequently lost part of this gain. Glen Alden Coal, which was in demand for a time, also reacted after a moderate advance.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The stock market rallied in today's two-hour session the impulse coming mainly from short covering. Fresh buying, however, made its appearance in the sugar stocks and in the leathers. Both Central Leather preferred and American Hide and Leather preferred were active and strong.

Punta Alegre made a new high at 65. Cuba Cane preferred, Cuban-American and American Beet Sugar all were very strong.

The market closed strong, with leading issues well up to their highs of the day.

Reason for the strength of United States Steel appeared in the monthly tonnage figures issued just at the close of business, showing an increase of 353,900 unfilled orders on hand. This was quite a bit larger than the street had expected.

The Bond Market.

The bond market showed substantial improvement at the opening today after the reaction of Friday. Trading was not very active but the tone was much better. On the week changes have been irregular, with the high-grade investment issues mostly fractionally lower and the second grade and more speculative descriptions showing some improvement.

Liberties have been only steady all the week. In most cases net changes consist of small fractions the largest being the loss in the first 3½s. These are the entirely tax-exempt issue and would naturally reflect the lessened demand consequent upon tax reduction.

High-class rails have lost ground, examples being Atchison general 4s, which went below 87 for the first time this year, and Central Pacific first 4s, which lost more than a point. The decline is possibly due to the small return in comparison with Government bonds and high-grade utility and industrial obligations.

The foreign group has been relatively stronger than the rest of the list all the week, and the same was true today. Japanese issues have been notably firm and on the week the sterling 4½ per cent of the first and second series are up from 1½ to more than 2 points. There have been reports that some offer of exchange will be made to the holders of these bonds who subscribe to the loan expected next week. Both the outstanding issues mature next year and part of the proceeds of the new loan may be used in this way to anticipate these maturities.

Other foreign bonds in which there has been active trading included the Jugo-Slav 8s, where the recent gains have been held, but not improved upon, and the Cuban 5½s. French Republic 8s and 7½s have been mostly steady.

United Kingdom 5½s of 1937, the purely investment issue, were up to the high of the year, while the 5½s of 1929 have gone down with sterling exchange.

The largest gain in any foreign issue this week has been made by City of Rio Janeiro 8s of 1944.

The comparatively inactive New York, Susquehanna & Western issues have been notably strong. Denver & Rio Grande junior liens have been weak. Seaboard adjustment 5s have advanced sharply where other Seaboard bonds have lost ground. New York Central debenture 6s were very active and strong early in the week, but reacted at the close so that the net result was a loss.

The aggregate of new offerings for the week was the highest for the year, amounting to over $167,700,000, and the number of new issues was a record for the year.

J. P. MORGAN & CO. TO HELP NORTHWESTERN BANK RELIEF

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—J. P. Morgan & Co. will head the list of contributors to the $10,000,000 Service Corporation to be organized for the relief of Northwestern banks with a subscription of $500,000 provided the remainder of the capital is raised by other banking and business interests, it was announced today.

Financial Notes

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—The annual report of the People's Gas, Light and Coke Co. for 1923 shows operating revenue totaled $30,615,187.98, as compared with $30,753,354.09 operating expenses. Dividends paid and declared totaled $2,983,750, leaving a surplus to the year at $1,214,763.97.

SON FINDS MOTHER HE BELIEVED TO BE DEAD

Louis Anweiler Was Told 20 Years Ago That Parent Died in Railroad Accident.

"Come to Room No. ——, northwest corner of High and Carr streets. I am your mother, and anxious to see you."

Louis Anweiler did not believe this message, contained in an almost illegibly scribbled letter which he received Friday. Twenty years ago his father had told him and his two brothers, George and John, that their mother had been killed in a railroad accident. His father had been killed in an industrial accident 10 years after that, and the brotners scattered, Louis remaining in St. Louis.

However, Anweiler went to the room yesterday. There he met Mrs. Minnie Anweiler, whom he had not seen since he was 9 years old. She is his mother.

The room was poorly furnished and its occupant in struggling circumstances. The last 20 years had not treated her kindly.

He has taken her to his home, 7928 Delmar boulevard, and is endeavoring to find his brothers. Anweiler is stage manager of the West End Lyric Theater.

A disagreement between the parents and Mrs. Anweiler's disappearance influenced the father to tell their sons the story.

Mail Pilots Retain Air Trophy.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The Collier trophy, awarded annually for the "most notable advance in aviation during the year," will be retained another year by the Post-office Department, it having been chosen winner by the unanimous vote of the contest committee of the National Aeronautical Association. Postmaster-General New was advised today of the committee's action. The accomplishment which won the trophy for the department from a wide field of contestants, including the air services of the army and navy, was the demonstration of pilots last August in the transcontinental mail tests.

SIMPLE HOME MIXTURE DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Cincinnati Barber Tells How Anyone Can Prepare It in 5 Minutes.

Any man or woman can easily look twenty years younger by simply darkening their gray, faded, or streaky hair. This is now easy to accomplish with a recipe given by a well-known Cincinnati barber.

Simply take a half-pint of water, add one ounce of bay rum, ¼ ounce of glycerine and a small box of Barbo Compound. Shake and it is ready to use. These ingredients can be bought at drug stores at trifling cost.

Applied to the hair twice weekly this delightful mixture quickly gives the desired shade. It is easy to use is not sticky or greasy, will not color the scalp and does not rub off.

REVIEW SOUGHT OF CASES OF THE WAR-TIME MILITARY OFFENDERS STILL IN PRISON

Clash of Military and Civilian Views Revealed When Move Is Made for Citizens, Once Officers, to Look Over Records.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Feb. 9.

MILITARY tradition and practice have come into conflict with the civilian sense of justice, as a result of the petition on Jan. 12 of the national organization of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States to President Coolidge for appointment of a board, to be composed of former officers who have returned to civil life, to review the cases of all war-time military offenders still in confinement.

In a telegram to the President, the veterans, who have their national headquarters in Kansas City, Kan., stated that they had made an investigation at the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth and, basing their plea on the fact that "the circumstances and conditions of war are radically different from those of peace" asked that the reviewing board be made up of men who had served in the danger zones of France and knew the trials and strains of war in a foreign land, where customs and conditions were unfamiliar to young men who had enlisted to fight for their country. This board, they thought, would combine military knowledge with civilian sympathy. The telegram was signed by Gen. Lloyd M. Brett, commander in chief of the veterans; Capt. Penel W. Elton, Adjutant-General, and the members of the National Council of Administration.

And there conflict began. Capt. Elton told the Post-Dispatch correspondent several days ago that there were 218 military prisoners in the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth. How many were war-time offenders he did not know, but stated that he had interviewed 23. He estimated—and emphasized the fact, that he was merely estimating—that there were possibly 1000 war-time offenders in the various Federal prisons and disciplinary barracks throughout the country.

He also stated that he had only the prisoners' word of the cases as the records of the trials were in Washington.

Secretary Weeks' Letter.

President Coolidge turned the Veterans' telegram over to the War Department, and Secretary of War Weeks, while ignoring the petition for a reviewing board, gave the department's figures on the wartime offenders. His letter to Gen. Brett said in part:

"I believe that an erroneous impression prevails relative to the number of men now in confinement who served in the World War, and as to the offenses for which they are undergoing punishment. In order that you may be more fully advised relative to the situation with respect to the army I am furnishing you with the following information:

"Early in 1919, shortly after the armistice, the cases of all military prisoners were reviewed by a board of officers in the Judge Advocate-General's office, with a view of correcting the inequalities of sentences and of seeing that no injustice was done to any prisoner. As a result of the review every sentence which might be deemed excessive was reduced and only sentences imposed for the most serious offenses, such as murder, manslaughter, etc., were allowed to remain unchanged.

"Of the soldiers convicted by a general courtsmartial in France, there are 69 confined in the U. S. penitentiary, Leavenworth, Kan., and two are on home parole from that institution; two are confined in the U. S. penitentiary, Atlanta, Ga.; 33 confined in the U. S. Disciplinary Barracks, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and four on home parole from that institution; one in the Fitzsimons General Hospital, Denver, Colo.; one at Fort Jay, N. Y., and four at St. Elizabeth Hospital, Washington, D. C.

"The offenses of which these prisoners were convicted and the numbers of prisoners convicted of each offense are as follows: Murder, 38; manslaughter, 9; rape, 13; assault, 8; larceny, 5; assault to rape, 28; assault and robbery, 2; robbery, 8; embezzlement, 1; desertion and robbery, 1; obtaining money under false pretenses, 1; fraudulently converting money to own use, 1; desertion, robbery and assault, 1. Total, 117.

General Courtsmartial.

"Of the soldiers convicted by a general courtsmartial in Germany there are 9 confined in the United States penitentiary, Leavenworth; 6 on home parole from that institution, 15 confined in the United States Disciplinary Barracks, Fort Leavenworth, and 3 on home parole from that institution.

"The offenses for which these prisoners were convicted and the number of prisoners convicted for each offense are as follows: Murder, 7; manslaughter, 7; assault, 1; assault to rape, 3; robbery, 7; larceny, 4; desertion and robbery, 1; desertion and assault, 1; other crimes, 2. Total, 33.

"Some of the prisoners referred to are under life sentences. Others are under shorter sentences that are expiring from time to time.

"In addition to the prisoners referred to above who were sentenced in France and Germany, there are others who were tried elsewhere during the war for offenses similar to those enumerated above and who are still in confinement, such as the so-called Houston rioters, but of the men convicted of purely military offenses alone, there appear to be only 10 now under military control. Without giving their names I will give you a brief outline of the facts in each case, in order that you may understand why they remain under constraint."

There follows a short summary of the 10 cases. Eight of the men will be released this year, one in 1926 and one in 1927. All of these men had escaped at some time or other. Several have served time in State penitentiaries.

Plea of Youthful Folly.

Capt. Elton maintained to the Post-Dispatch, however, that the Secretary of War had overlooked the essential point of the telegram, the appointment of a civilian board.

"We are not asking that all of these men be released," Capt. Elton said. "There are some, perhaps, who deserve the heavy penalties they received. But there are others, some of whom enlisted at the outbreak of the war, thereby proving their patriotism and loyalty, to whom army life was new and whose crimes, if any, must be laid to youthful folly, inexperience and strange surroundings.

"We are not interested in individual cases or their number except insofar as they afford examples of too harsh treatment. What we want is a committee which shall go over the records and interview the men as we have done in a small way in order to make recommendations to the President. We have not made recommendations regarding particular prisoners, although I am personally convinced that injustice has been done in several instances."

Letter to Secretary Weeks.

In the absence of Commander Brett, Capt. Elton was drafting a Great War Utterances of President Wilson That Thrilled the Allies

"The world must be made safe for democracy."

"God helping her, she can do no other."

THESE two sentences, from different parts of President Woodrow Wilson's war message to Congress, probably are, and may continue to be, the best known of his utterances. In the first, President Wilson expressed his view of America's purpose in entering the World War; in the second, he declared the inevitability of that action.

The sentence on democracy was Wilson's own, a strikingly original expression of that which many others had tried in vain to say as effectively. The other sentence was borrowed from a source which, in view of the occasion, gave it a startling power.

It was Martin Luther, Germany's great religious reformer, who said to those who demanded a retraction of his utterances:

"Here I stand; I can do no other; God help me."

Mr. Wilson himself never told the story of the circumstances under which his war message was written. But the reader, going through its lofty passages toward the close, can imagine the writer seeking a phrase which shall fittingly end the message, and can see, as it may have appeared to the President, the stout figure of the German prophet, with his inflexible "Ich kann nicht anders." In taking this phrase from the historic lore of the enemy, Mr. Wilson did what President Lincoln, in lighter fashion, did when, a few days before his death, he ordered a military band to play "Dixie," saying the Attorney-General had ruled that the tune was a prize of war.

Mr. Wilson's scholarly training, and his work as an author, had made him a master of the pen—in his case, the "pen" was a typewriter which he kept close at hand, and which he used without stenographic intervention. His most noted utterances, and those which are likely to be the longest remembered, were in his war and pre-war speeches and state papers. Some of these utterances are here reproduced.

Call for War Declaration

(From the War Message to Congress, April 2, 1917.)

"With a profound sense of the solemn and even tragical character of the step I am taking and of the grave responsibilities which it involves, but in unhesitating obedience to what I deem my constitutional duty, I advise that the Congress declare the recent course of the Imperial German Government (in renewing unrestricted submarine warfare) to be in fact nothing less than war against the Government and people of the United States; that it formally accept the status of belligerent which has thus been thrust upon it; and that it take immediate steps not only to put the country in a more thorough state of defense, but also to exert all its power and employ all its resources to bring the Government of the German Empire to terms and end the war."

* * * * *

Nation's Object in War

"I have exactly the same things in mind now that I had in mind when I addressed the Senate on the twenty-second of January last; the same that I had in mind when I addressed the Congress on the third of February and on the twenty-sixth of February. Our object now, as then, is to vindicate the principles of peace and justice in the life of the world as against selfish and autocratic power and to set up amongst the really free and self-governed peoples of the world such a concert of purpose and of action as will henceforth ensure the observance of those principles."

* * * * *

No Faith in Autocracy

"A steadfast concert for peace can never be maintained except by a partnership of democratic nations. No autocratic Government could be trusted to keep faith within it or observe its covenants. It must be a league of honor, a partnership of opinion. Intrigue would eat its vitals away; the plottings of inner circles who could plan what they would render account to no one would be a corruption seated at its very heart. Only free peoples can hold their purpose and their honor steady to a common end and prefer the interests of mankind to any narrow interest of their own."

* * * * *

His Most Famous Saying

"We are glad, now that we see the facts with no veil of false pretense about them, to fight for the ultimate peace of the world and for the liberation of its peoples, the German peoples included: for the rights of nations great and small and the privilege of men everywhere to choose their way of life and of obedience. The world must be made safe for democracy. Its peace must be planted upon the tested foundations of political liberty. We have no selfish ends to serve. We desire no conquest, no dominion. We seek no indemnities for ourselves, no material compensation for the sacrifices we shall freely make. We are but one of the champions of the rights of mankind. We shall be satisfied when those rights have been made as secure as the faith and the freedom of nations can make them."

> THE man whose pen splintered the swords of Prussia, the man before whose image the peasants of Italy burned candles, the man who gave form to the loftiest political ideal that ever captured the conscience of the world.—The Round Table, London

* * * * *

Vision of Trials to Come

"It is a distressing and oppressive duty, Gentlemen of the Congress, which I have performed in thus addressing you. There are, it may be, many months of fiery trial and sacrifice ahead of us. It is a fearful thing to lead this great peaceful people into war, into the most terrible and disastrous of all wars, civilization itself seeming to be in the balance. But the right is more precious than peace, and we shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest our hearts—for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own Governments, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free. To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace which she has treasured. God helping her, she can do no other."

So He Saw the Draft

(From Proclamation of May 18, 1917, Announcing Registration for the Draft.)

"The significance of this cannot be overstated. It is a new thing in our history and a landmark in our progress. It is a new manner of accepting and vitalizing our duty to give ourselves with thoughtful devotion to the common purpose of us all. It is in no sense a conscription of the unwilling; it is rather selection from a nation which has volunteered in mass. It is no more a choosing of those who shall march with the colors than it is a selection of those who shall serve an equally necessary and devoted purpose in the industries that lie behind the battle line. The day here named is the time upon which all shall present themselves for assignment to their tasks. It is for that reason destined to be remembered as one of the most conspicuous moments in our history. It is nothing less than the day upon which the manhood of the country shall step forward in one solid rank in defense of the ideals to which this nation is consecrated. It is important to those ideals no less than to the pride of this generation in manifesting its devotion to them that there be no gaps in the ranks.

His Reply to the Pope

From reply to peace proposals of Pope Benedict XV, Aug. 27, 1917.

"The object of this war is to deliver the free peoples of the world from the menace and the actual power of a vast military establishment, controlled by an irresponsible Government, which, having secretly planned to dominate the world, proceeded to carry the plan out without regard either to the sacred obligations of treaty or the long-established practices and long-cherished principles of international action and honor; which chose its own time for the war; delivered its blow fiercely and suddenly; stopped at no barrier, either of law or of mercy; swept a whole continent within the tide of blood—not the blood of soldiers only, but the blood of innocent women and children also and of the helpless poor; and now stands balked, but not defeated, the enemy of four-fifths of the world.

"This power is not the German people. It is the ruthless master of the German people. It is no business of ours how that great people came under its control or submitted with temporary zest to the domination of its purpose; but it is our business to see to it that the history of the rest of the world is no longer left to its handling."

Scorns German Rulers

"We cannot take the word of the present rulers of Germany as a guarantee of anything that is to endure unless explicitly supported by such conclusive evidence of the will and purpose of the German people themselves as the other peoples of the world would be justified in accepting. Without such guarantees treaties of settlement, agreements for disarmament, covenants to set up arbitration in the place of force, territorial adjustments, reconstitutions of small nations, if made with the German Government, no man, no nation, could now depend on."

* * *

Message to Kerensky

From message to the Provisional (Kerensky) Government of Russia, delivered by the Root commission, 1917:

"No people must be forced under sovereignty under which it does not wish to live. No territory must change hands except for the purpose of securing those who inhabit it a fair chance of life and liberty. No indemnities must be insisted on except those that constitute payment for manifest wrongs done. No readjustments of power must be made except such as will tend to secure the future peace of the world and the future welfare and happiness of its peoples. And then the free peoples of the world must draw together in some common covenant, some genuine and practical co-operation that will in effect combine their force to secure peace and justice in the dealings of nations with one another. The brotherhood of mankind must no longer be a fair but empty phrase; it must be given a structure of force and reality. The nations must realize their common life and effect a workable partnership to secure that life against the aggressions of autocratic and self-pleasing power.

"For these things we can afford to pour out blood and treasure. For these are the things we have always professed to desire, and unless we pour out blood and treasure now and succeed we may never be able to unite or show conquering force again in the great cause of human liberty. The day has come to conquer or submit. If the forces of autocracy can divide us they will overcome us; if we stand together victory is certain and the liberty which victory will secure. We can afford then to be generous, but we cannot afford then or now to be weak or omit any single guarantee of justice and security."

Austrian War Message

From message of Dec. 4, 1917, recommending declaration of war against Austria-Hungary:

"The partnership of nations, which must henceforth guarantee the world's peace, must be a partnership of peoples, not a mere partnership of Governments. It might be impossible, also, in such untoward circumstances, to admit Germany to the free economic intercourse which must inevitably spring out of the other partnerships of a real peace. But there would be no aggression in that; and such a situation, inevitable because of distrust, would in the very nature of things sooner or later cure itself, by processes which would assuredly set in. The wrongs, the very deep wrongs, committed in this war will have to be righted. That, of course. But they cannot and must not be righted by the commission of similar wrongs against Germany and her allies. The world will not permit the commission of similar wrongs as a means of reparation and settlement. Statesmen must by this time have learned that the opinion of the world is everywhere wide awake and fully comprehends the issues involved. No representative of any self-governed nation will dare disregard it by attempting any such covenants of selfishness and compromise as were entered into at the Congress of Vienna. The thought of the plain people here and everywhere throughout the world, the people who enjoy no privilege and have very simple and unsophisticated standards of right and wrong, is the air all governments must henceforth breathe if they would live."

On Austria's Vassaldom

"Austria-Hungary is for the time being not her own mistress, but simply the vassal of the German Government. We must face the facts as they are and act upon them without sentiment in this stern business. The Government of Austria-Hungary is not acting upon its own initiative or in response to the wishes and feelings of its own peoples but as the instrument of another nation. We must meet its force with our own and regard the Central Powers as but one. The war can be successfully conducted in no other way.

Bank Commissioner's View of What 38 Failures in Little Over Year Indicate and the Remedy

Millspaugh Would Increase Number of Examiners and Require Larger Surplus and Greater Capital for Banks.

IN view of the growing list of bank failures in Missouri the Post-Dispatch has sought from the State Finance Commissioner an explanation of the cause of the failures and his view of precautionary measures that may be taken to prevent them. In the course of this inquiry, the Post-Dispatch has learned that there have been 38 failures within a few months, in almost every case with heavy loss to depositors. The Finance Commissioner, whose office is charged with the responsibility of examining the condition of banking institutions from time to time and taking immediate action to close them, and to protect their assets immediately on discovering any evidence of pending failure, has informed the Post-Dispatch that his office is not able to do this work properly because of his being allowed only 26 examiners to keep check on the 150 state banks and trust companies in Missouri, the greatest number possessed by any state. Illinois is second with twice the population of Missouri. The Finance Commissioner, of course, has no jurisdiction over national banks which are under Federal Government control. The result of the Post-Dispatch's inquiry follows:

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 9.—

FAILURE of 36 State banks in Missouri since Jan. 1, 1923—eight of them closed since Jan. 1, last—emphasizes the need of revising the banking laws and provisions for State bank supervision, to assure more protection of depositors' funds, Frank C. Millspaugh, State Finance Commissioner, said today when asked by the Post-Dispatch to comment on the Missouri banking situation.

Enlargement of the force of State examiners, amendment of the law so as to increase the minimum capital requirement in organizing banks from $10,000, half paid up, to $25,000, all paid up, and tightening of the requirements for a surplus to meet reverses, would materially reduce the bank failures, Commissioner Millspaugh said.

"Dishonesty of bank officials and employes was responsible in about one-fourth of the cases for the financial difficulties which caused the closing of the 36 banks," the Finance Commissioner said. Other suspensions were due largely to "frozen assets," which could not be liquified when cash was needed, he said, or to apathy and negligence on the part of directors in keeping check on the management of their banks.

In general, bank failures are due principally to lack of supervision by directors, incompetency of management, or "one man" management, on the one hand, and on the other, misapplication of funds. The purpose of State supervision of banks is periodical examination of them to detect "shaky" conditions and require correction of those conditions.

Small Salary for Examiners.

Missouri leads all the states in the number of State banks and trust companies with 1504. Illinois is second with 1416 and Iowa third with 1324 State banks.

The Missouri law requires State banks to be examined at least once a year. For this work the Finance Department has 26 examiners, some of whom also are detailed to examination of the 250 building and loan associations. The maximum salary for examiners is $2400 a year.

This force of examiners is inadequate to maintain the desired supervision, and the salary limit is such that it is difficult to hold men in the Finance Department after they become experienced, Millspaugh said. In examining the larger banks, from five to seven men are required for a week or more. When a bank fails, a large examining staff is required, sometimes for weeks, to trace irregularities. The services of one or more examiners are required continuously until the affairs of the closed bank are wound up.

In Other States.

At one period recently, 14 examiners were engaged in winding up closed banks, making them unavailable for examining other banks in their districts. This pyramids the difficulties of maintaining close supervision, Millspaugh said. At least 50 should have been employed during the last three years, he stated.

The condition in Missouri is reflected in other states in this section for the period since Jan. 1, 1923. Kansas, with 1075 state banks, employs 14 examiners who are paid $2400 annually. There were 37 bank failures, 33 due to frozen assets and four to manipulation of funds.

Iowa, with 1324 State banks, had 21 failures, attributed about equally to misapplication of funds or mismanagement. The State has 14 examiners, paid from $1800 to $3000 a year. Nebraska, with 968 State banks, and 10 examiners, paid $2400 a year, had 15 failures, attributed partly to mismanagement and partly to thefts. Seven State bankers are serving prison terms for embezzlement.

The foregoing states require one examination a year. Arkansas, which requires two examinations annually, had 406 State banks. Nine failed during the period noted, all due to bad loans. Arkansas' five examiners are paid $3000 a year. Indiana, requiring two examinations annually, has 852 State banks. There were only six failures, two due to misapplication of funds. Ten examiners are paid $2600 to $3000 a year.

Too Small Capital.

"Small capitalization requirements for banks formed in small communities in Missouri permit organization of too many banks where there is not need or business enough for them and trouble always come in such cases," Millspaugh said. Of the 1504 banks, 552 have a capital of only $10,000.

Eleven of the 36 Missouri banks which failed had capital stock of only $10,000, and 28 had capital stock of $50,000 or less. Only eight had capital stock of $100,000 or more.

With 133 National banks, Missouri has a total of 1637 banks, or one to each 2079 of population, as compared to the ratio in the entire country of one bank to each 3417 of population. Under the State laws, it appears that the Finance Commissioner is not authorized to use discretionary power as to the need of the bank, as in the case of the Comptroller of the Currency in chartering National banks. If the applicants qualify under the requirements, State charters must be issued.

Tells of Banks Saved.

"But the banks closed in Missouri are a small part of the story of banking developments within the troublous periods covered by the administration of my predecessor, J. G. Hughes, and myself," Millspaugh said. "The banks that we have saved when they trembled on the brink have far outnumbered those which have gone over the edge.

"This has been done by making directors remove from assets of the bank paper and questionable assets which have become

Back to the Constitution.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

MR. DOYLE replies to my letter advocating Senator Reed's cause, by asking six questions which typically portray popular conceptions concerning the purpose of our Federal Government, and also the fundamental principles of the Democratic party. May I briefly answer him?

1. A statesman's ability, or value to his country, is not measured by the volume of new legislation he introduces. The framers of the Constitution enunciated certain principles outlining the purpose of government. These principles stated by Jefferson and restated by the Democratic party for over 100 years, did not contemplate a continuous performance of Congress enacting new legislation. A cardinal principle was: "The Federal Government is one of limited powers, derived solely from the Constitution." But writing laws has become a mania. Reed fights this unwisdom. Is he to be commended or condemned? However, let it be understood that drafting legislation is done by committee, and Senator Reed has always served on his share of committees.

2. It is well known that the same procedure that made the Eighteenth Amendment a Federal proposition is necessary by the Legislatures of two-thirds of the States before Congress can act with propriety on this question.

3. Millions of men at one time were honestly opposed to woman's suffrage, but today they gracefully accept it as a law of the land, here to stay. This does not concede that they were previously wrong, necessarily.

4. Without doubt Senator Reed believes in the same principles for treaty making that guided the makers of the Constitution. Neither he nor any set of men, however, can establish "amity among the nations of the earth" by a cut and dried formula. As a start in the right direction he can assist in re-establishing amity among the people of his own country, where today brotherhood is disappearing, and strife and bitterness is rampant, and this he is attempting in fearless fashion.

5. The Democratic party for over 100 years has resolved "that justice and sound policy forbid the Federal Government to foster one branch of industry or to cherish the interests of one portion of the people of our common country." This is sound doctrine. If a farmers' "bloc" can this year secure special legislation, a dozen "blocs" will rise next year, each with its own demands. The Federal Government was never intended to have such powers. The farmers know that artificial law will not solve their problem, but that it must be solved by natural law. They know what is hurting them. Lower the tariff.

In conclusion, we must think straight. We must think through. And as the Post-Dispatch stated so forcibly a few nights ago, "Back to the Constitution."

A Great Inspirer.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WILSON is not dead! That great heart is quiet, but because of him there throbs in the breast of the nation a holy pulse, stronger and purer for our country and for our fellow man; it will continue to beat while America lives. 'Tis Wilson immortal!

Wilson's power was spiritual. It was the soul of the man that carried him and us onward and upward.

Historians will record his name among the great inspirers of the world:

"Carry on, Woodrow Wilson, thou strong soul!
Thus thou wilt help others reach the goal;
And thy name with us shall ever be
A hallowed memory."

MOSES GREENWOOD.

Fundamental Principles.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I CANNOT refrain from complimenting your editorial comments upon "New Sectionalism." Such editorials coming at a time when it seems that a wave of sensational legislation that is sectional and narrow is sweeping over our fair land is very timely. To discard the fundamental principles of our Government for experimental theories is to tamper with the very heart of our free institutions. I can think of nothing better than closing these few lines with the remark that the last name of the president of the American Bar Association is the fittest word to express my sentiments.

The President's talk and your editorials are saner than any comments to date made upon tampering with the Constitution founded by the pioneers of freedom.

GOOSE QUILL.

A HERO OF PEACE.

This is the day appointed to commemorate the passing of a great man whose mind and heart and dauntless spirit were devoted to the service of his fellow men.

The man himself has passed beyond the turmoil of life and labor. Death has sealed his record, stilled the tempest that beat about his head and swept away the mists of passion and prejudice.

In the clean, serene air of peace that death brings we are able to take the true measure of Woodrow Wilson's worth and work. Unimportant and trivial things fall away. Only the vital things that he planned and wrought remain.

What is the great thing, the vital thing, in the work of Wilson, that placed him above all men of his time and made him the foremost man and the dominant force of his age?

It was his conception of a new order of society and civilization, in which by international covenant right and reason and law would be substituted for might and ambition and greed in international relations and the settlement of international disputes. The plan combined two definite objects—

To maintain peace by co-operation of the nations.

To establish international law as the rule of conduct among nations.

This conception of a higher order of civilization was born in the storm and stress of war.

It is not because Wilson was a great war lord, who led his people to victory, that men and women everywhere are mourning his death and honoring his memory; it is not because he roused his people to the greatest war stroke the world has known; it is not because he marshaled the largest army and navy in history; it is because of the use he made of the army and navy, and the moral and material forces of his people.

It is because he turned a war of conquest into a war to end war; because he made the war a crusade for the rights of man and the cause of humanity.

We must judge Woodrow Wilson by his motives and purposes, by the ends he sought in making war. Never was there such exalted leadership; never was a people brought to such a height of righteous purpose. Wilson cleansed his heart of ambition. He stripped the nation of selfish interests. He thrust aside all thought of spoil. He planned a victory of magnanimity, a peace of justice.

He became the spiritual leader, not only of his countrymen but of all men who loved mercy and sought justice and peace. He inspired his fellow men with his own passion for equity and freedom and humanity. They saw with him the vision of a new earth, smiling in the sunshine of peace and plenty. God grant that that vision may never fade away.

It is given to few men to lend distinction to the age in which they live. The reign of Augustus Caesar was called the Golden Age, because the sword was sheathed and peace prevailed in the world. That was a peace of might. Justice was not taken into account.

Wilson strove for the peace of right. Its foundation is justice. His age will be known as the age in which men began to plan for permanent, just peace, and to abolish war. Wilson's thought has changed the current of human thought. Never again will wars of conquest be glorious. Never again will the secret diplomacy of deceit and greed prevail. Never again will nations disregard public opinion.

Wilson was an idealist and a dreamer, but he was a practical idealist. He took into the laboratory of his mind and heart the ideals and dreams that men had cherished for centuries of suffering and welded them into a concrete plan to assure the peace they sought. That plan is now working out the ultimate salvation of society from the destruction of war.

Great Americans have served their country. Great Americans have served mankind by serving their country. Wilson was the first great American who enlisted in the service of all mankind.

Washington fought to free America from a foreign yoke. Jefferson established American democracy. Lincoln saved the Union and gave freedom to American slaves. Wilson laid the foundation of union, freedom and democracy for the world.

Nothing we can say will add one jot to or subtract one jot from Wilson's fame and work. But we can do something that will help to complete the task that he undertook.

It is for us on this day consecrated to Wilson's memory, drawing inspiration from his example, to resolve that his labor and sacrifice and martyrdom shall not be fruitless.

It is for us now to resolve that the Temple of Peace which he founded as a refuge for mankind from greed, oppression and war, shall be built to its full measure of strength, beauty and glory.

That would be a fit memorial for the man who exemplified in his life and in his death the heroism of peace.

WILD LIFE OR WASTE?

Representative Hawes of St. Louis has had inserted in the Congressional Record an explanation of his bill for fish and game propagation. The bill, which is sponsored by the Izaak Walton League, now approaching a membership of 2,000,000, particularly interests St. Louis as a river city. It calls for purchase by the Government of 250,000 acres of Mississippi River bottom lands lying between Rock Island, Ill., and Wabasha, Minn. The land would be placed under control of the Departments of Commerce and Agriculture as a game and fish preserve. The purchase would be made subject to the approval of the Legislatures of the surrounding states of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The object of the bill would be to preserve these lands in their natural state or permit them to revert to such state. They have proven unsuccessful for agriculture, but, under present conditions, are subject to destructive uses and denudation. Prohibitive laws, theoretically at least, can protect game from being slaughtered and fish from being caught, but they cannot provide places for safe breeding and spawning.

Scientists state, says Hawes, that black bass, greatest of American game fish, will become extinct in 10 years unless extraordinary measures are taken to protect their spawning places. Ten times as many pelt animals would be raised under protection. Ornithologists say that the Mississippi is the greatest highway for migratory birds on this continent. There is no great game preserve at present between the Appalachians and the Rockies.

The lowlands along the great Father of Waters in a few years can become what we make them—waste land bordering a giant open sewer, where no wild creature survives, or a region restored almost to its virgin beauty and cleanness, where game and fish abound. Legislation with a relatively small appropriation would make the difference. Investment can be recovered. Extinguished wild life cannot.

KLANSMEN AS LAW ENFORCERS.

While the Ku Klux Klan is trying to prove that it is a law-enforcing power, by its spectacular raids on persons accused of bootlegging in Williamson County, Ill., the true inwardness of klan political activities is being exposed in the Senate investigation of the Texas Mayfield-Reddy election which resulted in the election of Senator Mayfield. The Senate committee making the investigation finds that in that election wholesale fraud was perpetrated by Mayfield's klan supporters. The Senate Deputy Sergeant at Arms, who is collecting evidence for the Senate committee, found ballot boxes unopened, others with the seals broken and the keys in the locks, others entirely missing, some unmarked. Out of 165 precincts checked up so far, only 10 had lived up to the law in sealing and tagging ballot boxes. One County Judge admitted that the boxes in his precinct had been opened. Election officials have admitted that they wrote in Mayfield's name before handing out ballots to voters.

Do the ku klux rank and file realize that the ballot box is at the very foundation of American law? At the ballot box we choose the men whom we intrust with making and enforcing our laws. If the ballot box is not sacred; if a party, or a klan, or any interested person or persons can tamper with the ballot box with impunity, democracy is dead, law making and law enforcement are a farce, and anarchy triumphs.

The klan is probably as strong in Texas as in any state where it boasts of its power. And this Mayfield election shows what it can and will do in its efforts at seizing the government. Its law-enforcing raids, in the light of the Mayfield election record, are the acme of hypocrisy, evidently for the purpose of deceiving its dupes. Corrupting the ballot box in one State while it raids bootleggers and home brewers in another make this organization one of the most dangerous elements that has ever invaded American politics. A government based on such devilish methods would prove a curse to the world.

A KEY TO A LONG-LOCKED DOOR.

Nobody knows how Tutankhamen pronounced his name. No phonograph records were made 3000 years ago, and the ancient Egyptian court language is lost to the world. The Egyptians were particular about consonants but slovenly where vowels were concerned, so the modern student has considerable trouble. He does not know whether all the vowels are in a word he finds carved on a stone, and he does not know how to pronounce those that are written.

Now comes Molesworth-St. Aubyn, an English Egyptologist of note, with a bright idea. He finds that certain names of animals probably were derived from the sound the animal made. He cites the following: Cat, mau; dog, vou vou; ram, ba; donkey, ia.

The scientist asserts that the animals listed speak the same language today they did 3000 years ago. No new schools of thought or foreign fashions intrude in their world. The "a" is not broadened or narrowed by association or training, and the "r" is not softened or rasped according to geographic location. The pink granite coffin of the Pharaoh probably is not more permanent than the set rule by which the ram pronounces "ba." Application of this much assured knowledge ought to give us a fair knowledge of the sound of the dead language,

FREE TRADE AND WORLD PEACE.

When the somewhat sarcastic Israel Zangwill delivered his parting broadside at the quivering flanks of America the other day, just before boarding ship for Europe, he said a considerable number of things which make interesting reading, whether one accepts the Zangwill slant or rejects it.

He admitted, for instance, that our ladies are "beautiful, graceful and charming." He deplored the lack of great men in America today.

But Mr. Zangwill said one thing, in a few plain words, which every person interested in the future of the human race should ponder:

"There must be, if you wish world peace, free trade and free movement."

Every tariff wall has a war hiding behind it, making ready to spring over the wall into the midst of the multitude of innocent bystanders, to maim and murder. Israel Zangwill, after all, has given us a thought which may prove constructive if we make up our minds to act toward universal free trade.

RELATIVE RATINGS OF HAIR AND POETRY.

The Chicago realty operator who has offered a New York dealer in illustrious relics $750 for a lock of John Milton's hair, priced at $1000, is said never to have read "Paradise Lost," and there are insinuations from the Windy City group of poets that he assumes the last word in the title "Samson Agonistes" to be a surname and interprets "Comus" as a Miltonic hair tonic.

In St. Louis dwells a citizen somewhat poetically inclined, known intimately to the present writer, who boasts of having bought from a local book-seller the other day a fine old volume in leather binding with all-gilt edges, containing a critical biography of Milton, with all his poetic output, including both the English and the Latin poems, for 75 cents!

"And if I had half as much money as that Chicago hair-hunter seems to have," says this cultivator of the Miltonian splendors of song, "I'd gladly pay $750 for this book of mine in case I couldn't get it at a lower figure; but I wouldn't give six bits for that bunch of John Milton's hair. It's poetry I venerate, not hair."

One might suggest that this little true tale would be titillative were it not so tragic. The tragedy is that a small wisp of a poet's hair is regarded in Chicago at any rate, as being at least a thousand times as valuable as the same poet's poetry in toto, biography to boot.

Presidential candidates are finding the oiled roads skiddy.

PANETELA.

YES, Luella,
Mr. Wilson
Lastly bowing
From the stage,
Like as not
Has left us
Something
Fit to make Another age.
While as yet
We can't be certain,
Such is Time's
Unneed of haste,
Likely War,
The old red-anarch,
Thanks to him,
Has been disgraced.

Many men,
My sweet Luella,
In the dark
And bitter past,
Have attempted
This achievement
Seeming probable
At last.
Scarce a century
But visioned,
Peering from
Its pit of woe,
That which
Mr. Wilson started
Just a year
Or so ago.

Will it last,
My little girlie?
Now and then
We think it must,
Notwithstanding
All ideals
At the end
Turn into dust.
When we think
Of what man might be,
Lo, our faith
Is firm and fine!
But recalling
Human nature,
Somehow it
Begins to pine.

What we can Be very sure of,
Past or whatsoever
Chance,
Is that under
Mr. Wilson
Reason made
A great advance.
Whereas only
Speculation
Raged upon
What might be done,
Now we have
The system mostly
Fancied workable
Begun.

So we have it,
Dear Luella;
Lost, and Wilson
Disappears
With the other Visionaries
All forgotten
In the years.
Whereas winning,
As it may do,
Earth, be sure,
Shall never cease
Its acclaim
Of Mr. Wilson
As the man
Who gave it peace.

The Columbia Missourian reports the death of Samuel A. The oxen were used for all the work on the farm and for driving into Ashland. Mr. Nichols was also a physician, cabinetmaker, lawyer, historian, veterinarian and debater. He lived alone on his farm.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by its leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

KRUPSKAYA.

From the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger.

THOSE of us who have been [illegible] that the Russian bolsheviki are [illegible] human will be interested in the [illegible] of the tender-heartedness of the wife of Lenine. She has protested against the expenditure of large sums of money for monuments to her husband. She has asked that the memorials take the form of appropriations for the relief of the suffering people, for nurseries, kindergartens, orphanages, schools, hospitals and other institutions for the relief of the suffering. It would be easy to say that the suffering has been caused by the bolsheviki of which Lenine was the head and to be skeptical about the proposal that something be done to counteract the effect of their policy upon the Russian people. But it would be wiser to applaud Krupskaya, as she is known, for her humane proposal, whatever support she may have given to the political theories of her husband, she evidently has retained her woman's heart and is moved to compassion for the suffering about her.

MAN'S INCORRIGIBILITY.

From the New York Evening World.

ONCE more the American public is moved to wrath by the infernality of American men who persist in wearing what they please, when they please, regardless of the ukase of the modern men of fashion street. It is distressing—this lamentable cussedness that positively refuses to [illegible] ate coats and trousers with [illegible] of [illegible] It was ever thus. When Jefferson [illegible] to New York from Paris and appeared in the elegant fashions of the boulevards he came nearer political disaster than he ever approached afterward—which may [illegible] count for his free and easy dress during the remainder of his life. The knee pants of our Ambassadors, the uniforms of cabinet mats have always been a vital issue with the American democracy. It is possible we are overburdened with a sense of [illegible] that is sometimes misdirected. But if the tailors of Tooley street, three [illegible] thousand, propose to teach American [illegible] to consult the fashion bulletin before dressing, they have undertaken a task [illegible] for accomplishment in one generation.

A WISE INVESTMENT.

From the Baltimore Sun.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN'S gift of [illegible] for the advancement of certain [illegible] of science probably created no [illegible] London in 1759, when it was made. [illegible] from it has been built up a fund which now permits the payment of awards of [illegible] of the income. This result is not only a testimonial to Franklin's respect for [illegible] his use of it—he knew the value of [illegible]—but betrays as well his characteristic attitude toward science. For his own [illegible] ments in that field he was notably [illegible] in that same year in which he founded the fund in question. It was then that he received the freedom of the city of [illegible] burgh and the degree of doctor of laws from the University of St. Andrews. [illegible] tist though he was he could not [illegible] dicted the first uses of his fund. [illegible] healing, the nerves as electrical [illegible] and a rotary knife for surgical [illegible] are given as the topics of research [illegible] the trustees of the fund have respected. Franklin did not imagine such things, but he had the faith to believe that [illegible] held great discoveries in store.

Great War Utterances Of Preside

The same logic would lead also to a declaration of war against Turkey and Bulgaria. They also are the tools of Germany. But they are mere tools and do not yet stand in the direct path of our necessary action. We shall go wherever the necessities of this war carry us, but it seems to me that we should go only where immediate and practical considerations lead us and not heed any others."

Pacifists Called Stupid.

(From address to American Federation of Labor, at Buffalo, Nov. 12, 1917.)

"It is amazing to me that any group of people should be so ill-informed as to suppose, as some groups in Russia apparently suppose, that any reforms planned in the interest of the people can live in the presence of a Germany powerful enough to undermine or overthrow them by intrigue or force. Any body of free men that compounds with the present German Government is compounding for its own destruction. But that is not the whole of the story. Any man in America, or anywhere else, who supposes that the free industry and enterprise of the world can continue if the Pan-German plan is achieved and German power fastened upon the world is as fatuous as the dreamers of Russia.

"What I am opposed to is not the feeling of the pacifists, but their stupidity. My heart is with them, but my mind has a contempt for them. I want peace, but I know how to get it, and they do not. You will notice that I sent a friend of mine, Col. House, to Europe, who is as great a lover of peace as any man in the world; but I did not send him on a peace mission. I sent him to take part in a conference on how the war was to be won, and he knows, as I know, that that is the way to get peace if you want it for more than a few minutes."

Force to the Utmost.

(From address of April 6, 1918, in Baltimore, following Germany's rejection of the Fourteen Points, first proposed by Mr. Wilson Jan. 8, 1918).

"I accept the challenge. I know that you accept it. All the world shall know that you accept it. It shall appear in the utter sacrifice and self-forgetfulness with which we shall give all that we love and all that we have to redeem the world and make it fit for free men like ourselves to live in. This is the meaning of all that we do. Let everything that we say, my fellow countrymen, everything that we henceforth plan and accomplish, ring true to this response till the majesty and might of our concerted power shall fill the thought and utterly defeat the force of those who flout and misprize what we honor and hold dear. Germany has once more said that force, and force alone, shall decide whether justice and peace shall reign in the affairs of men, whether right as America conceives it or dominion as she conceives it shall determine the destines of mankind.

"There is, therefore, but one response possible from us: Force, force to the utmost, force without stint or limit, the righteous and triumphant force which shall make right the law of the world, and cast every selfish dominion down in the dust."

Prerequisites to Peace.

(From address to the Diplomatic Corps at Mount Vernon, Va., July 4, 1918.)

"These are the ends for which the associated peoples of the world are fighting, and which must be conceded them before there can be peace:

"1. The destruction of every arbitrary power anywhere that can separately, secretly, and of its single choice disturb the peace of the world; or, if it cannot be presently destroyed, at the least its reduction to virtual impotence.

"2. The settlement of every question, whether of territory, of sovereignty, of economical arrangement, or of political relationship, upon the basis of the free acceptance of that settlement by the people immediately concerned, and not upon the basis of the material interest or advantage of any other nation or people which may desire a different settlement for the sake of its own exterior influence or mastery.

"3. The consent of all nations to be governed in their conduct toward each other by the same principles of honor and of respect for the common law of civilized society that govern the individual citizens of all modern states in their relations with one another; to the end that all promises and covenants may be sacredly observed, no private plots or conspiracies hatched, no selfish injuries wrought with impunity, and a mutual trust established upon the handsome foundation of a mutual respect for right.

"4. The establishment of an organization of peace which shall make it certain that the combined power of free nations will check every invasion of right and serve to make peace and justice the more secure by affording a definite tribunal opinion to which all must submit and by which every international readjustment that cannot be amicably agreed upon by the people directly concerned shall be sanctioned."

Great War Utterances Of President Wilson

The same logic would lead also to a declaration of war against Turkey and Bulgaria. They also are the tools of Germany. But they are mere tools and do not yet stand in the direct path of our necessary action. We shall go wherever the necessities of this war carry us, but it seems to me that we should go only where immediate and practical considerations lead us and not lead any others."

Pacifists Called Stupid.

(From address to American Federation of Labor, at Buffalo, Nov. 11 1917.)

"It is amazing to me that any group of people should be so ill-informed as to suppose, as some groups in Russia apparently suppose, that any reforms planned in the interest of the people can live in the presence of a Germany powerful enough to undermine or overthrow them by intrigue or force. Any body of free men that compounds with the present German Government is compounding for its own destruction. But that is not the whole of the story. Any man in America, or anywhere else, who supposes that the free industry and enterprise of the world can continue if the Pan-German plan is achieved and German power fastened upon the world is as fatuous as the dreamers of Russia.

"What I am opposed to is not the feeling of the pacifists, but their stupidity. My heart is with them, but my mind has a contempt for them. I want peace, but I know how to get it, and they do not. You will notice that I sent a friend of mine, Col. House, to Europe, who is as great a lover of peace as any man in the world; but I did not send him on a peace mission. I sent him to take part in a conference on how the war was to be won, and he knows, as I know, that that is the way to get peace if you want it for more than a few minutes."

Force to the Utmost.

(From address of April 6, 1918, in Baltimore, following Germany's rejection of the Fourteen Points, first proposed by Mr. Wilson Jan. 8, 1918).

"I accept the challenge. I know that you accept it. All the world shall know that you accept it. It shall appear in the utter sacrifice and self-forgetfulness with which we shall give all that we love and all that we have to redeem the world and make it fit for free men like ourselves to live in. This is the meaning of all that we do. Let everything that we say, my fellow countrymen, everything that we henceforth plan and accomplish, ring true to this response till the majesty and might of our concerted power shall fill the thought and utterly defeat the force of those who flout and misprize what we honor and hold dear. Germany has once more said that force, and force alone, shall decide whether justice and peace shall reign in the affairs of men, whether right as America conceives it or dominion as she conceives it shall determine the destines of mankind.

"There is, therefore, but one response possible from us; Force, force to the utmost, force without stint or limit, the righteous and triumphant force which shall make right the law of the world, and cast every selfish dominion down in the dust."

Prerequisites to Peace.

(From address to the Diplomatic Corps at Mount Vernon, Va., July 4, 1918.)

"These are the ends for which the associated peoples of the world are fighting, and which must be conceded them before there can be peace:

"1. The destruction of every arbitrary power anywhere that can separately, secretly, and of its single choice disturb the peace of the world; or, if it cannot be presently destroyed, at the least its reduction to virtual impotence.

"2. The settlement of every question, whether of territory, of sovereignty, of economical arrangement, or of political relationship, upon the basis of the free acceptance of that settlement by the people immediately concerned, and not upon the basis of the material interest or advantage of any other nation or people which may desire a different settlement for the sake of its own exterior influence or mastery.

"3. The consent of all nations to be governed in their conduct toward each other by the same principles of honor and of respect for the common law of civilized society that govern the individual citizens of all modern states in their relations with one another; to the end that all promises and covenants may be sacredly observed, no private plots or conspiracies hatched, no selfish injuries wrought with impunity, and a mutual trust established upon the handsome foundation of a mutual respect for right.

"4. The establishment of an organization of peace which shall make it certain that the combined power of free nations will check every invasion of right and serve to make peace and justice the more secure by affording a definite tribunal of opinion to which all must submit and by which every international readjustment that cannot be amicably agreed upon by the people directly concerned shall be sanctioned."

Armistice Proclamation.

(From the President's Proclamation of the Armistice, Nov. 11, 1918.)

"The war thus comes to an end; for, having accepted these terms of armistice, it will be impossible for the German command to renew it.

"It is not now possible to assess the consequences of this great consummation. We know only that this tragical war, whose consuming flames swept from one nation to another until all the world was on fire, is at an end, and that it was the privilege of our own people to enter it at its most critical juncture in such fashion and in such force as to contribute, in a way of which we are all deeply proud, to the great result. We know, too, that the object of the war is attained; the object upon which all free men had set their hearts; and attained with a sweeping completeness which even now we do not realize. Armed imperialism such as the men conceived who were but yesterday the masters of Germany is at an end, its illicit ambitions engulfed in black disaster. Who will now seek to revive it? The arbitrary power of the military caste of Germany which once could secretly and of its own single choice disturb the peace of the world is discredited and destroyed. And more than that—much more than that—has been accomplished. The great nations which associated themselves to destroy it have now definitely united in the common purpose to set up such a peace as will satisfy the longing of the whole world for disinterested justice, embodied in settlements which are based upon something much better and more lasting than the selfish competitive interests of powerful states. There is no longer conjecture as to the objects the victors have in mind. They have a mind in the matter, not only, but a heart also. Their avowed and concerted purpose is to satisfy and protect the weak as well as to accord their just rights to the strong.

"The humane temper and intention of the victorious Governments have already been manifested in a very practical way. Their representatives in the Supreme War Council at Versailles have by unanimous resolution assured the peoples of the Central Empires that everything that is possible in the circumstances will be done to supply them with food and relieve the distressing want that is in so many places threatening their very lives; and steps are to be taken immediately to organize these efforts at relief in the same systematic manner that they were organized in the case of Belgium. By the use of the idle tonnage of the Central Empires it ought presently to be possible to lift the fear of utter misery from their oppressed populations and set their minds and energies free from the great and hazardous tasks of political reconstruction which now face them on every hand. Hunger does not breed reform; it breeds madness and all the ugly tempers that make an ordered life impossible.

"For with the fall of the ancient Governments, which rested like an incubus on the peoples of the Central Empires, has come political changes not merely, but revolution; and revolution which seems as yet to assume no final and ordered form, but to run from one fluid change to another, until thoughtful men are forced to ask themselves with what governments and of what sort are we about to deal in the making of the covenant of peace? With what authority will they meet us, and with what assurance that their authority will abide and sustain securely the international arrangements into which we are about to enter? There is here matter for no small anxiety and misgiving. When peace is made, upon whose premises and engagements besides our own is it to rest?

"Let us be perfectly frank with ourselves and admit that these questions cannot be satisfactorily answered now or at once. But the moral is not that there is little hope of an early answer that will suffice. It is only that we must be patient and helpful and mindful above all of the great hope and confidence that lie at the heart of what is taking place. Excesses accomplish nothing. Unhappy Russia has furnished abundant recent proof of that. Disorder immediately defeats itself. If excesses should occur, if disorder should for a time raise its head, a sober second thought will follow and a day of constructive action, if we help and do not hinder. The present and all that it holds belong to the nations and the peoples who presreve their self-control and the orderly processes of their Governments, the future to those who prove themselves the true friend of mankind. To conquer with arms is to make only a temporary conquest; to conquer the world by earning its esteem is to make permanent conquest. I am confident that the nations that have learned the discipline of freedom and that have settled with self-possession to its ordered practice are now about to make conquest of the world by the sheer power of example and of friendly helpfulness.

"The peoples who have but just come out from under the yoke of arbitrary government and who are now coming at last into their freedom will never find the treasures of liberty they are in search of if they look for them by the light of the torch. They will find that every pathway that is stained with the blood of their own brothers leads to the wilderness, not to the seat of their hope. They are now face to face with their initial test. We must hold the light steady until they find themselves. And in the meantime, if it be possible, we must establish a peace that will justly define their place among the nations, remove all fear of their neighbors and of their former masters, and enable them to live in security and contentment when they have set their own affairs in order. I, for one, do not doubt their purpose or their capacity. There are some happy signs that they know and will choose the way of self-control and peaceful accommodation. If they do, we shall put our aid at their disposal in every way that we can. If they do not, we must wait with patience and sympathy the awakening and recovery that will assuredly come at last."

Plea for Review of Cases Of War-Time Offenders

letter to Secretary Weeks. Part of the draft follows:

"Hon. John W. Weeks,

"Washington, D. C.

"We appreciate the fact that early in 1919 the cases of military prisoners were reviewed by a board of officers in the Judge Advocate-General's office, but our counsel is of the opinion that many of the men who are serving 'sentences imposed for the most serious offenses' are not in any sense of the word criminals and would be good citizens if given the opportunity.

"The alleged crimes for which these men were convicted were committed under abnormal conditions, and the men were defended in many cases by young officers who had no knowledge whatever of legal proceedings.

"The fact that the President has seen fit to commute the sentences of some of these men from life imprisonment to 20 years and in some cases again to 10 years, we believe bears out our contention that, if the cases are given an impartial, fair review, many of the men convicted 'for the most serious offenses' would have their sentences so redueed as to permit them to again become constructive members of society.

Unbiased Review Wanted.

"We believe that in order to give these cases an unbiased and entirely fair review, the board should be composed of men who served during the World War overseas, and who are therefore familiar with the condition under which the men were living and the temptations to which they were subjected. We believe that in times of war heavy sentences are not only justified in cases of crime, but are absolutely essential to the maintenance of discipline. But we also believe that after the heat and passion of war have passed the men who were tried under abnormal conditions should have their cases reviewed regardless of the nature of their crimes, and we believe it would be well if the cases were reviewed by men who were taken into the service from civilian life.

"We note that the 10 cases cited in your letter of Jan. 26 are all for desertion, and that eight of the sentences are due to expire in 1924, one in 1926 and one in 1927. If there were no other cases than these coming under the class for which we ask a review, we would perhaps feel no serious obligation in requesting action, but there are men serving life sentences in the Federal penitentiary partly because of a human weakness which under abnormal conditions caused them to make a mistake, and partly because they have had no friends on the outside who could bring their cases to the attention of the President for individual consideration. We believe these men are entitled to consideration as a class, and it is for that reason that we are asking the appointment of a board to review all cases serving in our prisons at the present time as a result of military courtsmartial during the World War."

Prison Officials' Attitude.

Warden Biddle of the Federal penitentiary is now in Washington and his subordinates would not allow the war-time prisoners to be interviewed without his authorization. Officers of the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, although they looked upon the proposed civilian board as unnecessary welcomed inquiry regarding their prisoners, many of whom have been transferred from the Federal penitentiaries to their jurisdiction.

At first they maintained that the men confined in the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth should remain there, since they had been convicted of serious offenses and were unfit to associate with the barracks prisoners whom they would demoralize.

Later, after looking up the scanty records they had of the prisoners mentioned by Elton, they admitted that there might be justification for parole of several of the men, but were unwilling to commit themselves until the evidence, which is now at Washington, had been reviewed.

Some of the Cases.

One case was of Albert Rappmund, who was convicted of manslaughter and given 30 years' sentence, which was later reduced to 15 years. Rappmund claimed that on return from guard duty on a transport his rifle was accidentally discharged as he was hanging it up in a dark room. Two soldiers were struck and one is said to have died. Rappmund maintained to Elton that the courtmartial was prejudiced because he was of German parentage.

Another case was of Clarence L. Massey, a Marine, who was first given a life sentence which was later reduced to 20 years, on conviction for murder. Massey told Elton that he had been drinking with friends, that there was a brawl, and that he did not remember what happened after that. The officers at the barracks said he would be eligible for parole after serving a third of his sentence of 20 years.

Another man who is still serving a life sentence is Charles R. Payne. He was charged with having murdered a companion after a drinking bout. He maintained in a notation on his record that he had been struck over the head with a steel helmet and that he didn't remember any shooting. He claimed that he had no weapon at the time.

Two cases, though not arising from the World War, are those of Vernie E. Spires and Frank Hoskins, both still youths, according to the record, who were convicted of stealing blankets in the Philippine Islands. These blankets were worth $2000 and the boys were given 15 years each. The officers, however, stated that since they would be eligible to parole after five years, and since the policy had been for leniency in the case of young men, they would probably be released on the one-third good conduct time rule.

The officers were also inclined to take a lenient view of the case of Oscar Johnson, negro, who was given life for murder of another negro soldier. Johnson claimed that he had been drinking in a French cafe and had asked the other negro to step a little to the side so he could get to the bar. He contended that the other negro struck him twice and followed him out of the place, when he struck him again. Shortly afterward they met again, when, according to Johnson, the other negro called him names and struck him. He claimed that this time he stabbed the other negro several times.

Other Offenses During War.

In other instances the military records showed that the prisoners had been convicted of other offenses during the war. This was particularly true in the cases of moral turpitude.

The officers emphasized the fact that only the most serious offenders were sent to the Federal Penitentiary or the disciplinary barracks. In refutation of the statements of Mrs. H. H. McClure of the National Association of War Mothers that men were sentenced from 10 years to life in the Federal Penitentiary for crimes ranging from impudence to officers to murder, they cited the fact that only a soldier guilty of a common law felony could be sentenced to the Federal prison, while the highest sentence a courtmartial could give for the most serious insubordination to the officer was two years at the barracks.

The officers also refuted the argument that the prisoners should be shown leniency because their prison records were "perfect." According to them 98 per cent of the prisoners at the disciplinary barracks have this record. The other 2 per cent, according to them, are the stupid and the inherently vicious.

Inspection of Records.

At least once a year the records of all prisoners in the disciplinary barracks are reviewed, with the view, according to the officers, of determining when the prisoners will be ready for discharge. The officers maintained that a similar inspection is made yearly of military prisoners in the Federal penitentiary with the same idea in mind. Whether this is the ideal or the real situation seems to be a question, as the latest notations on some of the records were made in 1919, the date of the review mentioned by Secretary of War Weeks.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent was informed that Capt. Elton had left for a speaking tour when an attempt was made to locate him for the purpose of getting his opinions on the investigation. Other veteran officials said they knew about the matter only in a general way. When last interviewed Elton had plans of asking for aid from many national military organizations and women's clubs.

AMERICAN EXPERT IN BERLIN HEARS CONCERTS BY RADIO

Member of Committee Investigating Germany's Finances Installs Wireless Set.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—Owen D. Young, member of the Expert Committee investigating Germany's finances, has shown himself 100 per cent American in his devotion to the radio and has had a radio set installed in his hotel apartment.

There are four grand opera companies in Berlin and numerous big symphony orchestras are playing Wagner, Beethoven and the moderns nightly, while a score of companies are singing lighter operas and myriad concerts are being given daily and nightly by artists with world reputations.

With these materials to choose from, Young and his associates usually take the course of the tired American business man and listen in on the lighter radio concerts whenever they have leisure moments.

NEW SCHOOL DEDICATED

Dedication exercises for the new $360,000 Cyrus P. Walbridge School at Lillian and Davison avenues, were held at the school Friday night before a large audience of teachers and parents.

Speakers were Henry A. Rosskopf, president of the Board of Education; Stephen M. Wagner, a member, and Louis P. Aloe, former president, of the Board of Aldermen. They spoke of the need of education, complimented everybody who had anything to do with the building of the school, and told humorous stories.

About 900 pupils will attend the school, which replaces temporary buildings. Miss May B. Blanchfield is principal.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

KRUPSKAYA.

From the Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger.

THOSE of us who have been thinking that the Russian bolsheviki are hardly human will be interested in the disclosure of the tender-heartedness of the widow of Lenine. She has protested against the expenditure of large sums of money for monuments to her husband. She has asked that the memorials take the form of endowments for nurseries, kindergartens, orphanages, schools, hospitals and other institutions for the relief of the suffering people. It would be easy to say that the suffering has been caused by the bolsheviki of whom Lenine was the head and to be cynical about the proposal that something be done to counteract the effect of their policies upon the Russian people. But it would be wiser to applaud Krupskaya, as the widow is known, for her humane proposal, for whatever support she may have given to the political theories of her husband she evidently has retained her woman's heart and is moved to compassion for the suffering about her.

MAN'S INCORRIGIBILITY.

From the New York Evening World.

ONCE more the American tailor is moved to wrath by the informality of American men who persist in wearing what they please, when they please, regardless of the ukase of the modern men of Tooley street. It is distressing—this inherent cussedness that positively refuses to associate coats and trousers with works of art. It was ever thus. When Jefferson returned to New York from Paris and appeared in the elegant fashions of the boulevards he came nearer political disaster than he ever approached afterward—which may account for his free and easy dress during the remainder of his life. The knee pants of our Ambassadors, the uniforms of our diplomats have always been a vital issue with the American democracy. It is possible we are overburdened with a sense of humor that is sometimes misdirected. But if the tailors of Tooley street, three or three thousand, propose to teach American males to consult the fashion bulletin before dressing, they have undertaken a task too great for accomplishment in one generation.

A WISE INVESTMENT.

From the Baltimore Sun.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN'S gift of £100 for the advancement of certain branches of science probably created no flurry in London in 1759, when it was made. But from it has been built up a fund which now permits the payment of awards of £4000 out of the income. This result is not only a testimonial to Franklin's respect for thrift and his use of it—he knew the value of interest—but betrays as well his characteristic attitude toward science. For his own attainments in that field he was notably honored in that same year in which he founded the fund in question. It was then that he received the freedom of the city of Edinburgh and the degree of doctor of laws from the University of St. Andrews. But scientist though he was he could not have predicted the first uses of his fund. Mental healing, the nerves as electrical conductors and a rotary knife for surgical purposes are given as the topics of research which the trustees of the fund have recognized. Franklin did not imagine such things, but he had the faith to believe that science held great discoveries in store.

BANK EXAMINER'S VIEW OF 38 FAILURES IN LITTLE OVER YEAR

'frozen' and replace them with cash. Directors, in this way, have put up hundreds of thousands of dollars to hold their banks, which they had allowed to become 'shaky.' I think the period through which we are passing is witnessing the surgical operations by which the worst spots are being cleansed."

Directors of State banks in Missouri are held responsible for the management of the banks and are presumed to know all that is going on in their banks in a detailed way. "Instead, in scores of instances they have been leaving a lot of things to employes," Millspaugh continued, "and it has cost some of them dearly."

Urges Larger Surpluses.

"When the war and after-war expansion brought a hysteria of speculation the banks got caught in the current," he continued. "Then the air began to go out of the balloon. This caused some bankers and employes to get in trouble for having meddled with bank funds. We have several in the penitentiary and several awaiting trial, and three cashiers committed suicide last year on the eve of suspension of their banks. Many of the banks which had no trouble from dishonesty were caught with real estate and business loans from which the deflation had cut much of the value. But conditions are on a sounder basis now and should grow better right along.

"Provision should be made by the Legislature for the expense of expanding the department in periods of emergency, subject to consent of the Governor, the Commissioner said. He now has the authority to appoint additional examiners when needed, but no appropriation from which to pay them.

"Then there is one other thing," he said. "Some banks now are beginning a practice, after a certain rate of dividend has been earned for shareholders, of dividing the remainder of the profits among the depositors in proportion to their average deposits. I would stop that and make banks, after they have earned reasonable profits for their stockholders, build up a cushion in the form of a surplus, to act as a shock absorber in time of reverses. Those banks which have had a habit of building up a substantial surplus during the fat years have managed to weather the lean ones despite their losses."

CARGO OF COTTONSEED AND COTTON SHIPPED TO RUSSIA

Consignment From New Orleans Goes to Soviet Government—Seed for Planting in South Russia.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 9.—The Norwegian steamship Etna, which sailed from New Orleans Thursday for Murmansk, carried a cargo of 9904 bales of cotton and 765 tons of cottonseed for the Russian Soviet Government, it became known today.

The cotton was purchased by the All-Russian Textile Syndicate, Inc., of New York, and upon arrival at Murmansk will be distributed by rail to the various textile centers in the soviet republic. The large shipment of cottonseed aboard the vessel is for planting in South Russia and its purchase is taken as an indication that the soviet Government will attempt to produce a certain amount of its own cotton.

GOSSIP HEARD IN DOORN

Rumors of Rupture Between the Kaiser and Wife Denied.

By the Associated Press.

DOORN, Holland, Feb. 9.—Reports that a rupture has occurred or is imminent between the former Emperor William and the Princess Hermine, his wife, have no foundation, according to the best information here. As for a long time past, however, the village is gossiping of strained relations, and it is remarked that the couple seldom go out together.

This is attributed in some quarters to the turn of events in Germany and in others to disputes with his wife.

Moose to Seek 1000 Members.

A membership campaign to get 1000 new members for the Loyal Order of Moose in St. Louis, will be staged by that organization, beginning tomorrow, as the first step in carrying out a program of extended activities contemplated by the order in this city, it was announced yesterday by Charles A. Pearson, who will be chairman of the campaign. The membership drive will continue for one month, with approximately 50 workers calling on prospects in every section of the city. Several prizes will be given workers bringing in the greatest number of memberships, including trips to Mooseheart, the home for orphan children maintained by the Moose near Chicago and trips to Moosehaven, at Orange Park, Fla., where aged members of the organization are cared for, if they choose to enter an institution.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over RHEUMATISM

Has Also Proven Remarkably Successful in Severe Cases of Rheumatic Neuritis.

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times the terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of careful study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that overcame and completely banished every pain and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery, which he called Allenrhu, to others who were afflicted with what might be called remarkable success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. He has therefore arranged with Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. to distribute Allenrhu with the understanding that the first pint bottle does not show a big improvement in relieving pain and start you on the way to complete recovery he will gladly return your money without question.

CASHIER OF CLOSED BANK AT WOOD RIVER GIVEN YEAR

Fine of $290 Also Imposed on Irwin Hartridge and Two Other Officials.

Irwin Hartridge, who was cashier of the closed First State and Savings Bank of Wood River, Ill., was found guilty of a form of embezzlement and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary yesterday by a jury at Edwardsville. He and two other officials of the bank were fined $290 each on the same charge.

The charge grew out of receiving deposits at the bank after it had become insolvent. The specific charge was that they had received on Oct. 23, 1922, a deposit of $145, made by Emil Kraus, and their fines was double the amount of this deposit. The bank was closed Nov. 17, 1922.

H. H. Clark, former president of the bank, and Stowell Veach, former chairman of the board of directors, were the officials who were fined. Hartridge and Clark last October were tried on a similar charge, for accepting a deposit from another deposit, and a jury sentenced them to two years each in the penitentiary. They appealed this case.

Their defense in both cases was that they did not know the bank was insolvent when they received the deposits and pointed out that State bank examiners also kept the bank open for several days after the deposits in question were received.

Andrew Waldt Funeral Tomorrow.

The funeral of Andrew Waldt, 73 years old, who for more than 30 years was an engineer employed by the Post-Dispatch, will take place tomorrow from a funeral chapel at 2707 North Grand boulevard. HELD FOR SWINDLE AGAINST TWO BANKS

Chicagoan Arrested After Short-Changing Tellers Out of $380.

A short, swarthy man, with a bristly black mustache, bustled into the Wellston State Bank Frday afternoon and pushed five $100 bills through the cage window of Joseph Hiller, teller.

"Please, Mester," he said, "gimme change."

Hiller counted it out in $20 bills. The man affected bewilderment as he fingered the bills.

"No, no," he said, "me want gold."

Hiller did not have that much gold to spare. Very well, then, and the customer handed back the twenties and received his $100 bills. He mumbled thanks and departed. Hiller counted his twenties and found five missing.

At the First National Bank of Wellston the thing was repeated with Fred Rottman, teller, who found himself $280 short after the stranger departed.

Deputy Sheriff Furnishes Clew.

Deputy Sheriff Schoenbein had noticed the black and white cab in which the money-changer was traveling. When he heard about the banks' losses he notified the police. They traced the call and learned from the chauffeur that the man, accompanied by a boy, had visited several other outlying banks before dismissing the cab at the Sprague Hotel, Taylor avenue and Hodiamont tracks.

Detectives went there and, learning that a man and boy, answering the descriptions, were in a room, entered with drawn revolvers and arrested the man. In the room, they found $2400 in currency, consisting of 10 $100 bills, 46 $20 bills and 48 $10 bills.

At headquarters, a $100 bill was found in the boy's pocket. He said the man had given it to him.

Refused at Other Banks.

The prisoner said he was George Stephona, 45 years old, of 748 De Koven avenue, Chicago. The boy said he was Theodore Ristich, 13 years old, and gave the same Chicago address. The boy said he was an orphan and lived there with his uncle, Eli Ristich, and that Stephona had been living there for some time and invited him to come along to St. Louis. He knew nothing about the short-changing. He was taken to the House of Detention and Stephona was locked up.

Inquiry at the other banks disclosed that the man was refused change and did not get a chance to take any bills.

Rottman identified one of the bills obtained from him by a rubber stamp mark, and both he and Hiller identified the prisoner.

SPEEDER TURNS DOWN $100 FINE; JURY MAKES IT $275

Two-Time Offender Had Refused Prosecutor's Offer Only to Get Worst of Bargain.

Louis H. Werner, 40 years old, of 5247 Nottingham avenue, who admitted two previous convictions for speeding, was convicted in two more violations yesterday by a jury in Police Judge Homer's court. The prosecutor had offered to accept $40 fines in each case but Werner, an automobile mechanic, demanded trials by jury. One jury heard both cases and fined the defendant $30 and $225, respectively. Werner will appeal.

Motor-cycle Officer Meyers testified he arrested Werner on Dec. 15, last, after Werner had traveled 35 miles an hour on King's highway near Gravois avenue. Motor-cycle Officer Wise testified he arrested Werner on Dec. 30 for traveling 50 miles an hour on King's highway near Chippewa street.

Werner's defense was an assertion that he was "framed." On his two previous convictions he was fined, but let off with payment of court costs.

DIES AFTER DRINKING POISON

Harry Lappin, 43 years old, of 1246 Hodiamont avenue, associated with his brother, Isadore, in the management of the Union Tailoring Co., 412 Commercial Building, died at City Hospital yesterday afternoon from poison, which he swallowed in a washroom of the building in the forenoon.

He went to his brother after swallowing the poison and said, "Brother, I'm through; I've taken poison."

He left a note, written in Yiddish, in which the police were told, he said he was disgusted with life and asked his brother and brother-in-law to look after his wife and three children in the event of his death.

$2274 HOLDUP IN RELAY DEPOT OF BIG STORE

Two Employes Bound by Three Robbers and Safe Hammered Open With Sledge and Bar.

Three young men, armed with revolvers, their faces masked with handkerchiefs, entered the relay depot of Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., 3720 Laclede avenue, Friday night, bound the night watchman and another employe, hammered open and rifled a safe of $2274, representing collections from C. O. D. packages, and escaped.

Jacob Burkhardt, 50 years old, of 4207 Laclede, was the watchman on duty, though ordinarily employed at other tasks. He had left his revolver in the office and was on his 11 o'clock round when he noticed a basement window open at the rear next to an alley. He thought it previously had been closed.

Returning to the main floor, which serves as garage for delivery trucks, besides furnishing room for the sorting of bundles for delivery routes, and an office, he started toward the office, at the east side of the Laclede avenue end of the building. Two men stepped from behind a truck, compelled him to put his hands up, and forced him and William Young, an auto washer who had come to the front of the building upon hearing voices, to go to the back end of the place. Their arms were bound behind them, Burkhart said, and one of the robbers guarded them while the safe, which is in a small enclosure formed by a grating, near the west side at front of the building, was hammered open.

The robbers had brought a small sledge and a hammer, but these proved too light for the task. So they obtained a heavier sledge and a steel crowbar from the garage, with which they battered the combination off the safe and pried its doors open.

Burkhart did not see the robbers go out, because of the number of trucks parked in the depot, but believed they departed by the basement window. They left their hammer and sledge. Burkhart and Young finally managed to aid each other unbind their arms after about an hour had elapsed and telephoned to the police.

FOUR ROBBERS OBTAIN $300 PAYROLL MONEY IN HOLDUP

Ten Pay Envelopes Loot in Robbery at Office of Schaefer Supply & Wreckage Co.

Payroll robbers at 10:30 a. m. yesterday held up Andrew Schaefer and several clerks in the office of the Schaefer Building Supply and Wreckage Co., at Lexington and Clarence avenues, and escaped with 10 pay envelopes containing about $300.

There were four robbers, three of whom entered with drawn revolvers. One remained at the wheel of an automobile in which the men came and escaped. They compelled Schaefer and the clerks to lie on the floor and then rifled the safe.

Less than 20 minutes before, Patrolman Tieman of the Deer Street Station escorted the superintendent of the company to King's Highway and Waterman avenue with pay envelopes for men at work there. Tieman has been stationed every Saturday at the Schaefer plant since theft of a payroll there three months ago.

Woman Robbed of Diamond Rings

Two men entered the apartment of Mrs. Charles Faintich, 932 North Newstead avenue, at 1:30 p. m. yesterday, after one of them told her he had a package for her husband. Then one of them drew a revolver and demanded her valuables. She said she had no money, so the man told her to remove her diamond rings. She took off a $500 ring and a $100 ring and the robber pocketed them. Then the men left.

PLANS CAMPAIGN TO ELECT DRY GOVERNOR

Antisaloon League Aims to Seek to Have Legislature Prohibition Time.

The Antisaloon League of Missouri, which has announced opposition to the presidential aspirations of United States Senator James A. Reed, is preparing a vigorous campaign to elect a Governor of Missouri and a Legislature, "to settle forever the question that the people of Missouri and the United States first, last and all the time is in favor of complete prohibition and the effective enforcement of the law."

This announcement is made in the annual report of Dr. A. J. Post, superintendent of the Antisaloon League of Missouri.

The report points out that presidential, congressional and gubernatorial candidates, as well as candidates for lesser offices, who favor prohibition, will be "the target for the enemies' guns. The organization, says, is building up a strong and efficient Antisaloon League organization to conduct a campaign of publicity and information that will leave no voter in doubt as to the issues."

To "Lead All."

Preparations for this campaign have been under way "for months," the report says, and the first step to be taken will be the raising of "lending aid to the election of delegates to our state and national conventions."

The report, dealing with legislative action toward liquor laws, says:

"There is increasing evidence that, after three years, the people are beginning to realize that the imposition of fines which amount to nothing more than a graduated license tax on the vast profits of the illegal liquor traffic is powerful to stop the criminal. We commend those Judges who are promoting efficient enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment by imposing jail sentences and degrading offenders of the law of property for saloons and other unlawful purposes."

Gus Nations Commended.

The report also points out that a small number of Federal agents are assigned to Missouri, but that the National Director has promised an additional force when the opportunity offers.

Gus O. Nations is commended as one of the "most efficient and capable officials in the entire country."

Resolutions were adopted by the league commending the policies of President Coolidge, Attorney General Daugherty and Prohibition Commissioner Haynes on dry law enforcement. Another resolution opposed any change in the present law to increase the legal alcoholic content of beverages.

BLIND NEGRO ASPHYXIATED

Was Foreman of Broom Shop for the Sightless.

Arthur Jackson, 46, blind negro foreman of the negro broom shop of the Missouri Commission for the Blind, 1624 North Jefferson Avenue, was asphyxiated by gas in his room at 2037 Pine Street yesterday morning. It appears that he had tried to light a gas heater and was not aware that the flowing gas had not been ignited.

Officials of the commission say that his death will be a great loss to the 25 blind men who are employed at the shop. He went blind eight 10 years ago, but taught himself broommaking and other trades, and two years later started teaching others. He owned several hundred dollars worth of Liberty Bonds and had saved several hundred dollars besides.

Roomers Flee From Burning House.

A number of roomers in the 3-story room house at 4001 Delmar Boulevard fled from the place in their night attire at 12:05 a. m. yesterday when fire supposed to have originated from crossed electric wires partially destroyed the place. Walter E. Furrer conducted the house as a rooming house, having acquired it recently. The damage was estimated at $6000 to building and contents.

Antisaloon League Also Will Seek to Have Legislature of Prohibition Tinge.

The Antisaloon League of Missouri, which has announced its opposition to the presidential aspirations of United States Senator James A. Serious-Minded Young Debutantes Shunning Society's Lighter Side To Seek Pleasure Aiding Others

Their Work With the Junior League, Baby Welfare Clinics and Other Organizations Indicates Passing of the Social Butterfly—Many Members of Social Set Taking Up Study of Drama and Art.

THE social butterfly is becoming extinct, and with her passing is vanishing the popular conception that the young society woman is a selfish and extravagant individual, bent only on pursuit of personal pleasure. In fact, the modern girl of that more or less exalted group of persons known as society, is a valuable asset to any community, and is ready at any time to do her share in alleviating the poverty and hardships to be found among the less fortunate.

It is true that she flutters for a few short months, usually—although the present season has been a short one—from the first of October to the last of January—through a brilliant succession of luncheons, coming-out teas and elaborate balls, but after the first thrill of a formal debut is over, she turns her attention to more serious matters.

If the bud is fortunate enough to obtain one of the coveted invitations to the Junior League, a number of avenues are open to her, and she immediately interests herself in one of their favorite projects. In St. Louis, of course, there are Miss Gregg's house on Blair avenue, where hundreds of children in that neighborhood are being taught, amused and cared for, and a lunchroom, where the young women gather to dispense the noon-day meal to the poorer classes. Miss Grace Wallace and Miss Janet Collins are especially interested in the former project, and go there several times a week to amuse and read to the small children.

Then there are Baby Welfare clinics, such as the one on South Broadway, where Miss Mary O'Fallon, Miss Lucy Hoblitzelle and Miss Mary Virginia Collins go several times a week to do clerical work, help care for the babies or generally make themselves useful.

The art schools are attracting many of the debutantes this year, and those who have a penchant for painting or drawing have joined classes. Three of the popular debutantes, Miss Margaret Caradine, Miss Marie Carr Taylor and Miss Marie Christy Tiffany, go to Washington University three times a week to study the branch of art for which they have talent. Miss Tiffany favors sculptoring and has embraced that as her study, while the other two young women work at oil painting and charcoal drawing. The Junior League shop for the handicapped to be opened in the near future in connection with their new library branch, will afford opportunity for many of the buds, and some of those now away on mid-winter trips will be home in time for its inaugural week, and have pledged themselves to serve on certain days behind the counters.

Miss Ruth Cornet, who always has been interested in art, will return to Washington University tomorrow to resume her course, which was interrupted by her duties as a debutante. Miss Dorothy Folk, on the other hand, bends her energies toward dramatics, and has finally gained her parents' consent to instruction at the Morse School. She will essay the role of instructor next summer at Mrs. Alice Orr Clark's Camp at Three Fish Creek, Wis., where she is to have full charge of dramatics among the children.

Miss Janet Phelan will wait until her return from the East, where she will go early this spring for the wedding of her brother, Towner Phelan, and Miss Elizabeth Simon, before settling down to consistent study. Then she is to continue her study of French, begun in Switzerland, where she attended school.

One has only to listen to small groups of the buds as they congregate at each other's houses or in tea shops to discuss their aspirations to be convinced of their sincerity, and unless the debutante marries during her first year out, which is rarely the case, she is almost sure to adopt some charity as a field of endeavor, or affiliate herself with an organization which does civic or other good in the community.

Mrs. Laura Ferris Thrasher, widow of W. C. Thrasher of East St. Louis, and Alvin C. Carpenter were quietly married yesterday afternoon at the home of N. Scott Magruder, in the St. Regis apartments. The Rev. Dr. John W. MacIvor officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter departed immediately after the ceremony to join the Chamber of Commerce cruise to Cuba and Central America, sailing from New Orleans Feb. 15. Upon their return in the latter part of March, the couple will reside at Hotel Chase, where both have made their home for a year. The engagement, although rumored among their friends, was not announced until yesterday.

Conspicuous among the social events of the week will be the College Club benefit performance tomorrow night at the Schubert-Jefferson theater. Theater parties have been arranged, a few of them for debutantes, and the boxes will be filled with alumni of the various colleges. The Washington University box was bought by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wright, who will have a party. Dr. and Mrs. Archer O'Reilly will be hosts in the Harvard University box, with Mr. and Mrs. George Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. B. Thompson as guests. Dr. and Mrs. George Gellhorn in the Bryn Mawr College box, will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. Evarts Graham. Mrs. Horton Watkins purchased the Vassar College box, and Mrs. Edmund Brown that of Cornell University. Amherst College alumni, headed by Allen Wyman, will occupy the Amherst College box. Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer of Lindenwood College, will entertain a group of friends in a box draped with that school's colors, and groups will represent St. Louis University and the University of Missouri. Later they will attend a supper dance at the Jefferson Hotel. Among the debutante parties will be one given by Mr. and Mrs. J. Sheppard Smith in honor of their debutante niece, Miss Isabelle Chenie Smith. The additional guests will be Misses Clara Garneau, Marguerite Moll, Jane Parsons, Mary Francis Dickson, and Messrs. Clarence Maloy, Dick McLane, William Gardner, William B. Compton Jr., and Richard Orthwein.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Johnson of 25 Portland place and Mr. and Mrs. J. Dwight Filley, of Westmoreland place, will leave St. Louis Feb. 23 for Belleaire, Fla., Mr. and Mrs. Max Kotany of Westminster place will spend the late winter in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Miss Isabelle Draper of Cincinnati, who is the guest of Miss Augusta Cook. Miss Cook and her mother, Mrs. Isaac Cook, will give a large tea for her tomorrow.

Approach of St. Valentine's Day Gives Impetus to Entertaining; Teas and Ball on Social Calendar

Buffet Suppers and Bridge Luncheons Among Varied List of Affairs to Be Given During the Week.

THE approach of St. Valentine's Day seems to have given a slight impetus to entertaining, and on the social calendar for this week are several interesting parties. Beginning with a buffet supper tonight which Mr. and Mrs. James E. Crawford will give for the latter's sister, Miss Julia Lawain, until after Thursday, when there are a number of Valentine entertainments, St. Louisans will be more or less busy.

The largest affair tomorrow is a tea for 200 guests at which Mrs. Isaac Cook and her daughter, Miss Augusta, will entertain Miss Cook's cousin, Miss Isabelle Draper of Cincinnati, who is visiting here. A group of debutantes will serve, and a number of the hostess' friends are to assist in serving. The buds are Misses Janet Collins, Margaret Caradine, Jane Parsons, Elizabeth Tupper, Mary Francis Dickson, and Katherine Sipple. Misses Emily Milliken, Claire Garneau, Eula Wilson, and Mmes. Walker Mason and Alonzo Christy Church will assist. The party will be given at the Cook home on Lindell boulevard.

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. George A. Randolph, who will be her children have been spending the winter at the Gatesworth Hotel, will give a bridge luncheon at the St. Louis Woman's Club. Her guests will be Mmes. Edward K. Love, Marshall Hodgman, David Fentress, Willard Bartlett, Royal H. Switzler, Peter Bernard Behr, Paul Janis, J. Clark Streett, Thomas T. Richards, Frederick R. von Wingegger and Misses Edgs Gamble and Grace Morrill. Miss Hannah Bemis of 5 Kingsbury place will be hostess at a luncheon Wednesday afternoon for Mrs. James Richmond Ingham of Buffalo, formerly Miss Florence Leland, who is visiting her parents here.

Thursday there is a Valentine's tea for Miss Elizabeth Thatcher. The affair will be given by Miss Henriette de Penaloza and her mother, Mrs. Marie Reine F. de Penaloza of Ferguson. Hearts and other appropriate symbols will be used in the decorations. A costume ball to be given that night by Miss Elaine Voight and her sister, Miss Helen, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Voight Jr., at their new home on Cates avenue, will complete the day's program. Friday, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Priest will entertain at a buffet supper and dance at the Log Cabin Club for their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett Priest.

The Garden Club of St. Louis is sponsoring the lecture to be given tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock, at the Artists' Guild Theater, 812 North Union Boulevard, by Fletcher Steele, landscape architect, of Boston, on "Landscape and Garden Design for the Small Garden." It will be illustrated with pictures, and the lecture is open to the public, tickets to be obtained from members, or at the Guild tomorrow evening. Eugene H. Angert is president of the Garden Club; Mrs. James F. Drummond, vice-president, and W. N. Matthews, secretary and treasurer, and among the members are many prominent men and women interested in the promotion of "more gardens for St. Louis."

Miss Betty Hodgman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Hodgman of 5879 Waterman avenue, is in New York, where she was bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Eleanor Chauvenet well. She will visit her aunt, Mrs. [illegible] Chauvenet, in Boston before returning.

ST. LOUISANS ENJOY TRIPS TO RESORTS

Miss Alice Scott, daughter of Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott of 31 Westmoreland place will depart today for Castle Hot Springs, Ariz., to join Mr. and Mrs. George Fox Steedman and their debutante daughter, Miss Katherine. She will remain until March, when she will go to California to attend the wedding of her brother, George Deake Scott, and Miss Mary Keck of East Hampton, L. I., which will take place at the Keck winter home some time in the spring. Miss Keck, who has been Mrs. Scott's guest for a week, has returned home. Among those who entertained for her besides Mrs. Scott, were Mrs. G. Leighton Bridge and Mrs. John F. Shepley.

Mr. and Mrs. William K. Bixby of 26 Portland place, with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Bixby, have gone to Miami, Fla. They will go by boat from there to Nassau, to remain two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Davis of 12 Westmoreland place will depart about March 20 for Hot Springs, Va., to join the pre-Easter colony. Mr. Davis is spending a fortnight at Lake Placid, N. Y., taking part in the winter sports.

Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus of 33 Westmoreland place, and her son, Charles P. Pettus Jr., will return in a week from Palm Beach, Fla.

Mrs. George Welsch Simmons of Clayton has returned from a visit in New York.

Miss Beatrice Peeples has gone to her home in Los Angeles after a visit to Miss Eleanor Simmons of 46 Westmoreland place.

Mr. and Mrs. George Shields of 6400 Wydown boulevard have gone South for a month. They will return in three weeks, by way of New York.

Mrs. Walter G. Battle of 12 Washington terrace has gone to Chicago to meet her daughter, Mrs. James Bemis, who has been in New York with Mr. Bemis' mother, Mrs. W. N. Bemis. Mrs. Battle and her daughter are expected home the latter part of the week.

Mrs. W. N. Bemis of 5 Kingsbury place, is visiting in New York. En route home she will be the guest in Chicago of Mrs. George Trammell, arriving in St. Louis in 10 days.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman Miller of 32 Portland place, are in New York for a visit.

Miss Dorothy Brown, daughter of William C. Brown of Westminster place will take the Chamber of Commerce cruise to Panama and Bermuda, sailing Feb. 13.

HUNDREDS OF NEW SPRING

COATS SUITS DRESSES

Irresistible Styles and Values at $25

To offer savings on the newest Spring apparel that will impel women to choose wardrobes as much in advance of the wearing season as possible is the underlying policy of the "Boosting February Sales."

The styles, which seem to be unending, are as charming as the values are unusual. Economical women who strive to dress in fashion should readily see the advantage of anticipating Spring needs now.

The Coats

For sport and street wear are in the new full-length styles, fashioned in loose, swagger effects. Attractively trimmed with plain and novelty collars, sleeves and pockets. Belted or beltless models developed in the new plaids, stripes, checks and solid effects. Silk lined and best of tailoring.

The Suits

The popularity of the Suit for Spring wear has inspired many smart style versions in the new mannish effects, short coat models and long tailored styles. Single or double breasted; with or without belts; in solid patterns, hairline stripes and checks.

The Dresses

Will immediately invite selection. Hundreds of dainty Spring styles in the desired high shades. Silk or cloth models for any Spring occasion and immediate wear. Dresses of every description for misses and women in a complete showing.

(Third Floor.)

Smartest, New Spring Millinery

Spring is here so far as this popular department is concerned. Hundreds of refreshing hats for selection. Everything that's new and stylish for misses and matrons is included. Many of the chic, small models, roll brims, medium size mushrooms and novelty effects. Developed in the wanted bright Spring shades and trimmed in innumerable ways.

MANY PARTIES GIVEN AND PLANNED

One of the largest teas of the week was given Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Merritt Hutton Marshall Jr., of 5297 Washington boulevard, in honor of Misses Leonelle Cleveland and Bernice Todd, both of whom are to be early spring brides. Miss Cleveland, who is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Cleveland, will become the bride of Mrs. Marshall's son, Jay B. Close, while Miss Tod will be married Feb. 20, to Frederick W. Peters, at the Second Baptist Church, with a reception following at the Todd home.

About 400 guests called at the Marshall home Wednesday between 3 and 6 o'clock. The reception rooms were decorated in pink and white roses, and the same flowers prevailed in the dining room, where a group of young women presided over the tea table and assisted. They were Misses Vergene Goin, Luella and Helen Todd, Edna May Martin, Marion Ogle and Maud Niehaus, and Mmes. James Butler, Thomas Archer Cleveland and Frank Stafford Hager. Over the table, hung satin-clad kewpies holding showers of satin ribon, while on the floor at other end of the table were artificially blooming rose bushes lighted from within by incandescent globes.

Parties for visitors continue to occupy the attention of many social leaders. Mrs. Sherman Whipple Jr. of Boston, who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Jones, of Webster Groves, has been much feted the past week. Friday Mrs. Jones gave an informal tea in her honor, and Mrs. John C. Roberts Jr., and Mrs. Paul Jones Jr., gave a bridge luncheon and dinner, respectively.

Last night, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Weed were hosts at a dinner for Mrs. Shirley Morgan of Princeton, N. J., and Mrs. H. J. Morgan of Toledo, who came here for the wedding of Miss Irene Goddard and Edwin S. Elder on Jan. 26. There have been a number of other affairs given for them, including a luncheon by Mrs. J. Clark Streett.

One of the attractive debutante parties of the week was the dinner Friday night at which Mr. and Mrs. J. Porter Tirrill were hosts and Miss Jane Parsons, daughter of Mrs. John B. Denvir Jr., the honor guests. The other buds present were Misses Julia Lawnin, Mary O'Fallon, Mary Frances Dickson, Marie Carr Taylor, Isabelle Smith, Janet Collins and Elizabeth Tupper. Other guests were Misses Elizabeth Smith and Claire Garneau, and Messrs. Richard Shipley, Clarence Maloy, Lindell Gordon, William Gardner, Sproule Love, William Guyties, David Calhoun, Clifton Scudder, John O'Day, Edwin Slocum, Louis Lumaghi, Winston and John Johns, William Goltra and McNair Bakewell.

The largest event of social interest this week will be the Margaret A. E. McLure Chapter, United Daughters of Confederacy, ball at Hotel Chase Friday evening. The grand march will begin at 9 o'clock, and will be led by Mrs. Calvin P. Starks, matron of honor, and Thomas E. Pope, chairman of the Floor Committee, which includes, in addition to a number of prominent St. Louis men, officers from Jefferson Barracks, navy and marine officers and heads of a number of world war organizations. The maids of honor will make their entry in the grand march. They are Misses Virginia Black, Dorothy Daves, Florence Marshall, Melba Noble, Emma May Dorris, Irene Pringle, Helen Todd, Elizabeth Russell, Estelle Robnett, Alice Williams, Dorothy Meyer, Frances Rutherford, Adelaide Tarrant, Ruth Simon and Dorothy Rose Scott.

Mrs. L. R. Ray is chairman of the Reception Committee which includes members of Margaret A. E. McLure Chapter. Among other ball committee chairmen are Mmes. W. A. Vivion, H. O. Byrd, George Andrae, John Hurck, Thomas F. Browne, H. S. O'Bannon, J. L. Griswold, M. H. Dickey, A. E. Morgan, A. M. Seawell and T. M. Young. Among the patronesses are: Mmes. J. P. Higgins, A. C. Meyer, J. F. Hickey, H. C. Kirkpatrick, Clark T. Cooper, George F. Stevens, Walter N. Crane, George F. Powell, C. S. Jones, John H. Bogue, O. S. Wilfley, George N. Dukes Jr., C. B. Faris, Thomas E. Powe, E. B. Sherzer, Hugh Miller, William H. Carthy, R. A. Byers, John Paegelow, H. E. Yates, K. E. Hentze, N. E. Landon, F. G. Jonah, Paul J. Guerard, Waller Edwards, Shelby Curlee, J. C. Crowdus, Eugene Fuss, John T. Moss, Ray Burns, Joseph McKean, O. A. Wall, Ralph Bugbee, McCune Gill, W. H. Nauheim, Philo Young and A. C. Barre.

The Art Students' Association of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts at Washington University has sent out announcements of the annual costume ball in the ballroom of the Coronado Hotel Friday evening. A feature will be the coronation of a queen of love and beauty. Proceeds from the affair will provide a scholarship for an art pupil who has attended art school at least one year. Harry B. Spear and Roland Kaetzel, president and treasurer, are in charge of arrangements and tickets.

Of interest is the card party to be given by Matthew Fontaine Maury Chapter, U. D. C., in the ball room of the Forest Park Hotel Saturday afternoon. Among those who have made reservations are Mmes. W. L. Kline, William Bagnell, Lorraine Jones, Ben F. Grey, James M. Sloan, J. P. Higgins, W. Speed Stephens, A. C. Meyer, George F. Powell, J. F. Smartt, E. G. Skillern, John R. H. F. Bisbee, A. P. Lansing, L. F. Jones, G. E. Burford, Winthrop Chappell and Samuel McKnight Green.

Miss Valentine Vogel of 5179 Cabanne avenue, entertained a group of her classmates at a bridge luncheon Friday. There were students from Principia Academy, Washington University and the School of Fine Arts.

The Kappa Delta Theta Society of St. Luke's Episcopal Mission will give a Valentine party Tuesday evening in the guild room, Theta and Arlington avenues, to which young people of the neighborhood are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Maher of 5907 Page avenue celebrated their silver wedding anniversary Saturday evening. About 60 couples were present.

The Traffic Club of St. Louis will give its first annual dinner dance at Hotel Statler Tuesday at 6:30 p. m.

Jerome L. Goldman Post, American Legion, will give a Lincoln dance this evening at Trimps Academy, Delmar and Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Mantell and their company of Shakspeare players were guests of honor at a luncheon given Tuesday at Hotel Statler by the St. Louis Tercentenary Shakspeare Society. At the speakers' table, besides Mr. and Mrs. Mantell, were the Rev. Robert Hall Atchison, Dr. A. N. De Menil, Mgr. J. J. Tannrath, John H. Gundlach, Richard Spamer, Mrs. John S. Payne, Mrs. Alice Lavelle Macdonald, Mrs. O. S. Ledman, Dean Lucinda Templin of Lindenwood College, A. Rosenthal, Harry McLain and Mrs. Harry E. Wagoner, president of the society. After the luncheon, an informal meeting was held by Mrs. Harry E. Wagoner, who asked Mrs. Payne to act as chairman, and a Shakspeare State Association was formed with Mrs. Wagoner as president; Mrs. W. W. Keysor, vice president; Mrs. Milton Sontheimer, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. W. H. Williams, chairman of information.

The regular monthly program, to which the public is invited, will be given on Tuesday at 2 p. m. in the Vandevoort Music Hall. Dr. Arthur Bostwick will talk on "Memorizing Shakspeare"; Prof. W. M. Jenkins, organist; Mrs. Charles Blankenship, contralto, and Mrs. Esmeraldo Berry-Mayes, pianist, will furnish the musical part of the program.

A topic of interest in Catholic circles is the charity pageant at the Odeon on Feb. 22, 23 and 26 by the Students' Mission Crusade, in which the young women of the Visitation and Sacred Heart convents and Loretto College will take part. The pageant, entitled "The Dreamer Awakes," is the work of the Rev. Daniel Lord, S. J., of St. Louis University.

Among those who have reserved boxes for the opening performance of the pageant are Misses Eugenie Chouteau and Josephine Bamberse; Mmes. Festus J. Wade, J. D. Morrison, Ira E. Wight, E. J. You'll Get Rid of Blackheads Sure
There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them.
To do this get two ounces of calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

WASHINGTON'S SOCIETY HALTS ACTIVITIES AS MARK OF MOURNING

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Plunged into mourning by the death of former President Wilson, affairs of Washington society virtually came to a halt during the last week. The social round will be resumed next week.

President and Mrs. Coolidge led the way in postponing social events by promptly canceling the remaining official events of the winter season at the White House. This means no congressional reception or army or navy reception this year and also the cancellation of the Speaker's dinner, one of the recent innovations in White House entertaining.

This custom of giving the Speaker of the House a dinner after the congressional reception dates back only to President's Taft's administration, when, through his fondness for the late Champ Clark of Missouri, he inaugurated a Speaker's dinner, at which the head of the lower house and his wife should be guests of honor.

The death of Woodrow Wilson recalls that there are now living four widows of former Presidents, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, widow of President Cleveland; Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt and Mrs. Warren G. Harding, who has come to Washington for the winter. So quickly does the glamor of the White House fade for its fair mistresses after they leave it that nobody recognized the heavily-veiled figure of Mrs. Harding at the Wilson obsequies Thursday.

Word has come from Sweden that the American Minister and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss will come to this country on a visit this spring, principally to inspect the progress on their new Georgetown home. Mrs. Bliss was Miss Mildred Barnes of St. Louis.

Mrs. Clyde Connelly of Kansas City, historian general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was in this city for the week, attending the quarterly meeting of the National Board of that organization.

Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the Senator from Missouri, who has been spending a week at Battle Creek, Mich., has returned to Washington and has reopened her home, Boundary Castle, for the remainder of the winter.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Thomson is visiting her sister and brother-in-law, Col. and Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge, at their quarters at the Marine Barracks. Mrs. Breckenridge and Miss Thomson assisted at the tea which Mrs. Hugh Cumming, wife of the Surgeon-General, gave Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Breckenridge Long will entertain at dinner Tuesday night, when their guests will include members of the Diplomatic Corps.

Mrs. Selden P. Spencer was among those entertaining at luncheon Monday.

Miss Bertha Coontz has returned from school to spend the week-end with her parents, Admiral and Mrs. Robert Coontz.

Miss Bessie McKeldin, daughter of Mrs. Leigh Palmer, wife of the president of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and Miss Janet Moffett will be the guests of honor at a house party to be given by Mrs. Robert Lovell, at her country place in Virginia this week. Miss McKeldin and Miss Moffett were guests of honor at dinner of the Minister from Greece and Mme. Tsamdos and Miss Nina Diamantopolus, at the Greek Legation, last week. The dinner was followed by dancing.

Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins was one of the special guests at the luncheon given by Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general of the National Board of Management of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Thursday, after the February board meeting Mrs. Hodgkins is vice president general.

Mrs. James A. Reed, who was to have entertained 40 guests at luncheon, Saturday, recalled her invitations because of the death of former President Wilson. This luncheon will be given at the end of the period of mourning. Mrs. Reed also has canceled her weekly days at home until later in the season.

The meeting of the Missouri Society will be held the last Saturday in the month, with a special list of speakers from Missouri. Representative Cleveland Newton is the president. Mrs. Newton received at the Congressional Club last week.

Miss Bessie McKeldin entertained at luncheon, followed by a mah jong party, when her guests were Misses Janet Mofett, Natalie Hammond, Ruth Stoddard, Claudia Rea and other members of the Washington debutante set of this year.

2000 Dresses, including crepes, vella-vella, French flannel, lace, satin charmeuse, Poiret. Samples from leading makers. Half price and less. Latest, newest. Dress better for half.

I Still Look 20

after 32 years as a star

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Some of you remember me as a famous stage beauty over 30 years ago. Perhaps in "The Girl I Left Behind Me," in "La Belle Helene," in "Wang," or "Florodora."

Many of you see me now, playing young girls' parts, still looking like a girl in her 'teens.

Thousands of women have asked me the secrets of this perennial youth. I have supplied them to many, and they, like I, have kept their girlish charms.

Now for all women

Now I am persuaded that I owe this information to all womankind. I have obtained by world-wide search, the best beauty helps in existence. I know they could bring to millions what they brought to me.

So I have arranged to supply these helps to all who want them—as a duty to my sex. I have had them prepared with the utmost skill, without regard to cost. And they are sold at modest prices, with small regard to profit.

Thus I hope to bring to girls and matrons everywhere the benefits I got. And no woman could ask for more.

My beautiful mother

My mother died a girlish beauty at the age of 57. From my earliest years she taught me her secrets. Then together we traveled the beauty-loving world in search of better methods.

We consulted able scientists, beauty specialists and famous beauties everywhere. The search cost us a fortune. But it brought to me and mine, and friends of mine, decades of added youth.

Now those helps are yours if you desire—the best that science knows. And I hope that my results will lead you to employ them.

White Youth Clay

I owe my debutante complexion largely to a superclay. Not like the crude and muddy clays so many use today, but a clean, refined clay which dries white. It is based on 20 years of scientific study by the ablest of clay experts.

One who applies it feels the impurities fairly drawn from the skin. All that clogs the skin comes out—the causes of blackheads and blemishes. The blood is brought to the surface. Large pores, lines and wrinkles yield.

Wash it off when it dries, then behold a new complexion, soft and rosy, clear and firm. The results will amaze and delight you. Many women in those thirty minutes seem to drop ten years.

Clay is a beauty essential. No woman looks her best without it, none keeps her youthful bloom. Women who use clay today stand out in any crowd.

Don't use crude and muddy clays, for they will disappoint. Try this supreme creation—the last word in facial clays. It will be a revelation.

Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay comes in tubes, at 50c and $1.

Facial Youth

This is a liquid cleansing cream which I learned about in France. It contains no animal, no vegetable oil, so it cannot assimilate with the skin. It simply cleans to the depths, then departs. All the grime, all that clogs the skin goes with it. I use it night and morning, and whenever else my face needs cleaning.

Compare it with any cleansing cream or any cleansing method. You will be surprised at the extra dirt my Facial Youth removes. And a clean skin is essential to beauty.

The greatest beauty experts in the world now advise this formula for cleansing. But they charge a very high price. Edna Wallace Hopper's Facial Youth sells for 75c per bottle.

Youth Cream

This is my cold cream which I apply at night. Also in daytime as a powder-base. Also after every application of my Youth Clay or Facial Youth.

Youth Cream contains both lemon and strawberry. It is the only cream, I believe, which combines these fruit effects.

It softens, whitens, feeds and tones the skin. After its use I awake in the morning blooming like a girl in her 'teens.

In all my many years of searching, I have never found a cold cream to compare with this. Nor has any woman whom I know. Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream costs 60c per jar.

It comes in two types—the Cold Cream type and the Vanishing type. Be sure to get the type you want. Both have the same essential constituents. Neither grows hair on the face.

Hair Youth

My hair is my greatest glory. It is thick, silky, lustrous and grows finer every year. Before I bobbed it, it fell below my knees.

I have never had falling hair or dandruff, and never a touch of gray. Nor has any friend who uses my formula. Nor had mother, who found this formula in France. She died at 57 with hair like mine today.

This is due to my Hair Youth. I apply it daily with an eye-dropper—just enough to dampen the scalp. This method does not grease the hair.

Hair Youth daily combats the hardened oil and dandruff which stifle the hair's growth. It stimulates and fertilizes the hair roots, from which come hair health and hair color.

Look at my luxuriant hair. Then see what I used to get it. Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth costs 50c and $1, with eye dropper.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Beauty Helps are now sold everywhere. But I will gladly send you a leaf of one, and with it my Beauty Book. Check in this coupon the one you want and send it in today.

CLUB NEWS OF ST. LOUIS AND SUBURBS

There will be a party at the College Club on Tuesday, Feb. 12, at 3 o'clock for new members. The officers will receive, assisted by the membership committee, Miss Mildred McCluny, Mrs. John Edwards, Miss Alice Ernst, Mrs. William H. Lambert, Mrs. F. J. Hoffmeister, Mrs. Ridgley Young, Mrs. Warren Rainey, Miss Mary Lee Faris, Mrs. T. H. Deffendall, Mrs. W. C. Ropiquet. Club members are asked to help in welcoming the new members. An informal meeting will be held on Friday, Feb. 15, at 3 p. m. Miss Marie Stifel will be hostess, assisted by Mrs. William Lee Ustick, Mrs. Fred Hammond, Miss Dorothy Wiggins, Miss Mildren Petring, Mrs. Lorenz Ayers.

The Political Study Class of the Wednesday Club will hold the first meeting of February on Tuesday morning at 10:30. The political lesson will be upon ward committeemen and women. Mrs. Charles Houts is chairman of the day. Mrs. Clark McAdams will give the information for the Democratic party and Mrs. Hays for the Republican party.

Sam A. Baker of Jefferson City will address the Wednesday Club class at 11 a. m.

The Educational Section of the Wednesday Club will hold its regular meeting at 10:30 Wednesday mroning, Feb. 13. Mrs. Henry Caulfield is chairman of this section. The program for the day is as follows: "Eighteenth Century Thought and Education," by Mrs. Ernest Klipstein, and a paper on "Rousseauism" by Mrs. E. O. Heyl. Following this meeting luncheon will be served to members and their guests.

The Poetic Section will meet the same day at 1 p. m. Mrs. William Bartlett will preside in the absence of the chairman, Mrs. E. C. Saxton, who is in California. Officers for the coming year will be elected and Mrs. Bartlett, who is chairman of the program committee, will give her report. Prof. Gaston Douay of Washington University will speak on "The Poetic Drama of France and Belgium in the Last Fifty Years." Mrs. Philip A. Shaffer is leader for the day.

The Missouri Society of the Colonial Dames of America will continue through February its effort to raise the Missouri quota for the Sulgrare Manor Fund. This money will be applied to the maintenance of the ancestral home in England of George Washington's family. The property was purchased and partially restored by volunteer English and American committees about 10 years ago.

Interested parties may send their checks or money to Mrs. James E. Allison, 5825 Cates avenue, treasurer, or to Mrs. Ben F. Gray, 374 Walton avenue, president of the Missouri Dames.

The first meeting of The Pioneer Chapter, United States Daughters of 1812, was held at the home of Mrs. Ben F. Gray, 374 Walton avenue, Saturday afternoon, Feb. 2. The following officers were installed:

Regent, Mrs. Theodore Shelton; First Vice Regent, Mrs. A. W. Southward; Second Vice Regent, Mrs. Ben F. Gray; Third Regent, Mrs. Howard Bailey; Fourth Regent, Mrs. J. P. Higgins; Fifth Regent, Mrs. Wm. Bagnell; Recording Secretary, Miss Hallie Baker; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. O. S. Wilfley; Treasurer, Mrs. Ben B. Foster; Registrar, Mrs. R. W. Bagbee; Historian, Mrs. Harry Donaghy; First Director, Mrs. Jas. L. Paynter; Second Director, Mrs. Jos. T. McAdoo; Third Director, Mrs. E. G. Skinner and Fourth Director, Mrs. E. C. Gibson.

The week's program at the Town Club opens with the regular dinner Tuesday at 6 p. m. Friday evening, Mrs. Demarchus Brown, famous traveler, will give an after-dinner talk on "Greece and the Greek People." At the monthly luncheon Saturday, Feb. 16, Mrs. Brown will give a word-picture entitled "A Corner in Allah's Garden," to the luncheon guests.

The History and Literature Section of the Monday Club met in the forenoon of Feb. 4. The Iliad group completed its program. The Shakspeare class will take up the study of King Henry V. Mrs. Adeline Palmier Wagoner, president of the Tetrcentenary Shakspeare Club of St. Louis, gave the wooing scene from the fifth act of this play.

The Education and Current Topics Section of the club met in the afternoon of the same day. Mrs. F. J. Steuber, leader, called on Mrs. B. H. Peck, Mrs. A. G. Pohlman, Mrs. F. C. Crippen and Mrs. C. M. Skinner for current topics. Mrs. E. F. Andrews of Kirkwood gave two vocal selections. Dr. Irene Blanchard completed the program with a talk on the modern trend in medicine, and recent discoveries in medicine and surgery.

The Pioneers gave their annual birthday party at Dorr & Zeller's. After luncheon was served each member represented one of Goethe's literary characters, or one of his own circle of family or friends. Mrs. Ernst Jones was hostess for the day. A paper on "Goethe's Official Life at Wiemar," prepared and read by Mrs. Pauline Obermeyer, and a paper on "Goethe's Literary Friendships," by Mrs. Maurice Weil, and finally a discussion on "Goethe's Patriotism," led by Mrs. Wm. Schield.

The Carondelet Women's Club, M. F. W. C., held its annual mid-winter open meeting at the Carondelet Library, Monday evening. Mrs. Donald MacDonald gave readings from "Twelfth Night" and "The Taming of the Shrew." Musical numbers were "A Caprice," the music of which was written by Mrs. G. W. Coffman, the words by Miss Margaret de Loughter, and it was sung by Misses Maud Bebee, Artie Walters and Mmes. Bender and McLoon. Mrs. Henry Bender also sang a solo, accompanied by Mrs. G. W. Coffman. A

He Is Looking 'Em Over Again

"Eight years of stomach and liver trouble reduced me to a walking skeleton. My skin was dried up and as yellow as a twenty-dollar gold piece. I was filled with gas and had severe pains in my right side. I could not think and had lost all ambition to do anything. Doctors' medicine did not touch me. My cousin advised Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, which snatched me from the grave. I have gained sixty pounds, eat like a hired man and am looking 'em over again." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph (3 stores), Enderle Drug Co. (5 drug stores), Brown-Cloughly, Johnson Bros. Drug Co., and druggists everywhere.

The Book Club was entertained Feb. 4 by Mrs. H. C. Grote at her home, 6169 Pershing avenue. The first paper was a sketch of James Russell Lowell by Mrs. Lashly, followed by readings from Lowell by Mrs. Ittner and Mrs. Krummenacher; the second sketch of Owen Meredith by Mrs. Holden, and the program ended with a reading from Meredith by Mrs. Hendrick.

The Delver's Club met Feb. 4 at the home of Miss Mary Reed, 4929 Lindell boulevard. Extracts from a letter from one of the former members, Mrs. G. L. Cold of New York City, who is spending the winter in Nice, France, were read. The "Frescoes of the Catacombs" was given by Mrs. G. P. Dorris. A history of the Italian Fascisti and their leader was prepared and read by Mrs. B. P. Fullerton. Instead of the usual parliamentary drill, Mrs. Zimmer spent the time in explaining the proposed Missouri constitutional amendments. Meeting adjourned to meet March 4 with Mrs. W. D. Dobson, 5000 Raymond avenue.

The Eugene Field Fathers' and Mothers' Club held its initial meeting at 8 o'clock Friday night in the school building, Taylor and Olive street. A permanent organization was formed and the following officers elected: Paul Blackwelder, president; Mrs. F. W. Russe, first vice-president; Mrs. Joseph Erlanger, second vice-president; Mrs. Martin Trepp, secretary; Oscar Leonard, treasurer, and Mrs. Milton Landau, Mrs. Margaret A. Marquis and Harry C. Barker, members of the Executive Committee. The club will meet the second Monday of each month at 8 o'clock in the evening, in the kindergarten of the school.

The Cornelia Greene Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution met Feb. 6 at the Gatesworth Hotel. The hostesses, Mrs. Frank de Garmo and Mrs. Eugene Taylor had charge of the program. An address was delivered by Mr. Coloman Kaldor, president of the Foreign Language Newspaper Association. George Smajda played several selections on a Hungarian instrument. Miss Margaret Gross, with her brother, Bernard Gross, gave a group of folk dances in native costume. An exhibit of needlework and pottery made by Hungarian artists added atmosphere.

On the occasion of the fifteenth anniversary of its organization, St. Margaret's Conference, Society of St. Vincent de Paul, will hold a reunion meeting Monday, Feb. 11, in the parish hall, Thirty-ninth street and Flad avenue. The officers of this branch are: Rev. T. V. O'Reilly, spiritual director; E. J. Madigan, president; L. J. Kern, vice president; Thomas Quirk, second vice president; F. H. Finke, secretary; P. E. Betz, treasurer.

The Press and Publicity Committee of the M. F. W. C. will meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in the auditorium of Scruggs-Vandervoort & Barney Co. The speakers are to be Misses Virginia Nathan and Aithra Holland. Mrs. Fred Armstrong is chairman of the committee.

The Kirkwood Study Hour Club met Feb. 5 with Mrs. W. J. Van Nice, Mrs. George Baumhoff presiding. Mrs. O. E. Turner, leader of the program, had for her subject, "Dramatic Art." Mrs. L. W. Coste, who had been a spectator at the last performance of the Passion Play at Oberammergau, gave her interpretation of the play and its participants, and the people of the village. The club will meet Feb. 19 at the home of Mrs. T. H. Heath, in Webster Groves.

Announcement is made of the patronesses who will serve at the entertainment which the Catholic Woman's League will give at the Cathedral Auditorium, Lindell boulevard and Newstead avenue, Feb. 20 at 8 p. m. for the benefit of the organization's social service department. The list includes Mmes. W. B. Kinealy, Theodore Benoist, Marquard Forster, Nettie Duncan Jacobs, Charles Duncker, Albert Ahern, George McNulty, J. C. Muckerman, E. J. Scott, Leslie Blackmore, Leo Moser, Josephine Erker, J. J. O'Donnell, Thomas Rohan and Misses Grace Bell, Clara Myerson and Mabel Hogan.

The Delphi Delphian Chapter at the regular meeting last Monday had the pleasure of a visit from Mrs. John S. Payne, president Eighth District Federation of Women's Clubs, who gave a talk on the purposes and activities of the federation. The members are enthusiastic and by unanimous vote decided to become members of the federation. The chapter also voted to help form a joint council of all the Delphian chapters in the city.

"Great Men of Greece" was the subject for discussion, led by Mrs. Edna I. Singleton, participated in as follows: Nicias, Mrs. Adele B. Brown; Aristotle, Mrs. A. Schueding; Aristides and Thucydides, Mrs. Harry L. Salisbury; Euripides, Mrs. M. K. Gillespie; Philip II, Mrs. L. Melshelmer; Miticles, Mrs. P. C. Floyd; Socrates, Mrs. Lydia Kanstelner; Homer and Isocrates, Mrs. F. L. Weinert; Cimon, Mrs. Edna L. Singleton.

The next meeting will be Monday, Feb. 18, when "Early Rome" will be the subject.

The Ideal Home

A Little Sermon on Home Ownership by One of America's Best Known Ministers

The first essential of an ideal home is love. The second is a place. These combined make home. Where love reigns, all other elements conform.

So the little god may start a kingdom with two subjects and much hope. In the early stages of the little kingdom the requirements of youth are few, but as the years pass and one phase of life after another is exhausted on its surface, the couple begin to look ahead for an element of permanency.

The first element of permanency is home ownership. If love is to mold and shape and fashion the little kingdom, the citizens must have a clear title to the ground under their feet and the roof over their heads.

The size of the house does not matter. It should be beyond the din and roar of Babylon. It should be annexed to a garden and built next to a tree. The style, the architecture, is not a matter of expense. It is a matter of taste. Good taste is much harder to find than money. The furniture should not be permitted to clutter up the house. A few pieces and these pieces choice. Better to buy one good chair a year than to live with six cheap ones, each one of which is a nightmare that operates in the daytime.

A few choice pictures. If paintings are beyond your reach, then a good etching. It will be expensive, but if it is really good it makes more money hanging on the wall than the cost of it would be as an investment.

Good taste and a little money can perform wonders in interior decorations. Builders' burlap at a few cents a yard, dyed, makes fine draperies for windows in a small house.

The ideal home has a small library of choice books—a dozen books, the right books, are enough.

It is very convenient to live near a great public library. It is a much greater thing for the mind and the soul to live near a wood, or a stretch of rolling country, or a garden. It is interesting to read of unreal people in unreal books. It is much more interesting to find romance and poetry in the common life around us.

The ideal home has a plan. It may be a simple plan, but it must work. Co-operation, division of labor, appreciation of one another's part in the game, the development of the mind, the culture of the soul, these are the essential elements, the foundation stones upon which the ideal home must be built.

And the race for a home is an open race. The road is broad, the rules are plain. It is to the interest of all that in this race there should be no losers. The losers are those who lack the courage to start, or having started, fall out and chase butterflies.

It is gratifying to know that the race for a home is an open race in which you can start today. Make 1924 a notable year—the year in which you acquire title to your home. Read the "Real Estate" columns of the Post-Dispatch. They contain descriptions of ideal homes and homesites in every desirable residence district of St. Louis and suburbs.

Terms of sale often are such that what you pay for rent can be made to apply to your home. You owe it to yourself—to your family—to act now. Begin by enlisting the advice of the reliable firms whose good properties are listed today in the "Real Estate" columns.

ANNOUNCEMENTS OF ENGAGEMENTS AND WEDDINGS

The marriage of Miss Adele Louise Heineman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Heineman of 41 Arundel place to Donald Scott Sharpe, son of Maj. Norvelle Wallace Sharpe of St. Louis, and Mrs. David Haines Ball of New York and Mount Vernon, took place yesterday at 5 p. m. at the First Congregational Church, the Rev. Dr. Worford Colquit Timmons officiating. Southern smilax and white narcissus decorated the church and made a background for the bridal party.

Mrs. Alvin V. Bartelsmeyer, the bride's only attendant, wore a gown of gray crepe chiffon. It was fashioned on draped lines with the new cape effect. A cloche hat of the same material had for its only ornament a long sash of the chiffon that fell to the floor. She carried Columbia roses and wore the bride's gift, a string of pearls.

The bride's gown was an imported model of flesh colored chepe chiffon. Over the rather short full skirt of chiffon, fell another skirt of deep cream lace. The same lace was used for the full cape-like sleeves. A boat-shaped neck held tiny trains of chiffon folds. The bride's hat was also of the cloche shape and from it forming a long train fell pale pink maline. She carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley.

Wilkins Barrett served Mr. Sharpe as best man and Alvin V. Bartelsmeyer and William J. Tynan ushered. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

After their return from a honeymoon trip, Mr. and Mrs. Sharpe will reside at 41 Arundel place.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rederer of 5764 Westminster place, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Etta Rederer, and Clinton Stout of Jacksonville, Ill. The ceremony was performed Feb. 3 at the home of the bride's parents, by Rabbi Samuel Thurman, in the presence of the immediate families. They are spending their honeymoon with Mr. Stout's parents of Jacksonville, Fla., and will make their home in Moberly, Mo.

The engagement of Miss Ruth Nicolson, daughter of Mrs. Arthur F. Hewitt of 5142 Kensington avenue, and J. Raymond Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Peterson of Arlington, Tex., was announced at a bridge luncheon given by the prospective bride's mother, the afternoon of Feb. 2. Covers were laid for 24 guests. The favors, table decorations and place cards were in shades of pink. The announcement was made by character dolls, one for each guest, which held in their hands small pink hearts bearing the names. Mr. Peterson is an alumnus of Rice Institute. The wedding will take place in the early fall.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Rodecker announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Bernice Rodecker, to Gilbert Michel, son of Max Michel of 5540 Pershing avenue, which will take place Feb. 12 at Long Beach, Cal.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Williams of 4633 Cottage avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Eloise Williams, to Ralph W. Shepherd, son of Mrs. E. Shepherd of 4647 Cottage avenue, which took place at St. Charles, Mo., Dec. 22. They are now living at 4633 Cottage avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Meyers have announced the engagement of their daughter, Bessie Leone, to G. Robert Hogg Jr., son of George R. Hogg. The date has not been set for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Schneeweir of 3543 Sidney street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Claire, to H. C. Minger. The couple are spending their honeymoon in New Orleans.

The G. G. G. Club gave a surprise party for 40 guests, Feb. 6, to announce the engagement of Miss Pearl Rubenstein to Oliver D. Rosinsky, of Cape Girardeau. The party was given at the home of Mrs. Harry Friedman, sponsor of the club. Mrs. Friedman also entertained the prospective bride and the G. G. G. Club with a dinner Feb. 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Siegel of 4853A Page boulevard, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rea, to Edwin Wallace.

MISS GORDON TO SPEAK HERE

W. C. T. U. Head Will Be Guest at Banquet Tuesday.

Miss Anna A. Gordon, world and national president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, will speak before the St. Louis branch of the organization at a banquet to be given at the City Club at 7 p. m. Tuesday. Miss Gordon is visiting 50 large cities on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the W. C. T. U.

A day meeting will be held at the Union Methodist Episcopal Church, 3610 Delmar boulevard. It will open at 10 a. m. and close at 4 p. m.

At the evening meeting the speakers will include Gus O. Nations, Charles M. Hay, Dr. A. H. Post, State Superintendent of the Missouri Antisaloon League, and Assistant Attorney-General Allen May.

KILLS HUSBAND WHOSE LOVE FOR HER HAD WANED

Mrs. Leo Spitale Shoots Helpmeet Five Times After He Commanded Her to Get Divorce.

TAUNTED HER ABOUT HIS OTHER WOMEN

Tells Police He Was Armed With Pistol; Were Married 10 Years Ago When He "Kidnaped" Her.

Taunts about "Hazel" and other women with whom he claimed friendship, led to the fatal shooting of Leo Spitale, 30 years old, by his wife, Rosie, 24, in their residence at 5135 Shaw avenue, early yesterday.

After the shooting Mrs. Spitale telephoned for police and to them she charged that her husband had threatened to kill her if she did not obtain a divorce so he might be free to associate with his women friends. Both had revolvers, but she fired first and pursued him through the rooms of their bungalow, wounding him five times and missing once.

The Spitales were married 10 years ago after he, in the Italian fashion, had abducted her one morning, while she was en route to work, and conveyed her in a hack to a friend's house. The girl's father later bestowed his blessing and the marriage followed.

In recent years Spitale had been quarrelsome and boastful of his women associates, his wife related. He came home at 3 a. m. yesterday and, after sleeping three hours, went into the kitchen and called for her. She carried a revolver, as she had noticed he also held one. Then, according to her story, Spitale referred to a suit for separate maintenance which she filed last month and demanded she seek a divorce instead.

"I'll kill you if you don't," she says he threatened. Believing he might kill her, she fired at him and when he ran, followed.

After Spitale had been shot in the right wrist, left shoulder and left side, he leaned against a bedpost and groaned. "I ain't got enough yet." Taking him at his word, Mrs. Spitale says she shot him in the back and the head as he toppled to the floor.

There were no witnesses as Mrs. Spitale, anticipating trouble, had sent their children, Mary, 8, and Charles, 6, out of the house.

Spitale conducted a bar at Jefferson avenue and Wash street. In 1921 he was arrested by prohibition agents who found him bending over a large still in a barn in St. Louis County. The bungalow residence on Shaw avenue is estimated to have cost $8000.

Pending the inquest Mrs. Spitale was released on $5000 bond.

MATTISON ACQUITTED THROUGH JURY'S BELIEF IN ALIBI

Youth Charged With Complicity in Automobile Robbery Held to Have Been at Home at Time.

A jury in Circuit Judge McElhinney's court at Clayton, Friday night, acquitted Clarence Mattison, 22, of 1321 Biddle street, of a charge of burglary and larceny, resulting from the theft of an automobile and 20 tires from the Maplewood Motor Sales Co. on July 29, 1922.

The foreman of the jury, Will Abram, of Overland Park, told reporters the acquittal was prompted by belief in Mattison's alibi that he was home when the thefts were committed.

Mattison and Clare Rush were arrested the day after the thefts by St. Louis police, who found the two sitting in the stolen car at Fourteenth and Chestnut streets. Rush pleaded guilty to the charges that followed and is serving a 10-year sentence. At Mattison's trial, which began last Wednesday, Mattison and his sister testified he was reading in his home on July 29, 1922, and that Rush called and invited Mattison to take a ride, but he refused, thinking Rush's car had been stolen. The next day, however, he did go riding with Rush and was arrested.

BRIDEGROOM SUED FOR RING

Woman Takes Action Against Donald S. Sharpe.

Suit to recover a $700 diamond ring, or its money value, and $1000 as damages for unlawfully keeping it, was filed yesterday against Donald S. Sharpe, a salesman, who was married yesterday afternoon, by Mrs. Elizabeth McCollom of 2 North Euclid avenue.

Mrs. McCollom said that Sharpe offered on Nov. 15, 1921, to have the diamond, which was 1⅛-carat, set in platinum. She gave him the ring, she said, but on the following Thanksgiving day, after he had made a trip to Chicago, he told her the ring had been taken from him in a holdup. Sharpe's address is given as 41 Arundel place, the home of his bride.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW IS SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL

Expected That St. Louis Exhibition Opening Saturday Will Be Most Beautiful of All Held Here.

The seventeenth annual St. Louis Automobile Show, which will open at the Columbia Can Co. building next Saturday at noon, will be the most beautiful in point of decorative and lighting effects that has ever been held in this city.

The great commercial building, three stories high, is located one-half block east of Union boulevard on Natural Bridge avenue. It is nearly 360 feet in length, as long as a city block, and the interior arrangement lends itself to an automobile show more effectively than any other building which has ever been used by the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association for its great annual motor event.

The seventeenth annual automobile show in St. Louis will also be unique in that it will include more sections of the automotive industry than any other show ever held in the United States. Shown by many exhibitors there will be displays of all the automobiles which are represented in St. Louis, a number of exhibits of heavy trucks, 10 showings of light delivery cars of various makes, the displays of about 120 manufacturers of or dealers in accessories, supplies and equipment for motor cars and of automobile shop equipment and machinery, also a considerable line of trailers. A very unusual feature of the show will be the exhibition of tractors.

The easy accessibility of the Automobile Show building at 5201 to 5221 Natural Bridge avenue makes it very convenient. The Union car line, connecting with all of the east and west lines, will land passengers one-half block from the show building. The Natural Bridge line ends one block from the building, at King's highway and Natural Bridge avenue.

There is ample parking space for at least 5000 motor cars. Col. P. H. Brockman, president of the Board of Police Commissioners, who is one of the members of the Show Committee, has promised ample police protection.

The People's Bus Co., which operates the bus lines in St. Louis, is considering installing a night line bus to the show building, which will come north on King's highway to Natural Bridge avenue and west to the building.

Every motor car represented in St. Louis will be exhibited at the show. This includes the new Chrysler, the Rollin, the Flint, the Locomobile and The Rolls-Royce.

The show will open promptly at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Feb. 16, and will continue each day thereafter from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. It has been decided that the show will be kept open all day Sunday, Feb. 17, to accommodate a large number of people who cannot visit the show at any other time.

It is believed that there will be a larger attendance of automobile and accessory dealers from the states surrounding St. Louis than ever before at a St. Louis Automobile Show.

Invitations were mailed Friday to 10,500 in six states and reports which have been made by salesmen traveling in the territory for St. Louis houses indicate that 60 per cent to 70 per cent of all the dealers are planning to come to the show.

Cotter Pin Tool.

A handy cotter pin tool can be made from a piece of three-eighths inch round cold rolled steel. This should be about nine inches long and tapered at the end. The taper end is bent in the form of a button-hook for pulling the cotter pins and the other end is upset to form a light hammer for driving them into position when this is necessary.—Automobile Digest.

MICHELIN COMFORT TIRE IS POPULAR

"One of the most important service features of the new Michelin comfort cord tire," says Louis B. Wyner, president of the Universal Tire Co., 2840 Locust boulevard, "is best demonstrated on a wet, slippery pavement."

"Comfort tires as soon as the brakes are applied settle to the road because of their larger traction surface and cling to it tenaciously. Skidding is thus practically eliminated and braking is much quicker and more certain."

"The desirability of these tires as promoters of riding comfort is apparent. They equalize irregularities in the road and make uniform driving possible."

"At the recent New York and Chicago automobile shows Comfort cords were heralded as a big achievement. They require one-half the air pressure that is necessary in the ordinary oversize cords."

To fully explain their many desirable features, Wyner has equipped his Studebaker light six with them. It will be at his store and people who want actual experience will be given a demonstration.

PHILADELPHIA OPENS OVERLAND FACTORY

To take care of what is expected to be the greatest demand for its product in its history along the entire Atlantic seaboard, Willys-Overland announces the acquisition of a new plant in Philadelphia in which 100 Overland cars a day are to be built within another four or six weeks' time.

This announcement makes Philadelphia a greater automobile center than ever before, inasmuch as it is anticipated that the output of the new factory will take care of the bulk of the demand within the 15 states and the District of Columbia contiguous to the Atlantic coast from the New England states to the Carolinas.

The actual floor space to be used will be 161,000 square feet, which does not include the platforms which sorround all the buildings, nor railroad trackage, etc.

BALLOON CORDS NOW PRACTICAL ON ALL CARS

What is a practical program for making the advantages of balloon Cords at once available to the great bulk of car owners, is seen in the announcement of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co. that it is manufacturing two types of balloon tires.

One type, the full extent of ballooning, is designed for use on cars that have been adapted to the type either at the factory or by reducing the wheels to 20 or 21 inches.

The other is for use on cars as they stand to supplant standard cord tires. There is no need to change the wheels, or make any other readjustments of a car.

The significance of the two types is that anyone who seeks the superior comfort and other features of balloon cords may obtain them without what, in many cases, is a prohibitive cost.

This will, undoubtedly be interesting news to the ten-million-dollar car owners who are now asking themselves collectively and individually, "Where does the balloon cord tire figure in my car? Is it a special equipment for a few, or can I use it, and what does it offer over standard cords?"

The two types of Goodrich balloon cord tires are a practical answer to these questions.

MOON TAKES OVER R. N. COLLINS PLANT

Moon Motor Car Co. has leased for a term of years the plant formerly occupied by R. N. Collins Vehicle and Woodworking Co. at Vandeventer and Chouteau avenues.

This latest addition to the Moon plant contains 87,000 square feet of floor space, is well located, in a growing industrial community, and is convenient to both the Missouri Pacific and Frisco Railroads. The building will be used exclusively by Moon for painting and trimming bodies of Moon cars.

VICTOR MOTORS HAVE SHOW 'SLOGAN CONTEST'

A feature at the auto show next week will be a "slogan contest," conducted by Victor Motors, Inc., who are displaying their entire line of six models at the show.

The slogal contest is open to everyone except employes of Victor Motors, Inc., and their families. Cash prizes are being given by the Victor company for the best slogans.

The slogans entered must fit the entire line instead of just one particular model truck. The contest will close on the last night of the show.

Three well-known St. Louisans, whose names will be announced at the show, will serve as judges.

NEW SERVICE FOR REO FLEET OWNERS

The Kardell Motor Car Co., Reo distributors, have inaugurtaed a new service for Reo "Speed Wagon" fleet owners. This service includes a regular monthly visit of a service man from the Kardell organization who will inspect each Reo "Speed Wagon" in use.

A special form has been prepared by the Kardell company to be used in the service work. The service will be under the personal direction of H. W. Kardell, president of the Kardell company, who has assumed direct charge of all trucks sales and service.

WILSON IS CHOSEN A DIRECTOR OF NASH

James T. Wilson has been elected a member of the board of directors of the Nash Motors Co. Announcement of this was made by C. W. Nash, president of Nash Motors, following the annual meeting of the stockholders held at Baltimore.

Wilson is known throughout the automobile industry as an outstanding production man. He has been identified with C. W. Nash in the automobile and vehicle business for the past 18 years; since the organization of Nash Motors in 19[illegible] has been an important factor in its growth. He was chosen a vice president of the company three years ago, and under the direction of Nash has had charge of production both at the Nash Six and Nash Four plants for some time. Last October Wilson was placed in direct charge of operations at the Nash Four plant and since then has divided his time equally between the Kenosha and Milwaukee factories.

The New ESSEX

Built by Hudson

A SIX

Gives "Ideal Transportation"

Take a 30 minute ride to learn the facts. It will convince you that "ideal transportation" in terms of economy, performance and lasting reliability, is fully realized in this low priced car.

The new Essex is built by Hudson and shares its famous design advantages. That not only means a motor design that has long held a foremost place among "Sixes," but the same type of clutch, transmission and rear axle which Hudson has proved in years of service.

And the first-cost economy is carried out in every way that applies to transportation—low fuel and oil consumption; great tire mileage; and astonishingly low prices on replacement parts.

The materials used and the way it is built insure lasting enjoyment of those unusual qualities which delight you on your first ride.

Ford SEDAN $685 F.O.B. DETROIT

Next Spring—

With over 200,000 orders for Ford Cars and Trucks already placed for delivery during the next few months, we are facing a record-breaking spring demand.

Each successive month this winter has witnessed a growth in sales far surpassing that of any previous winter season. This increase will be even greater during the spring months, always the heaviest buying period.

These facts suggest that you place your order early to avoid disappointment in delivery at the time desired.

Ford Motor Company
Detroit, Michigan

It is not necessary to pay cash for your car in order to have your name placed on the preferred delivery list. You can make a small payment down, or you can buy, if you wish, under the convenient terms of the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.

PAIGE - DETROIT SHIPS TRAINLOADS OF CARS

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 9.—Trainloads of automobiles were the answer of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. to demands of its dealers for Paiges and Jewetts for January sales, according to Mr. Harry M. Jewett, president.

One distributor, the Paige-Detroit Co. of New England, took three solid trainloads during the month. Other trains were dispatched from the Paige and Jewett plants to the Newell Motor Car Co., the St. Louis distributor, Chicago, Minneapolis, Des Moines and Philadelphia.

Towing Bar.

A two-by-four timber of hardwood with holes drilled at each end for attaching the towrope forms an excellent towing-bar and has an advantage over the towing-rope in that it keeps both cars properly spaced and in the case of sudden stops as are often made in congested traffic, avoids the danger of a rear-end collision.—Automobile Digest.

FIELDS IS MAXWELL-CHRYSLER MANAGER

Appointment of J. E. Fields as general sales manager of the Maxwell Motor Corporation, Chrysler Corporation and Chalmers Motor Car Co. was recently announced by W. P. Chrysler, chairman of the board of directors of those companies. Fields, who has been Chalmers sales manager for the past 14 months, succeeds Arthur E. Barker, who died Jan. 3, following an operation for acute appendicitis.

For more than 15 years Fields has been intimately associated with the problems of motor car distribution—as dealer as territorial manager, as service director and as sales manager. He is said to know more automobile dealers and distributors than any other man in the industry.

After a number of years as star salesman for the National Cash Register Co. Fields left the that organization to enter the automobile field in 1908, when Hugh Chalmers secured an interest in the old Thomas-Detroit company. With the production of the Chalmers "30" Fields became distributor for the Chalmers line in Fargo, N. D. Fields' success as a distributor induced the Chalmers company to add him to the factory force—first as a territorial sales manager and later as assistant sales manager.

Later he became director of service for the Hupp Motor Car Corporation, then sales manager for Hupmobile.

Two years later he was sales manager of the Liberty Motor Car Co. When he left in 1922 he was assistant general manager. Since that time, as sales manager of the Chalmers company, he has gained a deep knowledge of the allied organizations of which he now takes the sales direction.

OAKLAND TRAVELS TO BUFFALO BILL'S GRAVE

Traveling over a rocky foot trail traversed generations ago by Indians and the early pioneers, a true-blue Oakland sedan recently visited the grave of Buffalo Bill—William F. Cody—at the summit of Lookout Mountain, Colo., according to word just received by E. A. Hatfield, president of the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., Oakland distributors.

The summit of Lookout Mountain is 7500 feet elevation and is 2500 above the valley, which stretches for miles from the base of the peak. It was a favorite scouting post for Buffalo Bill during the years he ranged the plains, and at his death the peak on which he had so often stood was chosen for his grave. The spot is marked with a cairn enclosed by an iron fence.

The only approach to the peak is a narrow footpath which presents difficulties for even the sure-footed Western horses. Rocks and gulleys line both sides of this narrow path. At times it appeared impossible for an automobile to advance further, but each emergency was met by the power of the new Oakland engine, reports M. L. Smith of the Sharman Auto Co., Denver, who made the trip. The return from the grave was even more hazardous, but was made without accident through the deceleration ability of the Oakland four-wheel brakes.

FRANKLIN PRODUCTION FIFTY-SIX CARS DAILY

The Franklin Automobile Co. of Syracuse, N. Y., has reached a daily production of 56 cars, full plant capacity. This schedule will, according to A. E. Spielberg, president of the Franklin Motor Car Co. of St. Louis, be maintained for several months to come. At the present production rate, a finished Franklin car is turned out every nine minutes of the working day.

Dealers are placing orders early this year, according to Salesmanager S. E. Ackerman, who states that orders are being received at the rate of 69 a day. A strong demand for closed cars continues.

CHANDLER FINDS MANY "HAIRPINS" IN SUMATRA

Hairpin curves are numerous on mountain climbs of this country, but likely there is nothing in America to compare with those encountered by motorists in Sumatra.

"In a distance of 25 kilometers (15½ miles) we encountered over 1600 curves, the majority of which were of the hairpin variety," says a letter to the Chandler factory from a resident of Java, describing the tour across the island of Sumatra with a Chandler car, powered by the Pike's Peak motor.

The car carried three passengers, and all the mountainous climbs on the 1250-mile trip were made on high.

WILLIAMS RESIGNS FROM GARFORD CO.

E. A. Williams Jr. has tendered his resignation as president of the Garford Motor Truck Co. of Lima, O., to take effect immediately. In 1913 Mr. Williams went to Lima with the old Gramm Motor Truck Co. and later the Garford Truck Co. was purchased and the two concerns combined.

Under his leadership the Garford Truck Co. grew to be one of the largest motor truck manufacturing concerns in the country. The past year has been a highly successful one.

Check Tire Pressure on New Autos

Check air pressure in the tires on a new car is the suggestion of a Firestone service department expert. While shipped from the factory with the correct inflation tire, air may be lost on the dealer's floor or in warehouse and sometimes pressure is not checked on new cars before delivery.

212 MODELS SHOWN IN 1924 HANDBOOK

Two hundred and twelve models of motor cars are illustrated in the 1924 Hand Book of Automobiles which has just been issued by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, 366 Madison avenue, New York. The total number of car models and truck chassis listed is 738.

Would Label Nation's Rivers.

"What river is that?" is a question which comes to the mind of the motor tourist frequently on his journeys, but rarely does he find an answer without making a special stop to inquire. It is the aim of the League of American Pen Women to make the nation's rivers better known to the public. Mrs. Grace Goldert, president of this association, is requesting the various State highway commissions to place markers of roadsides which cross famous streams, informing the public as to the name of the body of water at hand.

Plain facts on Balloon Cords

BALLOON Cords need a clear, frank presentation to the public.

The apparent novelty and promise of these tires have caught the imagination of close followers of the motor car.

Many are doubtless wondering how they will affect their cars and are confused regarding the two distinct types of balloon cords that are being advertised.

Among tire makers and car makers the position of the balloon cord is well understood.

The three principles underlying it—oversize, light flexible body, and low pressure inflation—have long been known to tire manufacturers, and employed by them.

Oversizing is an old story in standard size tires.

The essential difference between standard and balloon cords is lower air pressure, and lighter body construction.

Where the standard cord carries from 60 to 65 pounds air pressure, sometimes higher, the balloon cord is inflated at from 20 to 40 pounds. In fact, they must always carry these low pressures to function with safety.

Where the number of plies in a large size standard cord is six, or eight, the balloon cord has but four.

The principle of the balloon cord tire is this:

Generally speaking, that portion of the tread which rests on the road (the contact area) expressed in square inches, will if multiplied by the pounds of air pressure inside the tire, give approximately the weight of the load the tire is carrying.

Following out this principle, if a 1000 pound load is to be carried on a regular standard cord, and only 20 square inches of contact with the ground is obtainable on account of the limit of the "give" (vertical deflection) of the tire, an air pressure of 50 pounds per square inch is needed to carry the load.

On the other hand, if the area of road contact can be increased without exceeding the proper degree of vertical deflection, much less air pressure is required inside the tire.

For instance, if the area of road contact is increased from 20 to 40 square inches, an air pressure of 25 pounds to the square inch will carry the 1000 pound load.

On account of greater sectional diameter, and more "give" in the tire, the balloon cord provides a greater area of road contact than the standard cord, hence it can carry the same load with less air pressure to the square inch inside the tire.

Thus a comparison of the balloon cord and standard cord resolves itself to a question of low-air pressure, or high-air pressure.

Each has well known virtues. Tire engineers have always realized the advantage of lower air pressure.

And much may be said for the low-air pressure, or balloon cord.

On account of its broad contact with the road, its flexibility, and low air pressure, it can conform readily to irregularities in the road — absorb bumps so to speak.

To ride smoothly over ruts, holes, projections, and bad stretches of road at an even speed without jolting and jarring is a pleasing picture to contemplate, and balloon cords make this possible to a definite degree.

The life of a car is greatly prolonged because of the reduced shocks and jars to the chassis.

The large area of road contact also gives balloon cords anti-skid, traction, and breaking power—features which are truly outstanding.

Where a luxurious comfort and special service are wanted, balloon cords are a sensible and compensating addition to a motor car.

Goodrich manufactures balloon cords in two types—those requiring wheel and rim changes, and those that are interchangeable with the present regular equipment.

Motorists who have cars equipped with standard tires, and who want the added advantages of low pressure tires, can purchase Goodrich balloon cords, and have no added expense except the new tires themselves.

The function of Goodrich has always been to supply tires to meet the needs of transportation, the newest needs as well as the old.

WILSON MOTOR NOW DISTRIBUTES CASE

Will Exhibit Entire Line at Columbia Can Building During Automobile Show.

The Wilson Motor Car Co. announces that it is now distributing the Case line of motor cars in the St. Louis territory. The entire line will be shown for the first time by Wilson at the Columbia Can Building during the Automobile Show.

The Case car is made by the J. I. Case T. M. Co., who have been in the manufacturing business in Racine, Wis., since 1842, building farm implements, and during the past 13 years, automobiles.

In discussing the reasons for taking on the Case agency in addition to those for Dort and Haynes, H. C. Merry, secretary of the Wilson Motor Car Co., said: "The wonderful 82-year record of successful manufacturing of the J. I. Case T. M. Co. is, in the first place, the reason for our adding this line to the others we have. Case products have always been dependable and the Case car certainly is. With the great facilities of the Case concern, the factory has certainly been able to command the services of engineers who could design an automobile worthy of bearing the Case name. And they have. I am confident we will find St. Louisans receptive to the Case."

There are many Case owners at present in St. Louis. Case cars in all models will arrive at the new agency during the coming week.

SELL FIFTY-SEVEN PACKARD "8'S" HERE

Though the Packard "eight" was introduced to the motor world only last summer and though for some time after its introduction deliveries were scarce, the Berry Motor Car Co. announces through George M. Berry, president, that 57 Packard "eights" had been sold here up to Feb. 1.

"During January," Berry states, "as many 'eights' were sold as had been alloted St. Louis for each of the two busiest months of the year—April and May. On some models," said Berry Saturday, "we can only accept orders subject to three months' delivery."

According to Berry a peculiar peculiar fact in connection with Packard "eight" sales is that the demand for open cars has shown a big increase. "In fact," Berry says, "the proportion of open cars ordered to closed cars has been greater than in many years. This, I believe," continued Berry, "is due to the long, graceful lines of the open models, for they are certainly good to look at."

4-YEAR-OLD OPERATES CHANDLER'S GEARSET

"I'll put her in second," says little Mildred Scott, age 4, as she swings over the lever of the Traffict Transmission in the 1924 Chandler driven by her father, a Philadelphian, residing at 1717 North Eighteenth street.

"It's easy," she says. "Watch!" And then with her tiny hand cupped over the ball top of the gear lever, she pute the car in first, second, high or reverse, with little more effort than she uses in handling her toys.

Frequent rides with her father have made the little Philadelphian an expert in speed changing. She rides on her father's right knee, and as he depresses the clutch pedal he calls for the desired speed, and Mildred makes the change. Silently the lever slips into place, at whatever speed Scott drives.

FRED J. BERKLEY NOW BERRY VICE PRESIDENT

At the annual meeting of the Berry Motor Car Co., Packard distributers, the only change in officers or directors came with the election of Fred J. Berkley to the vice presidency of the company. Berkley has been with the Packard organization here for the past eight years and is among the best-known salesmen in the city to buyers of fine cars.

The election of Berkley to his new office is, according to George M. Berry, president of the company, a recognition of Berkley's ability and his long and conscientious service with Packard.

Another announcement from the Berry organization of interest to Packard owners is that of the appointment of Paul Pelsue as service manager for the Berry Motor Car Co. Pelsue has been with Packard 10 years in St. Louis. Until his now appointment he was in charge of stock parts.

They Paid $200,000,000

for Studebaker cars last year

Find out why folks did it

LAST year 145,000 people paid over $200,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

The demand for these cars has almost trebled in three years. It has become the sensation of Motordom.

There is a new situation in the fine-car field. You should learn what it means to you.

Studebaker had to lead in this field. This concern has led in its lines for two generations. Any other place would be unfitting.

This is how we became the world's largest builders of quality cars.

$90,000,000 assets

Studebaker has $90,000,000 of assets. Of this $50,000,000 is invested in modern plants and equipment.

We have spent $32,000,000 for new plants and equipment during the last five years. So they are modern and efficient. They contain 12,500 up-to-date machines.

We have $8,000,000 in drop forge plants. $10,000,000 more in body plants. So we build complete cars without paying other makers profits.

We spend $500,000 yearly on an engineering staff. There are 125 skilled men employed in our department of Research and Experiment. They make 500,000 tests per year.

We employ 1,200 inspectors. Each Studebaker car must pass 30,000 inspections during manufacture before it leaves the factory.

Those enormous facilities enabled us to produce the utmost in a car. And we had the will to do it.

No stinted costs

We never stint on costs. Every steel used is the best steel for its purpose, regardless of the price.

Then on some steels we pay makers a 15 per cent bonus to insure exactness in them.

Every Studebaker car is Timken-equipped. The Special-Six and the Big-Six have more Timken bearings than any car selling under $5,600 in America. The Light-Six more than any competitive car within $1,000 of its price.

* * *

We use genuine leather upholstery.

We use Chase Mohair for the closed car upholstery. Some good upholstery would cost $100 less.

To curb vibration we machine all surfaces of crank shafts, as was done in Liberty Airplane Motors. Very few cars do that.

How such prices?

How can we give such extra values—scores of them—yet sell at our low prices?

Because these values brought us buyers—145,000 last year. The major extra costs are divided by enormous output.

Let us show you the extras you get, because of these matchless facilities.

Studebakers hold the top place in the fine car field today.

In 1919, the public paid over $80,000,000 for 39,356 Studebaker cars.

In 1920, the public paid over $100,000,000 for 51,474 Studebaker cars, an increase of 31% over 1919.

In 1921, the public paid over $120,000,000 for 66,643 Studebaker cars, an increase of 29% over 1920.

In 1922, the public paid over $155,000,000 for 110,269 Studebaker cars, an increase of 66% over 1921.

In 1923, the public paid over $201,000,000 for 145,162 Studebaker cars, an increase of 32% over 1922.

In 1924, business has opened with Studebaker as never before.

Now! BALLOON TIRES
that fit present rims

Goodyear is making balloon tires in the smaller diameter 20- and 21-inch rim sizes, of course.

But so far as the average motorist today is concerned, Goodyear is doing something vastly more important.

It is building balloon tires that can be fitted to a majority of the cars now in use without the expense of special wheels and rims.

It thus offers the full advantages of balloon tires in buoyance, cushioning and comfort at the very minimum of cost.

To the immense army of motorists now interested in the balloon tire and its benefits this news is doubly welcome.

It means that behind the balloon tire principle is put the important indorsement of full Goodyear approval and authority.

It means that into balloon tire design and construction are built the invaluable lessons of the years of Goodyear tests and experience.

It means that a tested and proved low-pressure flexible-sidewall balloon tire of representative Goodyear quality is now available at moderate cost.

You will want to know more about this tire; the table herewith shows you the sizes that in most cases will satisfactorily replace ordinary tires on present wheels and rims.

For complete information, clip and mail the coupon at the top of this page, and an authoritative booklet on the subject will be sent you free.

The Right Size for Your Car

This table shows you what size Goodyear Balloon Tires can be fitted to your present wheels and rims. In the left hand column are ordinary tire sizes; in the right hand column the Goodyear Balloon Tire sizes by which your present tires may be replaced.

30 x 3½* inch	31 x 4.40 inch
31 x 4 "	32 x 4.95 "
32 x 4 "	33 x 4.95 "
32 x 4½ "	33 x 5.77 "
33 x 4½ "	34 x 5.77 "

*If present rims are clincher type, new straight-side rim tops (quite inexpensive) will be required. Full information regarding balloon tires in the smaller (20- and 21-inch) wheel and rim sizes is given in the complete booklet offered in the coupon above.

Today as in years past, on balloon tires as on all other types, the name Goodyear stands for supreme quality and dependability

Accept a Trial Package with our Compliments

Absolutely Free — a Package of Scolding Locks Hair Pins! All you have to do is to sign the coupon below and mail to us. We'll send you the gift package of this famous new idea in hairpins—"the pin that can't come out."

This is a GIFT; no cost, no obligation.

The Pin That "Stays Put" You simply can't lose a Scolding Locks Hairpin. The clever little "2-Way" crimp is the secret. Notice the zig-zag path on either side of the pin; this means that it can find its way IN your hair, but not OUT. Scolding Locks are economical, too. It takes fewer pins to do the work.

Nothing to Catch or Scratch The points are so carefully rounded that they will not dig into your scalp or tear hair or net. They are double enameled, smooth, pliable yet firm.

For the Bobbed Beauty For her whose bobbed curls need some restraint, Scolding Locks Invisibles are especially suitable. They get a firm hold, even on the short ends.

Popular in Beauty Parlors One reason for the popularity of Scolding Locks Hairpins with the Beauty Parlors is the fact that one "fixing" lasts all day. No other pin does such justice to the hair and its dressing. Even after a shampoo, they hold securely, with fewer pins and less work. In two colors, black and bronze.

$350.00 in Cash Prizes

For the best letter (of not more than 100 words) telling why Scolding Locks are justly called "The World's Best Hairpins," we will award prizes as follows:

4 Prizes of $25.00 each.
10 Prizes of $10.00 each.
20 Prizes of $ 5.00 each.
50 Prizes of $ 1.00 each.

The second half of the program will consist of a pantomime arrangement of the "Volga Boat Song;" "La Tabatiere," with the figures on a snuff-box coming to life; "The Night Idyl," with its chorus of enamoured cats; "Trepak," "A Night at Yanis," ditties by Russian workmen, and the uproaring "Chorus of the Brothers Zaitzeff."

Balieff, whose murderous onslaughts on the English language have been a diverting feature of the "Chauve-Souris," is to introduce each number. Ralph Barton's curtain of veteran first-nighters, one of the features of the "Chauve-Souris" run on the Century roof in New York, will be exhibited here. This production made its success through the value of the various numbers and the artistic skill of their presentation.

The current "Scandals" comes to St. Louis after a run of 290 performances at the Globe Theater, New York. The comedy scenes are by George White and William K. Wells; the lyrics by Bud de Sylva, B. "Chauve-Souris" and "Scandals of 1923" Are Theatrical Arrivals

Famous Russian Vaudeville Opens Tonight at Jefferson, and George White's Revue at American — "Widow by Proxy" at Empress.

THAT super-variety show, the "Chauve-Souris," with the droll Armenian, Nikita Balieff, serving as liaison officer between performers and audience, arrives at the Shubert-Jefferson tonight just two years and a week after the Russian importation was first presented in this country at the Forty-ninth Street Theater in New York. George White's "Scandals of 1923," the fifth production of this series, opens tonight at the American.

"A Widow by Proxy," by Catherine Chisholm Cushing, a comedy in which May Irwin used to play, is announced for the Woodward Players at the Empress. A Paul Whiteman jazz band, said to have played on the S. S. Leviathan, has featured place at the Orpheum.

"Chauve-Souris" is a French word meaning literally "Bald Mouse" or "The Bat." The show began as a sort of supper club in Moscow. The entertainers of the troupe fled to Paris after the Russian Revolution, and were brought to this country by that desperate and astute theatrical gambler, Morris Gest. It is reported that the "Chauve-Souris" not only recouped the fortune lost by Gest with previous spectacular enterprises, but made it possible for him to import the Moscow Art Theater and Reinhardt's "The Miracle."

"Wooden Soldiers" and "Katinka."

SOME of the most popular items in the "Chauve-Souris" repertory are announced for the engagement here. The first half of the bill will include "Zaria-Zarlanitza," a Russian legend; the popular porcelain pantomime, "The See-Saw;" the much beloved "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," "Songs of Sentiment;" Tchekoff's delightful travesty, "Sudden Death of a Horse; or, the Russian Soul;" a duet, "The Sleeping Beauty," to music by Tschaikowsky; "La Grande Opera Italiana," a burlesque; and the celebrated "Katinka."

The second half of the program will consist of a pantomime arrangement of the "Volga Boat Song;" "La Tabatiere," with the figure on a snuff-box coming to life; "The Night Idyl," with its chorus of enamoured cats; "Trepak," "A Night at Yards," ditties by Russian workmen, and the uproaring "Chorus of the Brothers Zatseff."

This production made its success through the value of the various numbers and the artistic skill of their presentation.

The current "Scandals" comes to St. Louis after a run of 200 performances at the Globe Theater, New York. The comedy scenes are by George White and William K. Wells; the lyrics by Bud de Sylva, E. Ray Goetz and Ballard Macdonald; and the score by George Gershwin. In the cast are Lester Allen, Winnie Lightner, Tom Patricola and numerous others, including a ballet of Tiller dancers.

"Whispering Wires," a popular melodrama, comes to the Shubert-Jefferson next Sunday night; and on the following evening the American will present a comedy, "The Changelings," with a cast including Henry Miller, Blanche Bates and Ruth Chatterton.

Announcements for the American Theater next month include the Ziegfeld "Follies," March 2; George M. Cohan's musical comedy, "Little Nellie Kelly;" Lenore Ulric in "Kiki;" and Ed. Wynn in "The Perfect Fool." Tentative April bookings at this theater include Earl Carroll's "Vanities," with Peggy Joyce and Joe Cook; Otis Skinner, in "Sancho Panza;" and "Merton of the Movies." Al Jolson will return to the Shubert-Jefferson on March 9 in "Bombo." "The Lady in Ermine," with Wilda Bennett and Walter Woolf, is promised for an undated week at the Jefferson.

In "A Widow by Proxy," a bankrupt vocal teacher undertakes to impersonate her friend in seizing a legacy left to the latter by a husband, supposed to be defunct. the masquerader makes her way into an exclusive circle, and is driving all before her when the "dead" husband appears. These complications give rise to diverting situations. Hazel Whitmore, at the Empress, plays the adventurous mistress of vocal production, and Sylvia Farnese is the real widow. Alexis Luce enacts a gallant captain who is captivated by the proxy relict.

The Leviathan Band, at the Orpheum, will give a program of dance music, solos, saxophone quintets and tenor songs. Other numbers on the bill are as follows: "The World of Make-Believe," an act combining bits of musical comedy, circus, drama, opera and burlesque; Giuran and Marguerite, dancers; Joseph H. Watson, character comedian; Moss and Frye, darky funsters; Jack Joyce, dancer and singer; Lucas and Inez, aerialists; and the M. E. G. Lime Trio, eccentric gymnasts.

Kronos, a strong man who wields steel chains and bars, is headliner at the Rialto. Other acts are those of Harry Jolson, blackface comedian and brother of Al; Frank Dixon, in "Lonesome Manor;" and McSovereign, virtuoso of the game of diabolo.

The McElroy sisters, in a song and dance revue, are featured at the Columbia. Other entertainers on the bill are Pipifax, mute sailor clown; O'Halligan and Levi, Jean Boydell and Ramsey's ca-

Fanatic as Hero in "Hell-Bent for Heaven"

By Heywood Broun,
Dramatic Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.

THE best thing the theater of these parts has done for itself in a long time was to rescue "Hell Bent for Heaven," by Hatcher Hughes, from the irritations and inconveniences of matinee performances and provide it with a playhouse all to itself. This occurred Monday night at the Frazee. Very few plays have ever had the robustness to survive the special matinee. "Beyond the Horizon" did it, and a few others—just enough to keep the matinee habit from dying its rightful death. In the main even pretty good shows died off in the afternoons.

"Hell-Bent fer Heaven" certainly should have had its own theater, from the beginning, unless we were willing to have a play ranking well up in our first 10 shoved aside for 50 inferior ones. Mr. Hughes hasn't done a perfect job on his second comedy—"Wake Up, Jonathan" was his first—but he has done some perfect things in it. And, except for the very end of the play, which is just plain foolishness and may by this time have been entirely changed, it can be guaranteed to skewer the most unwilling attention. Sometimes the story is kept going by devices that irritate us, but at least it is kept going.

Locale in the Feud Country.

THE play is about a couple of families down in the North Carolina feud country and a young man who was taken in by one of them to help run the store while the son of the house was in France with the army. This poor young man has so little to recommend him that even to himself he seems too mean for the rewards of this world. But an itinerant evangelist fills him with hope for the next and gives him at the same time, unfortunately, conviction that even before he gets to heaven God is entirely willing that he should interpret the Divine Will on earth.

This is a type that is not only fine material for a dramatist, but is also fair material. The Blue Ridge is filled with such young men. Notwithstanding popular belief to the contrary, life in the Southern mountains is no guarantee of health or strength. It is true that the mountaineers breathe fine air, but it is also true that they eat terrible food, and that they sleep at nights with the windows nailed down.

They are too far from each other to have much social diversion among themselves, and they live almost without joy. This also cuts into the average human allotment of health. And then they are ignorant, and their minds are all too easily seized upon by the rhetorical orgies of the circuit riders.

The Fanatic's Big Scene.

IF, then, you take a young man who is undernourished, illiterated, lonely, whose head was almost empty till it was inflamed by the heroic gesture of the evangelist, you are bound to get almost exactly the creature in Hatcher Hughes' play. Our one complaint against Mr. Hughes is that he was not quite tender enough with him. He did not try quite hard enough

"Pied Piper Malone" "The Governor's Lady" Are Picture Features

"In the Palace of the King" Also Is on View and "Scaramouche" Has First Popular-Price Showing at Four Houses.

THOMAS MEIGHAN in "Pied Piper Malone" is featured at the Missouri Theater this week. The story is by Booth Tarkington. Supporting Meighan in the picture is a cast including Lois Wilson and George Fawcett. The plot concerns Jack Malone who is of the oldest and one of the finest New England families. He takes to the sea at an early age and his voyages around the world keep him from his home in Oldport several years at a time.

On his return he is so beloved by the children of the town that he is called the "Pied Piper." His love for Paddy Thomas, one of the prettiest girls in Oldport, has aroused the ire of Charlie Crosby, first mate of the ship and Jacks superior officer.

The scenes that follow show the wrecking of the ship and later the return of Malone and Capt. Clarke in irons to Oldport, their chief accuser being Crosby. When everything seems against them Paddy and the kiddies unearth the truth and put the blame where it belongs.

"The Governor's Lady," film version of a David Belasco play, is on the screen at the Fox Liberty Theater. It is a story of life behind the scenes in politics.

Daniel Slade has risen from the laboring ranks in a silver mine to the Governor's chair. There is a great deal of Napoleon in his makeup. His wife fails to keep up with his advancement in the social world. Just before Slade's nomination for Governor of his State he meets the daughter of a Senator. Slade is infatuated with the girl. When he tells his wife that she is a hindrance to him in his career and that he intends to marry the Senator's daughter, she leaves. On the eve of his selection to the governorship, Slade receives word that the girl who was to take his wife's place has changed her mind and will marry a young lawyer. He then goes to the big executive mansion a remorseful and lonely man. From this point the photoplay moves forward to a dramatic climax.

Goldwyn's production of F. Marion Crawford's novel, "In the Palace of the King" is the current attraction at the Kings. Blanche Sweet and Edmund Lowe play the lovers. Sam de Grasse, Hobart Bosworth, Aileen Pringle, Pauline Starke, William V. Mong, George Littlefield and Charles Clary have important roles. Nun's Famous Art Collection at Notre Dame, Valued Now at $1,000,000, Cost Only $10,000

She Sold 136 Pictures to Raise "Dowry for Wedding to Church" and University Later Bought Them.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Feb. 9.—When Notre Dame University's building program, for part of which a $1,000,000 campaign is now being carried on, is completed, one of the new structures will guard within its walls contents of far more value than the costly modern building surrounding them.

This will be the art museum. In it will be arranged collections of paintings from the old masters, together with many other art treasures, the whole valued at $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Art has always met with full appreciation at Notre Dame, and, as it is reward, many of the finer things of the world artistic have found their way into the school's possession through channels much out of the ordinary. One of the most striking instances is the manner in which Notre Dame acquired for $10,000 a collection of paintings now believed to be worth nearly $1,000,000.

Wanted to Present Dowry.

Late in 1913 the Countess Braschi, a member of an old Roman family allied with that of Pope Pius IX, decided to enter a convent as a nun. For a dowry for her "wedding to the church," she wished to provide 30,000 francs. But the immediate Braschi family, although of the nobility, had become impoverished.

Among the family's most cherished possessions was a collection of paintings of the old masters of the fifteenth to seventeenth centuries. Part the family had acquired gradually through the years, part had come from the Capuchin monks of Benevento, and the rest from the galleries of the Sciarra-Colonna family of Italy.

The Countess Braschi determined to sell the paintings that the funds for the dowry might be obtained. The Italian Government offered to purchase them. But its stipulations were for yearly installment payment instead of a lump sum, and the Countess quietly began seeking a purchaser elsewhere.

A former servant of the family, now become an art dealer in a way, learned of her desires and imparted his information to a priest in Rome who held the close friendship of the Vicar General of the Archdiocese of Quebec in Canada. The priest immediately urged the Vicar General to buy the pictures, assuring him they were worth many times the price asked, before the matter became public knowledge and bidding sent the price leaping upward.

Early in 1914 the Vicar General bought the paintings, part of which had to be redeemed from art dealers and pawn brokers into whose hands the family's thinning fortune had thrown them. For a time the Vicar General held the pictures. But he was getting along in years, and, to assure this collection of old Italian masters remaining as a whole in the hands of some Catholic institution, he offered it to Notre Dame University for $40,000.

That sum was lacking, but Father John Cavanaugh, then president of the university, believed $20,000 could be raised for the purchase. He overestimated. Only $10,000, coming from private individuals, art lovers and the university, was available. Through his desire to keep the collection intact, however, the Vicar General accepted the $10,000.

Obtained in 1917.

The pictures came to the university in 1917, Father Gregory Gerrer, of the Benedictine order, a native of Alsace, who had studied and painted for years in Europe and whose portrait of Pope Pius X hangs in the Vatican, was called from New York to expertize the collection.

"I came with an open mind," he declared recently. "Collections may be worth much or little; may be composed of the work of the masters or merely copies. Of the 136 pictures in the collection from Canada, I found, perhaps 10, lacking the genuineness all their owners had believed them to possess. The rest were by old masters, some very wonderful indeed. It's impossible to place a market value on pictures that can't be replaced and which the owners do not intend to sell, but this collection is worth a lot of money—quite a lot of money."

Pressed for figures, Father Gerrer said the collection was at least of equal value to that given Notre Dame in 1922 by Charles Wightman, an art connoisseur of Evanston, which has been valued at more than three-quarters of a million dollars.

In the Vicar-General's collection were paintings by Fra Bartolomeo, considered, next to Leonardo, the greatest of the Florentine school of artists; by Paulo Veronese, one of the most powerful painters, from all angles, of all time, by Charles Le Brun, court painter of Louis XIV of France; by Guido Reni, by the two Poussins, by Ribera, Guercino, Salmeggio called Talpino, and numerous other great artists of the early Italian school. One of the pictures, "The Return From Egypt" of the Holy Family, by Baracci, was once the property of Cardinal Fesch, uncle of Napoleon.

Many Are Originals.

Of the 136 pictures obtained from the Vicar-General many were originals. Others were replicas painted by the artists themselves and almost as valuable. There were some copies, but the most of them by contemporaries or students of the old masters, which have a growing value in themselves.

The collection on the whole was a wonderful one, says Father Gerrer. "These men, mainly of the Italian school, were great artists and their work here is representative," is his verdict.

Notre Dame also possesses paintings by Van Dyke, Jacabo Robusti, Canaletto, Salvatore Rosa, Decrayer and Murillo, as well as by high-class present-day artists. Of unusual interest are 29 Russian and Bulgarian primitives—pictures of the ante-Renaissance period—so old that their painters are unknown. The main building at the school and the Church of the Sacred Heart there contain murals by Luigi Gergori, sent from Italy especially for that purpose by Pope Pius IX. Jewel-studded sacred vessels of gold and silver, the gifts of the Empress Eugenie and of Napoleon II are also among the art treasures of Notre Dame.

either to understand him or to explain him.

It is true that he wrote him one scene, in which he moves over into one corner of the log house and begins to talk with God, that is entirely true and eloquent—that was, in fact, superbly true and eloquent as acted by John Hamilton. But too harsh and uncomprehending things go before that and some after it. Mr. Hughes simply must be a little sorry about it. All through his play, in fact, Mr. Hughes has been guilty of a certain aloofness in his own feeling. One had a conviction that the people of his play had made him awfully mad—that at best, he was bound to show that not even the best of them could quite take him in.

However, even in spite of this, he has done a splendid job. And we wish there were time and space to go separately into the perfections of the four performances by John Hamilton, Augustin Duncan, Glenn Anders and George Abbott. The women are pretty well played, by Clara Blandick and Margaret Borough, but they are both written as if Mr. Hughes had some deep and abiding grudge against the sex.

"Fashion" a Diverting Revival.

THE fascination of "Fashion," which was revived Sunday night at the Provincetown playhouse, is undeniable. This revival of the sensational success of 1845 is among the most amusing entertainments now being presented in New York.

Nor is the interest wholly antiquarian. Possibly the charm of the play lies in its guilelessness. Even "The Young Visitors" itself is hardly to be compared with "Fashion" for naivete. And yet the various situations introduced into Anna Cora Mowatt's play are not all ghosts from the past. Not a few of her devices are still doing services. Now and again a line, heard no longer ago than Wednesday before last, pops out unexpectedly. The play is for a modern audience a sort of animated family album.

Possibly the pleasure of the spectator rises in part from a sense of superiority. The youngest pupil of Prof. Baker would blush to employ most of the transparent tricks which Anna Mowatt embraced without shame in 1845. The play should serve to prove that, in spite of all the lamentations for the golden age of the American theater, native comedy has progressed mightily. "Fashion" is, according to all our standards, a fearfully bad play. And, strangely enough, that is where the fun comes in.

The "aside" may have carried conviction in 1845, but it can hardly have been so mirth-provoking as right now, when it arouses nothing but disbelief. We have not known as merry a moment all season as the first aside of the villainous Count Jolimaitre in the opening act of "Fashion." Mrs. Tiffany, his hostess, is remarking that the Count is well known in all the courts of Europe, whereupon the villain advances to the edge of the footlights, cups his hands and bawls out to the audience: "Police courts!"

Its Convulsing Sincerity.

NO burlesque or satire upon the old-fashioned theater could possibly be as funny as "Fashion," because it has the merit of being written in entire sincerity. One or two of the actors hurt the effect a little by consciously spoofing the comedy. The best work is done by Mary Morris, who plays Gertrude, the poor down-trodden governess, without the slightest suggestion that it is not one of the great and true roles of the theater. Walter Abel as the lover is almost as good.

Clare Eames plays Mrs. Tiffany and she is sometimes among the spoofers. Nevertheless her performance is highly merry and diverting. A number of songs of the period have been arranged by Brian Hooker and Deems Taylor. Not the least amusing part of the performance is the accurate reproduction of the scenery of the period. Robert Edmund Jones directed the production and he has done a beautiful job. "Fashion" clearly belongs on the list of every playgoer.

A Pretty Theater and Bad Play.

A COZY and comfortable little theater west of Eighth avenue in Fifty-second street, known formerly as the Berkley, was opened Monday night under the management of Oliver Morosco. It is now known as th eFifty-second Street Theater, and the attractiveness of its soft-lighted interior is beyond question. Moreoven, under the new directorship, the Fifty-second Street Theater offers dancing on the mezzanine floor between acts, and cake, coffee and tea between the second and third acts. The orchestra is a lively one, and the cake delicious.

A play written by Willis Maxwell Goodhue, called "Myrtie" is the first to be acted in this clever little room. "Myrte" is a pay which cannot b recommended as good drama. Indeed, "Myrtie' probably is not any kind of drama. The first act is laid in a rectory which is occupied by a handsome young priest and his sister.

Myrtie, a fur-coated(scofflaw is dragged in by her father, who tells the priest that Myrtie is determined she will be a nymph of the pavement. The father wants Myrtie turned from her evil ways. The rest of the play consists of Myrtie sneering at God and saying she is a-going to "see life" and what has God ever done to help her "see life?"

Some of the starkness of Myrtie's tirades against religion is relieved by the composed counseling of the priest, but at that it all seems crude.

In the second act Myrtie after living in few months in the rectory, has fallen in love with the priest.

Much of the dialogue is written without particular consideration for religious belief or religious sincerity and Myrtie discussed her vocation plainly and enthusiastically.

THERE is no particular and distinctive plot to "The Show-Off," George Kelly's new three-act comedy, which began at the Playhouse Tuesday night what is likely to be a long career in laugh-making. But there is Helen Lowell in the cast. And that is just about enough—which we say with no slightest intention of casting a side-tracking word at the performance of Louis John Bartels in the role covered by the title.

"The Show-Off," Mr. Kelly tells us, is "A Transcript of Life." The life, we add for the good of all concerned, is that of West Philadelphia. And Miss Lowell, playing the part of Mrs. Fisher, housewife in a family which owns its own home, could be no more absolutely in it if her name were over the Playhouse door in electric letters a yard high.

As for the Show-Off himself, Aubrey Piper, as the bills name him, he is a $32 clerk in the Pennsylvania Railroad freight offices, who devotes his vocal energies to the task of convincing the world that both in and out of his job he is the whole works. Unfortunately, he carries conviction to Amy, the younger daughter of Mrs. Fisher, who gives up her job for a wedding ring. Henceforth, the Show-Off constitutes all by himself a long list of Fisher family troubles, and that is essentially the story of Mr. Kelly's play.

Mr. Bartels, as the unblushing Piper, is Mr. Egotism in Person, as the movie posters might say, with a carnation in his buttonhole and unruffled self-satisfaction in his every tone of voice. He and Miss Lowell play up to each other in a fashion almost incredibly realistic.

There is a hint of tragedy in "The Show-Off," when Mr. Fisher falls at his work in the shop and dies at the Samaritan Hospital. A touch of the fairy tale enters when young Joe Fisher perfects an anti-rust invention and draws $100,000 cash. These things are off-stage, however. They do not affect the high mightiness of Piper, nor do they give long pause to the generally running merriment in Mr. Kelly's comedy lines.

Florence Vidor has been selected for an important role in "Borrowed Husbands," the picturization of Mildred K. Barbour's novel, which is being directed by David Smith.

Patsy Ruth Miller, one of the most winning screen players of the day, will be seen here soon in "My Man," a David Smith production for Vitagraph. Dustin Farnum plays the leading masculine role.

Jane Cowl as the Serpent of Old Nile

ADMIRERS of Miss Jane Cowl who have seen her as the love-lorn heroine in "Romeo and Juliet" may learn from the above photograph how she looks as the imperious Queen in "Anthony and Cleopatra," her latest production. The drama is now playing in Boston, and is scheduled to reach New York a week from tomorrow night.

Orchestra to Play in New Orleans This Week.

AFTER last week's musical surfeit, a famine. Not only will there be no popular concert this afternoon, but the Symphony Orchestra will have no regular concerts this week. The organization leaves today for New Orleans, where it will play its second series of three concerts tomorrow night and Tuesday afternoon and evening. The soloists tomorrow and Tuesday nights will be Cecelia Hansen, violinist; and Richard Hale, baritone. The orchestra will return home Thursday, and will give a popular concert at the Odeon next Sunday afternoon, at which Reuben Davies, pianist, of Dallas, Tex., will be soloist.

The regular series of concerts will resume on Thursday and Friday of next week. Ethel Leginska, pianist, will be soloist, and the orchestra will give a first-time performance of Arnold Schoenberg's "Verklaerte Nacht."

Kreisler and Elman Recitals.

FRITZ KREISLER is announced for a recital at the Odeon on Feb. 27, and Mischa Elman will give a concert at the same hall on March 15. A new violinist, Juan Manen, from Spain, will be heard for the first time here in a recital at the Sheldon Auditorium on a date not yet set. He has attained some distinction as a composer.

The Norfleet Trio, of New York, will give a concert at the Wednesday Club on Feb. 23 for the benefit of the Music Settlement School Fund of this city. The Trio consists of two sisters and a brother, violinist, pianist and violoncellist. They are native Missourians.

The Civic Orchestra, under the direction of Ellis Levy, will give a concert Friday night at the Central High School Auditorium. Amy Guth Punshon, contralto, and Ethel Knobeloch, violinist, will be soloists. The numbers to be played by this new organization of young musicians include Meyerbeer's "Coronation March," Bizet suite, "L'Arlesienne," No. 1; Borowski's "Adoration"; Lacome's "Suite Espagnole" and Levy's "Evening Prayer," for strings.

Knights of Columbus Concert.

THE Knights of Columbus Choral Club will give a concert at the Odeon on Feb. 21, with Helen Traubel Carpenter as soloist. The principal ensemble number will be Bizet's setting of Victor Hugo's poem, "St. John of Patmos," which will be given for the first time here.

The Concordia Seminary Students' Chorus will give its twenty-second annual concert at Moolah Temple on Feb. 19, under the direction of Frederick Fischer. The Rev. H. B. Fehner, of Windsor, Ont., will be soloist. Three recitals by pupils of the Strassberger Conservatories will be given this afternoon and evening and Tuesday night at the South Side branch, Grand boulevard and Shenandoah avenue.

The San Carlo Opera Co. is announced for nine performances at the Odeon, beginning March 24. The operas to be given are "Rigoletto," "Tosca," "Aida," "Martha," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "I Pagliacci," "Madam Butterfly," "Le Boheme," "Il Trovatore," and "La Forza del Destino."

In the casts will be Manuel Salazar, tenor; Mario Basiola, baritone; Consuelo Escobar, coloratura; Elda Vettori, St. Louis soprano, who will sing Tosca; Stella de Mette, St. Louis mezzo-soprano, and such well-known singers as Pietro di Biasi, Natale Cervi, Francesco Curci and Pietro Canova.

What They Are DOING IN Movie Studios

June Mathis, who wrote the scenario for "Ben-Hur," is a great student of the Bible. She has a collection of 50 rare copies, many of them highly valuable.

"The Puritans" will be the first production of the Film Guild in which Miss Maude Adams will assist in supervision and direction. This production is one of the Yale University series of "Chronicles of America."

Rockcliffe Fellowes, Earle Williams, Robert Gordon and Kathlyn Adams have been added to the cast of "Borrowed Husbands," the picturization of Mildred K. Barbour's novel which David Smith is producing for Vitagraph. Florence Vidor has the leading feminine role.

brother will never return, for he is jealous of his popularity. The King has decreed that Don John shall marry an English Princess. His brother returns victorious and is stabbed by the King in a jealous quarrel. Dolores' father assumes the guilt and to save his life Dolores, who had been hidden in a lover's rooms, confronts the King and threatens him into pardoning her father. Don John recovers and the King consents to his marriage to Dolores.

The first popular-priced presentation of Rex Ingram's picturization of Sabatini's "Scaramouche" takes place this week at the Grand Central, Delmonte, West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters. This superb production was first presented in St. Louis at the Pershing Theater for three weeks at advanced prices.

Ramon Novarro, Alice Terry and Lewis Stone are the featured players. The story is laid in France during the time just preceding the French Revolution.

When originally shown at the Pershing the meaning of the title brought many queries. "Scaramouche" is an Italian proper name, but the French translation of it is "clown" "or mountebank," which is the title's meaning relative to the film. The hero, after a misunderstanding with his guardian, becomes a clown with a strolling band of actors who afterwards was a success in Paris.

It is during a performance in Paris that his hatred of the aristocrat is crystallized into a vow that precipitates a panic. Then the youth goes into politics with his sword, saving the representatives in the Assembly from being killed off one by one as they are challenged to duels by the best swordsmen in the aristocratic faction.

Wesley Barry's latest picture, "The Printer's Devil," adapted from an original story by Julien Josephson, will be presented at the West End Lyric the last three days of the week, playing Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Barry Myers and Katherine McGuire appear in support.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months.

FOR WOMEN ONLY

(Copyright, 1924.)

Drawn by W. E. Hill For the Sunday Post-Dispatch

A great trial to the management of a women's hotel is the guest who will insist on getting ahead of the cafeteria. Look at Gloria, if you please, coming in with a bag of rolls from the bakery, right out before everyone!

After dinner in the lounge, where the lights are dim, showing two elderly ladies, looking not wisely and too well, for places to sit down. "You know, Fanny," Mrs. Herbert Rountree has but a moment ago whispered to her dear, dear sister-in-law, Mrs. Rob Royster, "I think some of these women must have husbands calling on them. They sit and sit and don't say a word to each other."

It's a rainy night and the lady with the timid disposition is going to ask at the desk if it will be safe to entrust herself to a taxi driver for seventeen blocks.

The finishing school teacher is spending a week of her vacation at the women's hostelry. It's been a great rest so far. Hasn't seen a single girl from the school, thank heaven.

Only the most ultra refined waitresses get jobs in the cafeteria. Jenny is one of the most ultra. She has just put a woman in her place who "had the NOIVE, my dear, to try to get a thermos bottle filled with coffee!"

The electrician on his well-worn way to repair a burnt-out fuse and other ravages of an electrical burner. He is one of the few priviledged males allowed above the office floor in the women's hotel.

The young lady behind the desk is so very collegiate that new arrivals hesitate to approach her, thinking that one of the guests has just stepped into the office to get the view. When a young man, waiting for the only girl to come out of the elevator, asks if it's all right to smoke, the young lady behind the desk says: "Oh, but you shouldn't have awsked!" Then he doesn't know what to do.

At left: Tired business girl all ready to go out and get tireder. She has just sighted her swain across the lobby, hence the gladsome smile of welcome. She and her girl friend have planned that the one who gets in first will pin a note on the door if she wants to go to sleep. If not, they will have a long talk about the party.

Lewis is waiting in the lobby for his girl, and as each lady emerges from the elevator, she looks at Lewis and seems to say, "No, that's not mine," and passes on. Lewis is getting restive.

Trained nurse, starting out for work, and this was the evening she had set aside for a shampoo!

Practicality seems to have been one of the outstanding aims Mr. Zeller has impressed on his pupils, for no useless object has occupied the attention of the students.

Mr. Zeller's charcoal drawings are very early and show one of the steps in the artist's academic training. Their attraction is purely technical, for they are almost devoid of subject interest or pleasing arrangement.

FORMING the major portion of the exhibition are his paintings in oil. A great deal has been said from time to time both for and against this artist's pictures when they have appeared in local exhibits. Looking at these pictures as a whole, there seems to be little occasion for radical discussion. To us, they seem unusually intermediate in value and of an indisputable sameness.

Sincerely and thoughtfully worked out, they are examples of a tireless effort to conform to the staid rule of conservative painting. The artist must be given credit for honesty in his labor and for his indefatigable effort. Few modern painters bestow upon their work such devotion to precept as does Mr. Zeller.

The fact that the result is uneventful and lacking in initiative does not come from shirking any academic duty. He faithfully reiterates the formula with suppressed accent and very little inflection.

As for the glum, dreary solemnity of his pictures, this is a viewpoint, a frame of mind. No artist in joyous mood could bring himself to employ such woebegone colors. Some delight somewhere would excite a spontaneity to kindle his enthusiasm and glorify his palette. We are not asking that Mr. Zeller paint in high key—many of the finest pictures in existence have been painted in as low a scale; we just wish for a little more gladness, more sparkle, more flame. The artistic feeling in Mr. Zeller's pictures is present, but inarticulate. A fling in color might bring forth a number of unexpected things. We would enjoy the experiment, at any rate.

IN Gallery 32 of the City Art Museum, a collection of British arts and crafts is assembled which is of interest to American students of industrial and decorative arts and to the public which purchases pottery, metal craft and illuminated books.

The effect that the combined exhibits impresses upon the spectator is one of traditional English dignity in all things. In the silver objects and the illuminated books, which are most characteristically English, this is especially apparent.

From the factories of William de Morgan, known as both author and potter, come jars, bowls, vases and tiles that are ranged among the best produced in Great Britain. The luster ware, of which a blue bowl with striking bird design probably is most interesting, is much superior to the pottery jars by the same artists. A certain unemotional unconcern prevents the majority of the objects from appealing to one's sense of rhythm of line and contour.

Among the silver, most of which is for ecclesiastical use, are some interesting combinations of enamel and silves. Omar Ramsden, who contributes the largest number of silver pieces in this exhibit, has contrived a cigaret box of generous proportion shaped like a treasure chest of old, sturdily built and brilliantly covered with painted enamel lid. Although ostentatious and a bit gaudy because of its glaring colors, it is a fine piece of silver craft which has successfully overcome the difficulty of baking the enamel without injury to the silver.

A POTPOURRI by Adams has a more appealing grace than the surrounding objects. The little silver jar is about five inches in height and nicely proportioned. The lid, its three openings stenciled in butterfly design, is decorated with small bits of transparent cloisonne and opals, and its fragile handle, a tiny circle of delicate blue, is gently fastened in at the top. The inside of the lid reveals a beautiful little medallion of dark blue cloisonne.

The modern hand-wrought English jewelry exhibited here is markedly different from that produced in this country. It is large and rather course, certainly at variance from that which our American women consider in good taste. The designs, while intricate, are spread out in a fashion rendering the effect too bizarre for a casually worn costume. Such ornaments possess a certain ceremonial dignity, a solemnity out of keeping with any general usage.

Gralig Hewitt, one of the foremost British workers in book illumination, is represented here by several exquisite examples of lettering. The initials done in gilt are delightfully perfect, being clearly drawn and standing out in good relief. Canticles for use in religious service have been beautifully lettered and illuminated.

The British Arts and Crafts exhibit will remain on display here until the end of the month.

THE Art Students' annual costume ball will be held this year at the Coronado Hotel, next Friday evening. This event always is anticipated pleasantly, since it affords an opportunity for artistic folk to give vent to interesting whims in costume designing, color combination and dramatic effect. The Varsity Club Orchestra will furnish the music for the evening.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Any of these books will be sent by parcel post to cardholders on receipt of postage in order of application:

"THE LORD OF DEATH," by Margurite Alotte de la Fuye, trans. by L. N. Parker. A play that has run through 10 editions in the original French. It is composed of a prologue and three acts, and combines the story of the Centurion with the legend of Saint Veronica. In the prologue the scene is laid at Capernaum, while the subsequent action takes place in Jerusalem.

"LETTERS OF THOMAS CARLYLE TO JOHN STUART MILL, JOHN STERLING AND ROBERT BROWNING," edited by A. Carlyle, M. A. A collection of nearly 80 letters to John Stuart Mill, written chiefly between 1831 and 1834 at the beginning of their friendship; about 30 letters, only one previously published in full, to John Sterling; and only a fe wto Browning, who disliked writing and lived within easy reach of Cheyne Row. A little known portrait of Carlyle at 49—by Linnell—is a beautiful feature of the book.

"THE PHYSICIAN," by J. M. J. Finney, M. D. The substance of this volume has been delivered in addresses to the Medical Club of Princeton University. It contains a brief but practical outline of the career of medicine; its advantages, its difficulties, its value, and dwells especially on the characteristics which fit a man for the profession. To those contemplating the study of medicine, this book would be of value in helping them to decide for or against it as a life work.

"THE EDUCATION OF WOMEN: ITS SOCIAL BACKGROUND AND ITS PROBLEMS," by W. Goodsell, Ph. D. The chapters are: "Historical Sketch of the Education of Women;" "College Women and the Marriage rate;" "Sex Differentiation in Education;" Sex Differentiation From a Social Viewpoint;" "Cultural Versus Vocational Education;" "The Vocational Education of Working Girls;" "The Social Education of Women;" "Manners and Morals;" "Health and the Woman," and "Values in Education." The author is assistant professor of education in the Teachers' College, Columbia University.

"COLETTE'S BEST RECIPES: A BOOK OF FRENCH COOKERY," by M. Jacques.

An unusual and appetizing collection of recipes, written down as Colette has explained them to her employer. Colette is a real cook —a Breton—who has become well known in France through her remarkable culinary achievements.

"FAMOUS JUDGES AND FAMOUS TRIALS," by C. Kingston.

The careers of 12 notable judges have provided the author with a subject of great interest, and he repictures about a hundred remarkable trials, both civil and criminal. The book is illustrated with portraits and cartoons.

"THE TRUTH ABOUT BURNS," by D. McNaught, J. P., LL.D.

A scholarly life of the poet presenting the conclusions now deducible from the broader field of ascertained facts. Through carefully sifted evidence the author has arrived at a just and more kindly picture of the poet. A long bibliography of reviews and press notices which appeared during Burns' lifetime is appended.

"THE PROBLEM OF STYLE," by J. M. Murry.

Six lectures delivered in the school of English literature at Oxford on the invitation of Sir Walter Raleigh. According to the Nation and Athenaem Mr. Murry's book is one of the most illuminating critical discussions of literature that have been written since Arnold's Essays in Criticism, in its power to subtilize the reader's perceptions and to refine his ordinarily scattered judgments.

"THE RUSSIAN SOVIET REPUBLIC, by E. A. Ross.

A vivid account of what the Soviet Republic has done during its first critical years. The author, who is professor of sociology in the University of Wisconsin, is deeply stirred by th ematerial he presents. He believes that communist ideas have split and weakened the Socialists and that today capitalism is safer and stronger than it has been in many years.

"THE HUNDRED AND ONE HARLEQUINS, by S. Sitwell.

The author is one of the most gifted members of the ultra modern group to which he belongs. The titles of his poems are to themselves intriguing, and afford presumptive evidence of a strongly individual outlook. He has a bizarre imagination, touched with humor, and a healthy disdain for everything trite or affected.

Catholic Sisters to Give Bazaar.

The Little Sisters of the Poor will give a bazaar at the First Regiment Armory, Grand boulevard and Market street, Feb. 29 and March 1 and 2 for the purpose of raising funds to remodel their buildings at Twentieth and Hebert streets.

THIS PRESCRIPTION FOR KIDNEYS

No Drugs—Just Roots and Herbs.

Five years ago Dr. Carey said, "When backache comes get after your kidneys"—"and don't waste any time."

"Right at the start, go to your druggist and ask for Dr. Carey's Marshroot Prescription No. 777; take it as directed until backache ceases and your eyes are clear and bright."

For more than 40 years Dr. Carey specialized in diseases of the kidney and bladder, and when, in the height of his remarkably busy life, he decided to dispense his most effective kidney and bladder prescription through the better druggists, he helped thousands who could not afford to go to him for treatment.

Thousands of unobservant people have kidney ailments and never know it until too late. High colored urine, getting up in the night, and puffy eyes tell the story.

If you even suspect—start today with Dr. Carey's Marshroot Prescription No. 777. It will drive the poisons from your kidneys and your druggist knows all about it.

Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores dispense lots of it. It comes both in liquid and tablet form. It will help you as it has a host of others. If it should not, if you aren't glad in one week's time that you bought it, money gladly returned. Price $1.50 and well worth it.

Rupture Is Dangerous

Instant Relief; Many Cures Reported; Full Directions, SAMPLE SENT FREE

Just because you have been ruptured for years and have tried all kinds of bungling trusses and appliances, salves, liniments and plasters without satisfactory results, do not think you have to stay in this dangerous condition.

You may have instant blessed relief and, as scores of others report, complete recovery by the use of this simple, inexpensive discovery.

Send no money. To prove that my famous Resilient Rupture Pad does Conquer Rupture, even in its worst forms, I will send a sample absolutely free to any ruptured person, in a plain sealed package. Possibly you are wondering whether this can be true. Stop it! The test is free and surely the test will tell. Cut out this notice and hand it to a ruptured friend or send it with your name and address to E. H. Scott, 904 Scott Bldg., Akron, Ohio, and you will quickly receive a sample Resilient Rupture Pad with full directions. No obligation to purchase. Don't let Rupture handicap you in the battle of life, but make this test today.

DIPLOMAT KICKS UP DUST BY UNDIPLOMATIC REMARK

French Minister Expresses Popular Hope as to Bucharest's Streets and May Lose Post.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—Count de Manneville, the French Minister to Rumania, is in trouble with the Rumanian Government on account of having publicly expressed the wish that the streets of Bucharest, capital of Rumania, might be kept cleaner. Premier Bratiano, it is reported, is about to request the recall of Count de Manneville, which has been energetically demanded by the Rumanian Government press.

The trouble has all come about from Count de Manneville having been asked by the Bucharest Daily Universal to write a New Year's message for that journal. The Minister did so and, wishing the Rumanian people good luck and prosperity, expressed the hope for cleaner streets in Bucharest, a hope popularly shared in but regarded as improper for a diplomat to express.

RIDING TO HOUNDS AGAIN IN FULL SWING IN IRELAND

Passing of Political Disturbances Marked by Return of Popular Sport.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Jan. 22.—One of the first amusements to suffer from political disturbance in Ireland is always riding to hounds, and the refusal of the people to allow the dogs and their mounted followers over their lands has been regarded as a demonstration of political opinion.

Today hunting once again is in full swing and the numerous packs of hounds all over the country carry on without interruption, a condition thought typical of the recent change. In Waterford, the hounds are under the mastership of members of the family of the Marquis of Waterford.

English visitors have not yet begun to come back in large numbers, but the outbreak of the foot and mouth disease among horses in England has acted as a deterrent to the sport, and the Irish hunting packs are taking advantage of this circumstance to invite English sportsmen to come to Ireland.

CABINET OF BIBLE CHARACTERS

Englishman Picks St. Stephen for Premiership.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—A politically inclined Minister of the Church of England has constructed what he considers to be an ideal Cabinet, drawing all the office holders from the Bible.

The rector has nominated St. Stephen as Prime Minister "because he is likely to show the nation and the individual a most irresistible combination of personality and intelligence." For Home Secretary, Tabitha and Priscilla are passed over in favor of Rachael, "a woman all the way through." Joshua is given the post of Secretary of War, while Adam comes in as Minister of Agriculture. Other nominations include: St. Matthew, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Timothy, Board of Education; Gallio, Lord Chancellor.

FORD'S BOOK ONE OF BEST SELLERS IN GERMANY

Count Zedlitz's Memoirs of Experience at William's Court Causes Him to Be Ostracized.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—Henry Ford's "My Life and Work," and Count Zedlitz—Truetzechlor's memoirs recounting his experience as Marshal of former Kaiser William's Court, are the two best selling books in Germany. They distanced all fiction in Christmas sales and the booksellers are still unable to supply the demand for them.

Count Zedlitz's merciless grilling of the former Kaiser and men closely associated with him cause the author to be ostracized socially and denounced by his family and countless reactionary organizations, but his book is being translated into many languages and is more discussed than anything else written in Germany since the Armistice.

Dresses Designed to Give Only Slight Glimpse of Ankles.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Because women's ankles have increased in size through the wearing of very tight shoes, dresses are to be longer in length.

This is what the Paris experts have told proprietors of the principal West End stores, and it is in the intention of fashion-creators to design dresses in such a way as to give only a slight glimpse of ankles.

Piles Can Be Cured Without Surgery

An instructive book has been published by Dr. A. S. McCleary, the noted rectal specialist of Kansas City. This book tells how sufferers from Piles can be quickly and easily cured without the use of knife, scissors, "hot" iron, electricity or any other cutting or burning method, without confinement to bed and no hospital bills to pay. The method has been a success for 25 years and in more than 9000 cases. The book is sent postpaid free to persons afflicted with piles or other rectal troubles who clip this item and mail it with name and address to Dr. McCleary, 566 Park-view Sanitarium, Kansas City, Mo.

New Strength and Energy For the Weak and Aged

To be strong, vigorous and active you must have plenty of good, rich, red blood of the kind that organic iron—Nuxated Iron—helps make. Nuxated Iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron. Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It quickly helps make rich red blood, revitalizes worn-out, exhausted nerves and gives new strength and energy. At all druggists. Do you look Too old to succeed?

Gray hair denotes advancing age. Age is a handicap, and we all know the advantage of a youthful appearance.

Don't stay gray! Look young, vigorous! When your hair turns gray, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur will darken it.

Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store, a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of men and women recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair perfectly, and besides, no one can tell, because it darkens so naturally and evenly.

You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking a few strands at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears. After another application or two its natural color is restored, and you appear years younger.

NEW CARS DESIGNED TO AID BUNDLE-LADEN COMMUTERS

Double Entrance at Each End So That Two May Get On or Off at Same Time.

Commuters on Missouri Pacific local trains are going to have plenty of room to carry packages of garden tools and the various and sundry other things commuters bundle home, in entering new-style accommodation coaches with which their trains are being provided. Three of the new cars have been received and will go into service tomorrow; one of them was on exhibition yesterday on track No. 17, Union Station.

It is expected, the road announced, that all its suburban trains will be equipped with the new cars by the end of the month. The feature to interest package carriers is the double entrance at each end, so that two persons can get on or off at one place at the same time, and the extra-wide doors. Each car seats 117 persons, seats on one side being for three persons each. The cars are of all-steel construction.

Commuters have received other advantages. Thte Frisco Railroad now uses oil-burning locomotives on all passenger trains to and from St. Louis, reducing dirt. The partitioning of the midway at Union Station, to make it warmer and free from smoke, is nearing completion.

"POWERED GLIDER" CONTEST AT AIR RACES PLANNED

Prize to Be Included in Dayton Program to Encourage Development of Devices.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, O., Feb. 9.—A substantial prize for a new event, to be run in connection with the international air races at Wilbur Wright field here next fall, to be known as the "powerful glider" contest, has been announced by Dayton officials of the National Aeronautic Association, provided there are a sufficient number of entrants.

The Finance Committee believes there is a large number of such devices now being designed and built throughout the country, and a contest in which the builders would compete would encourage future activities in this direction.

Prizes totaling approximately $50,000 will be distributed to winners of the various races, and the committee expects, with such an amount in prize money, that a representative number of entrants from Europe will be encouraged to compete in the more important events.

All costs of the race have been guaranteed. It was reported by the committee that about $150,000 has been underwritten by a large finance concern, with Dayton money behind it. The races will continue three days and arrangements are being made to handle 200,000 spectators.

REMBRANDT IN 'NIGHT WATCH'

Dutch Art Critic Thinks Portrait of Artist Is in Painting.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 1.—Prof. Martin of Mauritshuis, the local art gallery, has published an article in which he expresses the opinion that Rembrandt painted a portrait of himself in "The Night Watch," the celebrated picture that is the gem of the Amsterdam Gallery.

Martin believes the man standing between the ensign and one of the patricians in the picture is Rembrandt, a self-portrait done in the style of his portraits from 1639 to 1645.

Danton's ride to save the life of Henriette Givard—an incident of the French Revolution.

When TIME means Everything

Time counted when Danton's mad ride saved the lovely Henriette in the nick of time.

Time is a vitally important factor in nearly every serious occasion in our lives. It is especially important when you need a physic—when poisonous intestinal waste matter must be eliminated promptly without an unnecessary moment's delay. Time counts.

PLUTO WATER is the quick, water physic. Unlike unreliable over-night cathartics, Pluto acts in 30 minutes to two hours. Gently, but surely, it flushes and washes the entire intestinal tract. Leaves no unpleasant after effects.

RED PEPPER FOR COLDS IN CHEST

Ease your tight, aching chest, stop the pain. Break up the congestion. Feel a bad cold loosen up in just a short time.

"Red Pepper Rub" is the cold remedy that brings quickest relief. It cannot hurt you and it certainly seems to end the tightness and drive the congestion and soreness right out.

Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers, and when heat penetrates right down into colds, congestion, aching muscles and sore, stiff joints, relief comes at once.

The moment you apply Red Pepper Rub you feel the tingling heat. In three minutes the congested spot is warmed through and through. When you are suffering from a cold, rheumatism, backache, stiff neck or sore muscles, just get a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, at any drug store. You will have the quickest relief known.

REVIVAL OF POPULAR OPERAS FLOODS LONDON BOX OFFICE

Hundreds Turned Away From New Presentation of Gilbert and Sullivan Works.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—New comic operas are written and staged pretty regularly, then disappear and are never heard of again, but among the exceptions are those by Gilbert and Sullivan, whose tuneful melodies and catchy lyrics are again being revived for a short period.

Every revival of these operas bring its disappointments to hundreds of would-be listeners, and the present is no exception, the demand for seats having been so great that more than £3000 ($13,000) has been returned to persons who sent in checks for reservations.

Weeks ago, when first announcement of the revival was made, persons began forming queues at the box office as early as 8 o'clock in the morning, and although the run of performances has been extended to the end of May, there is small chance of the casual looker-in getting a seat unless he makes an early stand at the door for the few which are kept unbooked.

Many enthusiasts assembled at 4 o'clock Monday morning for the opening performance in the evening of the old favorite, "Iolanthe." Among them was one woman who said she had applied unsuccessfully for a ticket early in December and was told she was too late.

PARENTS AND GERMAN TOWN IN ROW OVER BABY'S NAME

Neighbors Side With Couple Who Call Girl Margot, But Officialsh Say That Is French.

LUDWIGSBURG, Wuerttemberg, Jan. 23.—This little town which, in its palmy days, was the seat of the old Kingdom of Wurttemberg, has been split in two by a dispute among the residents and officials over the question of a baby's name. So far as Ludwigsburg officially is concerned there is a little girl baby here who has no first name at all because her parents insisted upon registering her as Margot. This name the Town Registrar refused point-blank to accept on the ground that it was of French origin and inacceptable to him on that account.

The mother and father have refused to change the baby's name merely to suit a whim of the Registrar, and all their friends have rallied to support them in what has been referred to as Ludwigsburg's warmest town row in several generations.

The parents contend that residents of the free town of Ludwigsburg may name babies as they see fit, and that such a personal matter is none of the business of the city fathers or any of their clerks, who "apparently don't know the war is over."

On the other hand, the Registrar has been upheld in his stand by the Burgomaster and the majority of the town deputies and their political followers.

Health Questions Answered

By Dr. Lewis Baker

An Advertisement Telling How and When To Use Trustworthy Products and Reproducing Extracts of Patrons' Letters Relating to Cadomene, Balmwort, Sulpherb, Arbolone, Su-thol, Mentho-Laxene, Minyol, Hypo-Nuclane, Vilane, Etc.

Dr. Lewis Baker

The extremely good benefits procured by those to whom I have recommended Balmwort tablets for the minor, but nevertheless distressing, annoying and painful ailments of the kidney-bladder system, may be explained by stating a prominent scientist who states: "It is to Vienna, home of the great Dr. Seegen, and other equally famous scientists, that we owe this new remedy. First used by eminent European specialists and later brought to America, where more perfect methods of preparation followed, it now banishing kidney and bladder distress almost in the twinkling of an eye. This discovery, termed Filament De Mals, seems to open up the clogged kidney blood vessels, reducing inflammation, and allows the life-giving blood to flow freely while absorbing and throwing off the poisons, which, retained for a length of time by the system, results in most serious consequences." Filament De Mals, it may be stated, is the active ingredient of Balmwort tablets, a non-secret remedy which I have recommended to thousands during the last fifteen years, with most gratifying results.

Mrs. L. K. writes: "I suffer greatly from neuritic aches, severe headaches and periodic pelvic pain. Can I get relief?"

Answer: I have found 5-grain Su-thol tablets very effective in such cases. They contain no opiates to harm you.

* * *

Mrs. R. C. asks: "I suffer embarrassment owing to too much fat. Can you advise me of a good reduction remedy?"

Answer: Any well-stocked pharmacy can supply you with 5-grain Arbolone tablets packed in sealed tubes with full directions for use. These tablets have proven wonderfully effective in reducing abnormal fat.

Mrs. M. asks: "My scalp itches terribly, is feverish and a great amount of dandruff is present. What is good for this?"

Answer: First shampoo the hair and scalp, apply plain yellow Minyol about once a week as per directions. This relieves the itching, overcomes the dandruff and makes the hair beautifully glossy and vigorous. Obtain in 4-oz. jars of druggists.

Miss K. L. writes: "Is it true that catarrh will spread to all the mucous membranes of the body? Can you suggest a remedy for catarrh of the nose and throat?"

Answer: Neglecting catarrhal conditions may cause various parts of the body to become diseased. Gargle the throat and cleanse the nostrils with a solution of warm water and Vilane powder, as per directions once or twice daily. Also apply tripie strength Mentho-Laxene twice daily in nostrils. If catarrh is associated with constipation, take Sulpherb tablets.

Mrs. A. G. writes: "I suffer much from indigestion, heavy feeling in stomach, belching, etc."

Answer: For indigestion, dyspepsia, and such symptoms as you mention, I advise the use of tablets Trinentine. Obtained in sealed cartons with full directions. They should prove very effective.

C. M. writes: "I have been taking pills to purify my blood and cure my skin of itching and pimples, but don't get much benefit. Please prescribe for me."

Answer: I advise 3-grain Sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets), composed of sulphur, cream of tartar and vegetable extracts, that remove constipation and purify the system. Take this treatment for several months for best results.

B. V. R. writes: "My husband was injured in a railroad wreck three years ago and since then his kidneys have given him lots of trouble. The X-ray shows no displacement and it is only a functional disorder the doctors say, but they fail to help. He has headache, backache and his night's rest is disturbed so he is getting very nervous."

Answer: I recommend Balmwort tablets as a soothing, healing, tonic-diuretic for the system where minor, but distressing, functional inertia exists.

K. R. T. writes: "About three months ago I caught a severe cold which gave me a terrible cough that nothing seems to help. I cough and strangle, night after night and get little sleep. The cough is more troublesome at night and in early morning. Please help me if possible."

Answer: Obtain a package of essence Mentho-Laxene, and use as per directions on label. This is the most effective, prompt-acting cough prescription ever evolved and many wise physicians prescribe it in preference to those which contain narcotics or chloroform, both of which are not good for the human system. Its mighty healing power is often amazing.

C. E. M. asks: "What will relieve painful aching and stiffness of the joints?"

Answer: Rub the affected joints two or three times daily with triple strength Mentho-Laxene Salve. If kidneys are not active, take Balmwort tablets, also.

Miss B. C. R. asks: "Can you advise something to strengthen me and cause me to gain in weight? I am 'frail,' catch cold easily and often, and tire easily, but am not tubercular."

Answer: First see that the bowels and kidneys function properly and then begin taking both Cadomene tablets and Hypo-Nuclane Tablets—one of each, before or after meals. Weigh and note increase from the second week after starting.

R. E. S. writes: "Have been troubled the past two years with my nerves and a general weak, run-down condition of my system. Any sudden noise makes my 'nerves jump,' and if continued I feel like screaming. I do not sleep well, have very severe headaches quite often, and appetite is not keen. Have used many 'tonics,' but am getting worse."

Answer: I suggest that you begin taking Cadomene tablets, the restorative powers of which, in my opinion, are unequaled for anemic, nervous, run-down conditions.

Answer to H. M. B.: A very inexpensive and effective laxative for your children and self may be had by procuring Casca Royal Pills which are so made that they do not gripe or nauseate.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, 312 Colleve Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, has been recommending trustworthy medicines to millions of people through the medium of the newspapers, and doubtless has helped in relieving the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single individual in the world's history; and by an inexpensive method.

The medicines mentioned by him are pure and free from habit-forming drugs. They represent the combined wisdom and experience of physician and chemist.

Progressive druggists can supply them. By reading his answers to others you should find a case similar to your own.

Thousands have written him expressions of gratitude and confidence similar to the following:

LETTERS TO DR. BAKER

Mr. Robert Schultz, foreman in a large concern, 461 Eighth av., New York City, writes: "I certainly am thankful to you for the relief I got from Cadomene tablets. Have been troubled the past two years with my nerves. I live on a busy avenue and the noise of autos would startle me and at night it would not rest sound. Also had severe headaches until two months ago I started taking Cadomene. Noise does not bother me any more. I sleep sound and feel more cheerful than I did before."

* * *

Mrs. M. Cohn, 5343 Second av., Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "I have been suffering with backache, dizzy spells and weak bladder. Have taken one-half box of large size Balmwort tablets and am fine—100 per cent better. Also have taken Sulpherb tablets for pimples and there is none better. I am telling others and only too glad to do so. With best wishes, etc."

* * *

Mrs. John Key, 29 Grape st., Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "My husband was troubled with such terrible backaches he could not work. Your advice to try Balmwort tablets was followed and in less than three days he was back to work as though he had no trouble. My brother took them also, with wonderful results. As for myself, I had a terrible cough. I started taking Mentho-Laxene. With less than a half bottle taken, my cough was entirely gone. I am so thankful that I happened to read your advice and now know if others would read it, they would save many a doctor bill as I have done. Sincerely, etc."

Elizabeth R. Horton, 11 Englewood av., Brookline, Mass., writes: "I broke down three years ago under a heavy strain, but am now very much better owing to your 'Health and Beauty' book—my guide and friend, and I bless you for it every day. I hope you may live many years to continue your good work—a blessing to humanity, etc."

* * *

Mary Westphal, 401 Second st., Peoria, Ill., writes: "A lady friend told me about your wonderful Minyol hair tonic she has been using. I was discouraged, but began using it and now I have no more dandruff and the sores on my scalp are all healed and my scalp is just as clean and nice as can be. I wish to thank you for such a wonderful cure. It is wonderful and the only thing that ever helped me, etc."

* * *

Thos. Kenney, 1881 East 20th st., Cleveland, O., writes: "Your Health and Beauty Book is both educational and very instructive. Having been a sufferer from stomach trouble for over a year, I noticed in the Sunday Plain Dealer about your wonderful medicines. After taking 3 boxes of your Tripeptine tablets I find that I am on the right road once more. Able to eat most anything. And I also want to say that Cadomene tablets are great and wonderful for nervous, rundown condition I was in. They made me well and strong again. Respty., etc."

Miss Helen Lynch, Box 134, Quinebang, Conn., writes: "I am a young girl and at present going to high school. Have always been troubled with colds and this year it developed into bronchitis. I took many kinds of medicine, but my cough could not be stopped. Reading many of the letters in the paper, mother bought a bottle of Mentho-Laxene. After taking two bottles my cough went away and the terrible pains in my right side left and I can stand straight now and feel well."

Information: The medical and toilet articles recommended by Dr. Baker can be procured at local druggists.

INCOME TAX RULINGS FOR OWNERS OF AUTOS

Deductions Allowed When Cars Are Used Wholly or Partly for Business.

Maintenance and operation cost of automobiles may be deducted in making out Federal income tax returns if cars are used wholly for business purposes, and a prorated deduction is permissible if cars are used partly for business.

In view of frequent inquiries, the following statement is issued by Collector of Internal Revenue Hellmich for the guidance of owners:

"Such cost—for garage bills, gasoline, repairs, etc.—may be deducted as a business expense when an automobile is used wholly for business purposes, or in trade, profession or farming. When used partly for such purposes and partly for the pleasure or convenience of the taxpayer and his family, the cost may be prorated and that part attributable to business or the other pursuits mentioned deducted as a business expense.

Depreciation Ruling.

"The same rule applies with regard to the deduction for depreciation, which is allowed when an automobile is used wholly in business, trade, profession or farming, and must be apportioned accordingly when used partly for such purposes and partly for pleasure. If an automobile is used almost exclusively for pleasure, a deduction for depreciation is not allowed.

"The purchase price of an automobile, even when used wholly in business, cannot be deducted from gross income. It is a capital expenditure, deduction of which is expressly disallowed by the revenue act. The 5 per cent tax which attaches to the sale of an automobile cannot be deducted by the purchaser, because it is a tax levied on the sale by the manufacturer and must be returned and paid by him. The manufacturer may reimburse himself in the amount of the tax by agreement with the purchaser, in manner prescribed by Treasury regulations. So far as the purchaser is concerned, the tax is a part of the cost to him of the automobile. The manufacturer may not deduct the tax in his return, unless the amount is included in his gross income.

License Fee Deductible.

"An automobile license fee is regarded as a tax and may be deducted whether the automobile is used for business or for pleasure or convenience.

"In the event of a collision between a truck and an automobile used for pleasure or convenience, the owner of the truck may claim a deduction for damages, provided the truck was being used for business at the time of the collision. No deduction is allowed the owner of the automobile, because it was not being used for business purposes. Amounts expended by owners of automobiles used for pleasure or convenience in repairing damages thereto caused by negligent operation do not constitute deductible losses.

"Taxpayers are advised not to delay in the filing of their returns. To do so results in confusion and congestion during the closing days of the filing period, which ends at midnight of March 15."

JOINT-EASE For Stiff, Swollen Joints

Rheumatic or Otherwise

Says: "When Joint-Ease Gets in—Joint Agony Gets Out."

It was a high-class pharmacist who saw prescription after prescription fail to help hundreds of his customers to get rid of rheumatic swellings and stiff inflamed joints.

And it was this same man who asserted that a remedy could and would be compounded that would make creaky, swollen, tormented joints work with just as much smoothness as they ever did.

Now this prescription, rightly named Joint-Ease, after being tested successfully on many obstinate cases, is offered through progressive pharmacists to the millions of people who suffer from ailing joints that need limbering up.

Swollen, twingy, inflamed, stiff, pain-tormented joints are usually caused by rheumatism, but whatever the cause, Joint-Ease soaks right in, through skin and flesh and gets right to and corrects the trouble at its source.

Remember Joint-Ease is for ailments of the joints, whether in ankle, knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, spine or finger, and when you rub it on, you may expect speedy and gratifying results.

It is now on sale at all druggists and everywhere for 60 cents a tube.

WHEN Leo Lesser, town-builder of Tunica and master developer of the Mississippi Delta, failed for a million dollars 11 years ago and fled from the disaster that was overwhelming him, he vowed that he would be as one dead, to wife and other kin and the friends who had trusted him and the world that had marveled at him, until his name was cleared.

It came to light that, fighting to avert the crash that threatened, he had done wrong, hoping to ride out the storm and make a sure harbor and set all things to right. He was indicted, at Memphis and here, and through the years he was a fugitive, under a false name, as silent to his wife as if the grave had claimed him, until the charges at Memphis had been dismissed a year ago, and it seemed that the charge here would likewise be dropped.

He wrote to his wife then, in expectation of speedily being reunited with her. But there was a hitch. He came back to Memphis and his wife, at Senatobia, Miss., was only 37 miles away, but he refrained from going to see her or talking to her over the telephone.

He went away again, but he returned last week, after 600 citizens of this town and

TUNICA, Miss., Feb. 9.

WHEN Leo Lesser, town-builder of Tunica and master developer of the Mississippi Delta, failed for a million dollars 11 years ago and fled from the disaster that was overwhelming him, he vowed that he would be as one dead, to wife and other kin and the friends who had trusted him and the world that had marveled at him, until his name was cleared.

It came to light that, fighting to avert the crash that threatened, he had done wrong, hoping to ride out the storm and make a snug harbor and set all things to right. He was indicted, at Memphis and here, and through the years he was a fugitive, under a false name, as silent to his wife as if the grave had claimed him, until the charges at Memphis had been dismissed a year ago, and it seemed that the charge here would likewise be dropped.

He wrote to his wife then, in expectation of speedily being reunited with her. But there was a hitch. He came back to Memphis and his wife, at Senatobia, Miss., was only 37 miles away, but he refrained from going to see her or talking to her over the telephone.

He went away again, but he returned last week, after 600 citizens of this town and county had petitioned the Court to dismiss the remaining charge against him. It was dismissed and Leo Lesser, as one born again, was welcomed back by his townsmen, some of whom he had wronged, but all of whom he had helped, and then hastened to Senatobia to the wife, who was waiting for him there.

Delta Country His Land of Promise

When Leo Lesser was a child, living near Coldwater, in the northern part of Tate County, back of the hills that form the Delta's eastern border, he knew what poverty was. The Delta, vast cotton fields dotted with "darkies'" cabins, was his land of promise. He came to Tunica when the population was 14, and after a while he opened a little general store for the accommodation of the 14 and the planters round about and the darkies from the plantation cabins. That was 34 years ago, when he was 23 years old.

But cotton is king in the Delta and merchants are its subjects, so Lesser turned to the land. On a small plantation he laid the foundation for an amazing industrial and commercial edifice which crumbled only because his vision overleaped discretion.

He increased his holdings until he owned 2000 acres, and prior to the failure 11 years ago he was operating 11 plantations, under ownership and leasehold. He believed in Tunica and dedicated himself to building it up. Stores and dwellings were needed. He bought lots and built what was required. He financed men who wanted to start in business and kept them from failing when times were hard. Performing at first the functions of a private banker, to meet the exigencies of rapid community growth, there came a time when a bank was a necessity. He organized it and established it and became its president.

Four or five years after he cast his lot with Tunica, he married Miss Della Hope of Oxford, Miss., who had come to Tunica to teach school.

Took Partner in Cotton Business

By and by, with increasing production from the Lesser plantations, a company was needed in Memphis to handle the cotton. Lesser took in with him J. A. Ely, who had had experience in the wholesale grocery business, and formed the Lesser-Ely Cotton Co. Lesser financed the business and Ely conducted it.

Lesser had two faults which jeopardized his fast-mounting success. He was too generous and too prone to overreach. Both were calculated to lead to greater faults, as in fact they did. Money to him was not a thing to be coveted for its own sake. It was a medium for building up industry and transacting business. So if a farmer needed a thousand dollars to carry on, Lesser loaned it to him as readily as he would have loaned a plow, the idea being that money, like a plow, was utilitarian. Like as not a note was all that he required. If security was offered he gave it only casual scrutiny. So it came to pass that, from time to time, he helped nearly everybody in Tunica and the surrounding country with the same free-handedness that one neighbor loans to another the utensils of daily use.

Indulgent to a fault with those who owed him, he was punctilious to the dot in matters of his own financial obligations. It was his boast that no claim against him was ever past due. On the day that his promise to pay came due he paid. It might be that the next day he would borrow back what he had paid, but that was another matter.

Confidence Won by Punctuality

His punctuality won for him the complete confidence of the Memphis bankers. Prior to the crash he had a credit of $100,000 at one bank, $100,000 to another, $50,000 at another and so on down the line. His collateral, perhaps, was not always scrutinized as carefully as prudent banking dictates.

But viewing money as a utility, as he did in his dealings with those to whom he loaned, it was natural that he came to view it in the same way in his dealings with those from whom he borrowed. He was doing things on a big scale. He could not afford to be hampered by lack of money. To be hampered was to hazard great interests which involved not only himself but many whose welfare was bound up in his.

The money that he needed today he would return tomorrow. So nobody would be harmed if he capitalized the confidence that he possessed in such unique measure and obtained the money that he needed by an expedient which would be deemed dishonest if the purpose was to obtain money for its own sake.

Reasoning somewhat in that fashion, it would seem, he contrived to get money in various irregular ways, always expecting to rectify the irregularity by prompt restitution, but not always succeeding in doing so. The same old story, trying to get out and getting in deeper.

The main street in the town of Tunica, Miss., which Lesser developed from a settlement of 14 residents to a prosperous municipality. The cross indicates the site of his bank, which closed its doors when he fled.

Then the Arkansas Levee Broke

At that, he probably would have come through all right if things had turned out as he expected they would. But there came a time when things did not turn out that way. And, although he is believed to have been solvent, he had violated the rules of safe financing and the crash came.

He had gone on a large scale into the business of "furnishing" plantation owners in Mississippi and Arkansas, supplying them with what they needed against the harvest time. He had something like a hundred thousand dollars at stake behind the Arkansas levee. A flood came. If the levee had held all would have been well. But the levee broke.

Lesser had a credit of $100,000 with the Mercantile Bank at Memphis. He had drawn $50,000. He went to Hunter Raine, president of the bank, and said he needed the other $50,000. Hunter Raine was sorry, but his board of directors had instructed him that unless Lesser would do all his banking with the Mercantile it would prefer not to continue extending credit to him.

Lesser said he had been doing business with the other banks ever since he had been in business and he could not leave them now. Very well, said Hunter Raine, that was how the directors felt about it.

"I suppose then," said Lesser, "you want me to take up the $50,000 paper which you now hold."

Raine said yes, he would be glad if Mr. Lesser would.

Lesser wrote a check for $50,000 and took his collateral and walked out.

Mercantile Started the Trouble

Six months later Raine called his directors together and told them he was short $1,091,000. He served terms in the State and Federal prisons and has since died.

So that, it seems, was why Raine wanted all of Lesser's business. The Lesser account would have helped him continue covering up his own shortage.

But it quickly became known in banking circles that the Mercantile had refused to extend Lesser further credit.

Lesser went to the First National. On the Discount Committee were two men who had confidence in him and one who was a competitor of Lesser and indisposed to grant him any special favors. Lesser had always been able to get what he wanted through his two friends on the committee. He went now to the First National for $50,000. But word of the Mercantile's action had come and one of his friends wavered and the loan was refused.

Lesser bundled up a lot of collateral and shipped it off to a New Orleans bank and asked for a loan of $100,000. Word came back that the bank had decided not to make any more loans outside of its territory. Lesser offered his Hope plantation, worth $75,000, for $50,000. Elias Porter agreed to buy it, but an unexpected demand upon his resources made it inexpedient for him to carry the deal through.

His Own Bank Closed

It was a new experience for Lesser, who had always been able to get all the money that he wanted. It threw him into a panic. On April 25, 1913, at 10 a. m., he said he was going to South Memphis to buy some mules. He walked out of the office and disappeared.

The Bank of Tunica closed its doors. The Bank of Helena, Ark., which carried a great deal of Lesser's paper, did the same. Involuntary bankruptcy proceedings followed against Lesser and the cotton company.

Under the bankruptcy proceeding dividends of 36.8 per cent were paid. Secured obligations brought the total settlement up to 60 per cent. The cost of winding up the affairs of Lesser and the company was more than $100,000. Assets were sacrificed, including the plantations and the 117 pieces of property which he owned in Tunica.

Before the crash Lesser had given up his handsome residence in Tunica and moved to a finer one in Memphis. Mrs. Lesser, with nothing but her diamonds and her furniture saved from the wreck, went back to teaching and is now principal of the grammar school at Senatobia. By the death of her brother, Dr. Frank L. Hope, she, a couple of years ago, came into possession of a fortune of more than $100,000, but chose to continue her work.

Lesser, when he left Memphis, had $160 in his pocket. He went first to Jackson and made his way from there to Montreal. He worked for a while as a clerk and then bought a bankrupt stock and made a little stake. The war came on and he set up a canteen across the road from an army camp. He wanted to return to the States, but wartime passport regulations made it difficult. His opportunity came when a wealthy English couple sought a chauffeur to drive them through the States. He obtained the job and in that capacity crossed the border without undue questioning. On the Pacific Coast he gave up his chauffeur job and became a traveler for a hosiery house.

A year ago he communicated with Grover N. McCormick, a Memphis attorney. McCormick procured the dismissal of the indictments there. Lesser returned to Memphis, but nobody except McCormick knew of his presence.

Let Reunion Wait on Vindication

It was after the dismissal of the indictments and they were sitting in McCormick's office.

"Do you want to call up your wife?" asked McCormick.

"No," said Lesser, "not until the case at Tunica is disposed of and I can again take up my own name."

For the same reason he did not go to see her, although Senatobia is little more than an hour's ride from Memphis. He wrote to her, though, and told her he hoped soon to be able to rejoin her.

Mrs. Lesser had never doubted that her husband would return. She had acted in legal matters in that confidence, refusing to act on the presumption that he might be dead.

Lesser left Memphis and McCormick tried to have the Tunica indictment nolle prossed. But an election was coming on and the Prosecuting Attorney, seeking re-election, was disinclined to take an action which, he thought, might cause him embarrassment. For one reason or another, he was not elected.

Recently McCormick took it up with John T. Smith of Cleveland, the present Prosecuting Attorney. Smith was willing to act, but he preferred to have some expression of the community's wishes in the matter. A petition was suggested. One was prepared and several of Lesser's old friends and neighbors started out for signers. They canvassed the town and the plantations along the graveled roads and obtained 600 signatures. Only three

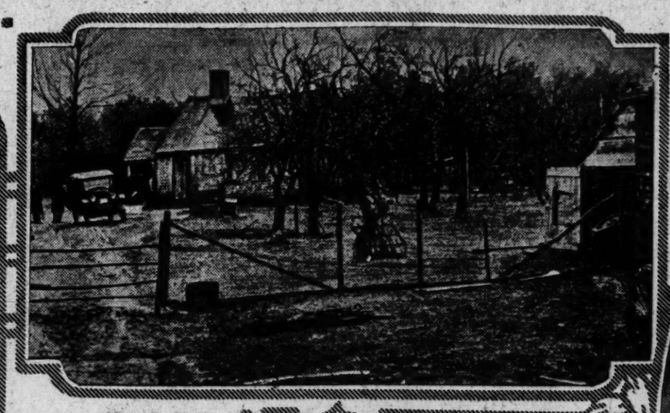
Opposes Free Love but Finds Happiness in Toil on Farm, Although She Might Have Been Millionaires



At the left is Charles Garland, the eccentric "philosopher" of "April Farm," who spurns riches and conventions for primitive life with his two soul mates on a 30-acre tract near North Carver, Mass. In the center are scenes in his free love camp. In spite of his declared aversion to the comforts of modern civilization, he boasts a second-hand automobile, shown in the picture above. Below he is seen in the role of a milkman. Neighbors and townspeople come almost daily to buy the dairy products of his farm. At the extreme right is Mrs. Mary Garland, his wife, who has overcome her abhorrence of soul mates sufficiently to permit her to find happiness in living among them with her husband.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Feb. 9.

IN the four years since Charles Garland gave away his $1,000,000 inheritance and retired to the seclusion of his "April Farm," near North Carver, there have been mates and mates to walk by his side and lend him inspiration in the solitudes of his celebrated "free love camp."

"Soul mates" have put aside worldly things and have toiled barefoot with the eccentric "philosopher" in search of "perfect understanding." "Mental mates" have sawed wood and performed the menial duties of farm laborers in order to "work out their problems" with their teacher. Some of these have gained the experience or spiritual uplift or whatever it was they sought and have gone their separate ways. Others, however, have remained, and, having remained, are taking occasion to get acquainted with the new "mate" who has just arrived to live among them.

This new mate, be it said, occupies a status somewhat strange and unconventional—unconventional for April Farm, that is. For she is a legal mate, and it is to be feared that attention to legality in connubial alliances has not been one of April Farm's virtues in the past. She believes in marriage, in having large families and in upholding other such "old-fashioned" institutions. In fact, she isn't quite what the farm's inhabitants have been disposed to call a mate at all. She is a wife—the one Garland married legally six years ago when he was a student at Harvard. With her three children she lives in the bungalow which he has built for her coming and is doing her share of the farm chores while her husband—it grates upon his hypersensitive soul to be called a husband—works to support his enlarged family by sawing wood for the neighbors at $1.25 a cord.

Sees Duty in Sticking by Husband

When explanations are sought, explanations of why Mrs. Mary Garland has put aside her vow never to live among her husband's mates and share him with them, she is not averse to giving them. It is a wife's duty, she asserts, to stay by the man she married in spite of even such difficulties as a partnership presents. If she can have him alone, so much the better. If she can't, she sees it no less an obligation to stick to him while he lives the kind of life he chooses. And she is happy, she declares, on April Farm. How long she will stay there she isn't prepared to say. Perhaps all winter, perhaps always, but while she does stay she will live on the money her husband earns by the sweat of his brow. That will mean no furs, no jewels, no silks, no maids—all luxuries to which she has been accustomed since childhood—but she has promised and, although she has $200,000 or so of her own, she isn't going to humiliate Garland by making use of it.

"Every woman can't be a rich man's wife," she says, and that declaration is a triumph for the theories of her fortune-dodging husband, whose greatest wish is to be known to the world as a poor man.

This is not the first time that Mrs. Garland has tried the primitive life at the sequestered farm. She tried it two years ago. At first she found it sufferable enough. She even stood staunchly behind her husband when he stumped the universe by spurning his share of the Garland millions. Then his "soul mates" began to assemble and she found it "abhorrent." She pulled up stakes and went back to her wealthy parents at Dedham, and Garland, having found "a newer and freer love" in Lillian Conrad, the Boston art student, saw nothing objectionable in her departure. It is recalled that he expressed himself about the matter in this wise:

"My feeling for my wife is dead. She has given me all that she has to give. When I married her I needed what she could give me. I prized in her those qualities which exalted and inspired me. There came a time when this ceased. It was then time to seek another and greater companionship. This I have found with Lillian Conrad. She gives me the deepest, most profound inspiration. She is my mate in both a physical and a mental sense."

And so began the sojourns of "soul mates" at April Farm, and they have continued steadily since.

Mates Frustrated Reconciliations

In spite of Mrs. Garland's abhorrence of free love, however, there has been brief reconciliations from time to time since the Conrad incident—Garland refers to past associations with soul mates as incidents. Two of the three Garland children have been born since the first separation, and twice there have been well-founded reports that the Garlands would take up their residence together again; then a new soul mate would come along and the reconciliation would be all off. At last, it seems, the wife's love for the man who had elected to be poor when he might have been rich proved too strong, and she is back. Without even confiding in her most intimate friends, she quietly divorced herself from society, bade farewell to her elaborate home in Dedham and, with her three children, one only a year old, came to North Carver and installed herself in the tiny four-room bungalow erected as a special mark of consideration for her by her husband who had found the shanty and the "green hen coop" good enough for himself and his soulmates.

When a correspondent journeyed to the farm the other day to see how her second experiment was succeeding he found Mrs. Garland, the daughter of luxury, bending over a washtub in the kitchen of the bungalow. Her house dress of plain material was spattered with suds and her face was flushed from the unaccustomed labor. It was noted with some interest, however, that in spite of April Farm's penchant for living close to the soil, she was not attired for that personal contact with it which bare feet afford. A remark ventured on this departure from mately custom brought a decisive response.

No Bare Feet or Free Love for Her

"No, I draw the line there," she told the reporter. "I am willing to live on my husband's wages, to do the housework and get along with simple clothing, but I won't go without shoes. And you can tell the world I don't believe in free love either. I know all about washing and bringing up children and what not, but about free love—well, if you want to know about that you had better ask the people in the shanty out there. In this house we believe in marriage," she added as she began to put her little son's tiny clothes through the wringer. The little son, heir to the Garland millions his father had abandoned, was cooing in the most primitive back-to-nature cradle imaginable, built of wood from the forest adjoining the camp, and a small daughter was playing in the kitchen.

"Every woman should marry and have lots of children," the mother declared as she surveyed her third child through the window. "A house without children is nothing, and a wife should be with her husband regardless of obstacles. As for washing and other housework, they are things that have to be done, and I think a woman should love her husband enough to do them for him. That's the way I feel about it and that is why I came back here."

In the shanty nearby where Garland lives and "teaches" his free-love mates, the correspondent found his two latest disciples. Both are bobbed-haired blondes, young and fairly good-looking. Alice Egerton, the "Quaker mate," was scrubbing the floor of the "beloved philosopher's" abode and Bettina Hovey was busying herself with the morning chores. Both wore plain gingham aprons and were without shoes or stockings.

Mystery of the Barefoot Blondes

Just who these girls are and where they came from, nobody seems to know precisely and they, themselves, won't tell very definitely. Their names are admittedly assumed. It is said in some quarters that Garland met them on one of his sojourns in Greenwich Village, but that is hearsay. Bettina says she is a Boston girl and Alice claims to have come from Philadelphia. They do all sorts of manual labor about the farm, saving Garland the price of a couple of hired men while they are working out their "spiritual salvation" and acquiring a better understanding of human nature, as they put it.

But if there is jealousy or resentment because of Mrs. Garland's presence in their midst it is not apparent. They are glad she has joined the colony, they say, because Garland "is not so sad now." They visit her in the bungalow and all agree on everything but one point. That is free love. Mrs. Garland feels that they will have to get along without her support in this, and it appears they are getting along with little difficulty.

Of course, the correspondent's visit to the camp wasn't complete until he had got a look at Garland, too. He got it. Garland was outside getting ready for his day's labor on a neighbor's wood pile. Unshaven, unkempt, in the dirtiest and roughest of corduroys and oldest red sweater, the 27-year-old theorist who had found it intolerable to enjoy riches earned by others, was a picture that perhaps his master, Tolstoy, would have enjoyed.

He is still agreeable and frank, as he was when reporters used to question him about his soul mates and his discarded wealth. According to his view, there is no reason in the world why he cannot live his own life as he chooses in his secluded colony among his mates and his wife, if she cares to share his humble quarters with him. He sees nothing at all unusual in his actions, and asserts, as before his belief that the whole universe would be better off if men and women went in for his simple way of supporting themselves in the country by their own efforts. He finds work as a wood chopper plentiful and is able to make a little money besides from his live-stock, which consists of a few cows and about 100 chickens. Neighbors and the townspeople come regularly to purchase milk, eggs and vegetables, which are the chief products of his 30-acre tract.

Probably there is not in the whole country another farmer of 30 acres who attracts as much public notice as does Garland. As will be remembered, he first acquired notoriety in November of 1920 when administrators, settling up the estate of his father, the late James A. Garland, found the young man flatly refusing to have anything to do with his share, which totaled considerably above a million. At first he refused even to accept it with a view to giving it away again. Mere handling of wealth he had not earned, he insisted, was contaminating.

"I haven't the slightest interest in what becomes of the money," he told the administrators who sought to reason with him. "If the trustees who have it devote it to their own uses I shall not protest. I would no more accept the inheritance of my father than you would accept stolen cattle. It is against the teachings of Christ and against my moral beliefs. The money is not mine; I did nothing to earn it. My belief came to me as no sudden inspiration. It has been forming for years and I have realized the hollowness of wealth. I realized long ago that I would be better off without the money if I could make my moral beliefs master of my desire for luxury."

Later He Changed His Mind

And having thus stated his position, the penniless millionaire stuck to it for months. Some time later there was a slight modification in his views. Whether it was consideration for his wife and children or the protests of the trustees at being left with his responsibilities on their hands that effected the change was not made clear, but, anyway, he finally decided to accept the bequest. Then he promptly got rid of it. A sum of $200,000 was settled upon his wife and children and the remainder, amounting to about $800,000 after taxes and debts had been paid, was placed in the hands of a group of Greenwich Village liberal thinkers who incorporated as the "American Fund for Public Service" for the purpose of receiving it. Among them was Roger N. Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union. The money, it was announced, would be distributed among radical publications, educational campaigns for new ideas, experimental educational institutions and boards of research in fields of industry and economics. Two thousand dollars of the fund was later voted to the relief of destitute West Virginia miners. As a general thing, however, the directors of the fund avoided general strike relief as they did social service and charitable agencies.

It was not long after Garland had put aside his wealth and retired to the country that his free love career began, and with it the public mention which such careers customarily provoke. Lillian Conrad, the art student and former secretary to his mother, came out to join him and, as she put it, to "love and live." Her own statements, made from time to time as scandalized observers threatened punitive expeditions against the camp, perhaps best explain what she understood by "loving and living."

"Love," she declared, "is not necessary during. It is only one stage of growth. Charles Garland and I are everything to each other. Tomorrow we may change and I feel the need of another woman. She inhibited remarkable foresight in that. In other words we may have done everything possible for each other; then it is time to go on to someone else. For mental insatiable to read more than one book, we see more than one picture, hear more than one piece of music. We do not confine ourselves to just one source of pleasure and help. In love it seems to me the same."

Defied the World to Move Her

Miss Conrad was a resolute free lover. She defended her philosophy by defying the whole world to move me from my course. They could put her in chains or prison, but they would never master her desire to stick to Charles Garland "as long as he needs me." She was sorry to incur the misunderstanding of the world and all that, but her first duty was to the man she loved.

"The world looks upon me as a siren, a vampire, who has brought ruin to Charles Garland, misery to his wife and shame to herself. They say I used my wiles to take him away from his wife, but in spite of the charges, I feel I cannot swerve from my course. There are plenty of things the world can do to us. It can arrest us. Sometimes we have divinely happy moments together and we have wondered what the police would do if they broke in on us. But we have always took our chance.

"I am only doing openly and sincerely many of my judges do secretly and with a cloak of hypocrisy. I have lived with Charles Garland as his wife because I see no reason for it. The marriage vow has no meaning for me. I set no value on a legal bond which enables people to belong to each other whether they gain spirituality by it or not. Spirituality depends on contact with many people and the more intimate the contact, the deeper the knowledge gained."

Then Came the "Mental Mate"

However much Miss Conrad felt that Garland needed her, she must have seen the writing on the wall when she was taking up with another woman succeeding her in his affections. Another woman did. But to the successor insisted that there would be "nothing of a romantic nature about it" as far as she was concerned. Garland, it seems,

IN Elmwood Cemetery in Birmingham, Ala., stands a marble monument in the form of a weeping woman. The stone was erected by W. P. G. Harding, former Governor of the National Federal Reserve Bank, now Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, to the memory of his wife, Amanda Moore Harding, who shot herself at her home in Birmingham nearly 14 years ago, in what appeared to be a suicide agreement with the man she loved but could not marry because they both already were married.

Soon another stone will stand in the Harding lot in Elmwood Cemetery, erected by Mr. Harding to the memory of his daughter Margaret, who shot herself last week at his home in Boston half an hour after reading the announcement of the engagement to another woman of the man whom friends say she loved. Margaret's body is to be taken to Birmingham to rest beside that of her mother, it is said.

What strange strain in the blood of mother and daughter brought them thus together in death?

Mrs. Harding was a famous Southern beauty, whose father, Sydenham Moore, moved from Eutaw, Ala., to Birmingham in the '80s. Immediately after her graduation in 1895 from Pollock-Steven, a fashionable girls' school in Birmingham, Miss Moore was married, at the age of 18, to Harding, who then was a high official in the First National Bank of Birmingham. Three children were born to them. Young Mrs. Harding was passionately fond of society. Her beauty and winning personality, as well as her husband's position, opened all doors to her. She was well known in New York and Washington. Described as a "rather tall blonde with sparkling eyes," she was, at 33, gay, sensitive and high-strung, and she loved the flying success... of parties and pleasures and play. Her husband, who was considerably older, was graver and more serious. He preferred the financial to the society column of the paper, and found more fun in engineering a difficult financial transaction than in dancing.

Harding's Tragic Home-Coming

Among the friends in Mrs. Harding's circle was Guy R. Johnson, Birmingham business man and clubman. Their tastes were similar, and they often were at the same places. John frequently visited the Harding home also, for he was an intimate friend of Harding as well as his wife. He, too, was married and had three sons.

Was Margaret Harding's Suicide, Like Her Mother's, the Result of a Hopeless Love?

Strange Parallel in Tragedies of Girl and Parent Who Found Their Romances Impossible

Both Ended Their Lives With a Bullet When Fate Thwarted Their Affections—Father, Prostrated by Death of His Youngest Daughter 14 Years After That of His Wife, Who Loved Another Man, Declares It Was the Swift Pace of Washington Society, With Cigarettes, Dances and Gay Parties, That Killed Margaret, But Her Friends Assert Her Heart Was Broken When Stanley Hawkes' Engagement to Another Woman Was Announced.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.

Elmwood Cemetery in Birmingham, Ala., ands a marble monument in the form of weeping woman. The stone was erected W. P. G. Harding, former Governor of the of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, the memory of his wife, Amanda Moore rding, who shot herself at her home in mingham nearly 14 years ago, in what ap-ared to be a suicide agreement with the she loved but could not marry because both already were married.

Soon another stone will stand in the Hard-lot in Elmwood Cemetery, erected by Mr. rding to the memory of his daughter Mar-et, who shot herself last week at his home Boston half an hour after reading the an-ncement of the engagement to another an of the man whom friends say she d. Margaret's body is to be taken to Bir-gham to rest beside that of her mother, is said.

What strange strain in the blood of mother daughter brought them thus together in ath?

Mrs. Harding was a famous Southern ty, whose father, Sydenham Moore, ved from Eutaw, Ala., to Birmingham in the '80s. Immediately after her graduation m 1895 from Pollock-Steven, a fashionable ls' school in Birmingham, Miss Moore was rried, at the age of 18, to Harding, who was a high official in the First National nk of Birmingham. Three children were rn to them. Young Mrs. Harding was pas-onately fond of society. Her beauty and aining personality, as well as her husband's sition, opened all doors to her. She was ll known in New York and Washington. scribed as a "rather tall blonde with spar-ing eyes," she was, at 33, gay, sensitive and gh-strung, and she loved the flying succes-n of parties and pleasures and play. Her sband, who was considerably older, was ver and more serious. He preferred the ancial to the society column of the papers and found more fun in engineering a diffi-lt financial transaction than in dancing.

Harding's Tragic Home-Coming

mong the friends in Mrs. Harding's circle re Guy R. Johnson, Birmingham business and clubman. Their tastes were similar, d they often were at the same places. John-n frequently visited the Harding home also, he was an intimate friend of Harding as well as his wife. He, too, was married and d three sons.

On June 22, 1910, Mr. Harding and the st little girl, Elizabeth, were on their way home from a visit to Europe. They were on the Atlantic and were to arrive at Savannah the next day. Mrs. Harding told the old negro mammy, Maria, that she was going to bathe and lie down a while. She dressed the two younger children, Alice and Margaret, prettily, kissed them and sent them to play at a neighbor's house.

Late in the afternoon, Maria heard a shot, and rushed to her mistress' room. Mrs. Harding was lying on the floor, dead, with a bullet wound in her breast and a revolver by her side.

The other half of the tragedy has been told in two different ways. They amount to the same thing in the end. According to one, Johnson was visiting a business acquaintance downtown when he heard what had happened. He went to his home and his room and shot himself within 20 minutes after Mrs. Harding had ended her life. He died early next morning.

According to the other story, Johnson and Mrs. Harding had had an interview in the morning of June 22, in the course of which they agreed to die at the same moment. Johnson had arranged to send her a revolver and to keep one like it himself. The shots were to be fired at exactly 4:15 o'clock in the afternoon. Early in the afternoon, it is said, Johnson's chauffeur delivered a package to the Harding home, which it was afterward learned contained the revolver. At the appointed time, Mrs. Harding carried out her part of the agreement. As old Mammy Maria ran into the room, the telephone rang and Johnson's voice demanded, "Let me speak to Mrs. Harding quick!"

"You can't," he was told. "She is dead."

"My heavens, she has done it!" cried the voice in the telephone.

Then Johnson Ended His Life

A moment later, in the Johnson home, Johnson sent a bullet into his own heart. He lived long enough to tell his brother of his devotion to Mrs. Harding and to ask him to let it be known that she was the best of women and their relations were blameless.

His last words are said to have been, "Mrs. Harding is a pure and noble woman." He is also said to have intimated that false stories heard about Birmingham concerning their association were as instrumental as their hopeless infatuation in causing their suicide. Johnson's chauffeur told of driving the two on automobile rides during Harding's absence and their names had been linked occasionally in comment, but no definite scandal had ever attached to their love affair. Mrs. Johnson also defended her husband's memory and denied the report that discoveries made by her caused the double tragedy.

At the left and above are two recent photographs of Miss Margaret Harding, who followed her mother to a suicide's grave after her unhappy romance with Stanley Hawkes. At the right above is her father, W. P. G. Harding, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, who blames the wild night life of the national capital for his daughter's act. At the extreme right is Mrs. Amanda Moore Harding, the girl's mother, who carried out a suicide pact with Guy R. Johnson (below) 14 years ago, when the two realized that their mutual infatuation was hopeless. Johnson, who was also married, ended his life a few minutes after he heard of Mrs. Harding's death.

Clenched in Mrs. Harding's hand were found five notes which she had written just before her death. Two of them were addressed to her husband, one each to her father and mother, and the fifth to a friend in Montgomery, Ala. They were delivered to the addressees without being opened by the authorities and their contents were learned by the public.

The feeling of horror which the tragedies inspired in Birmingham was followed by pity, then by silence. The monument with the figure of the weeping woman rose in the cemetery and Mr. Harding and his children presently went to Washington where he became Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank.

Girls Became Belles of Capital

The little girls grew up, lovely and attractive. Elizabeth, a belle in Washington society, married Frederick H. Prince Jr., a young aviator, formerly of the Lafayette Escadrille, in 1917, a month after they became acquainted. Last March she obtained a divorce from him in Paris, and it was reported she and Eugene Van Rensselaer Thayer, former president of the Chase National Bank of New York City, whose wife had been given a divorce in Paris on the same day, had eloped.

Harding and Thayer denied this, however. Later both Thayer and Mrs. Prince returned to America. They were married in Boston last June.

Alice became Mrs. Robert Pell of Paris.

Margaret, meanwhile, had grown to be a beauty almost more dazzling than her mother. She was sensitive and high-strung, like her mother, too. Her debut, in December, 1918, was an event of importance. She was chatelaine of her father's house and she plunged into the whirl of the Washington social pace with an eager enjoyment that was not willing to let a moment go unfilled. Dances, theater parties, late suppers, cigarettes, functions at the White House—even Cabinet dinners, not ordinarily considered the most exhilarating of events—she loved them all, and she was not willing to miss any of them. She is said to have been one of the most popular girls who ever made a Washington debut.

Her closest friends were Ailsa Mellon, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury; Anna Hamlin, daughter of Charles S. Hamlin, member of the Federal Reserve Board, and Mrs. George A. Garrett, a prominent young matron in the diplomatic set.

Her father saw that his "baby daughter's" health was failing under the strain, he said last week, and he was anxious about her. Whether he thought sometimes of the young wife who had so loved gayety, no one knows; at least, he was unwilling to forbid Margaret the pleasures she craved, though he did remonstrate with her, and when they went to Boston to live he wished her to take up the sober responsibilities of the mistress of a Boston home.

One More Visit to Washington

She promised she would do that if she might have one more visit to Washington.

Two things, apparently, Margaret Harding had concealed from the sober, serious father who loved her but understood stocks and bonds better than he did girls. One was that her health was so seriously affected that she had had several hemorrhages and the other that she loved Stanley Hawkes.

Stanley Hawkes is Acting Chief of the Division of Current Affairs in the State Department at Washington, a rising young man, according to diplomatic circles. He is said to be slated for a foreign post and may be sent as Third Secretary to the Ambassador in Italy. Margaret Harding's intimate friends say frankly that she was deeply in love with young Hawkes.

There was no actual engagement, they say, but they believe there was an understanding between them. They think it was the knowledge that Hawkes' affections were turning toward Miss Margaret Baldwin, sister of the wife of one of the Secretaries of the Department of State, who lives in Italy but had been visiting her sister in Washington, that brought Margaret Harding to Washington again.

At any rate, she went. She was the guest of Anna Hamlin and, if the pace had been fast before, it was furious now.

Harding has declared that "it is incorrect to say that Hawkes was on terms of close friendship with our family." But one of the girl friends who went with Margaret Harding to the station the day she went back to Boston says she left with a broken heart as well as a wrecked body.

Her father was startled when he saw her, but she assured him she was "all right," and begged him to go on to Washington as he had intended, and he left her, somewhat reluctantly.

The papers that day carried the formal announcement of Stanley Hawkes' engagement to Miss Baldwin. Margaret took them to her room and read them. Then she wrote a letter, sealed it and addressed it to Stanley Hawkes and put a special delivery stamp on it. Then she took her father's revolver and shot a bullet into her breast—just as her mother had done.

Immediately upon receiving the letter, which is understood to have contained congratulations on his engagement, Hawkes took the first train for Boston. He called the Harding home on the telephone. The girl's father answered.

"I told him he could go back to Washington," the latter said, "that there was nothing he could do here."

Another note left to the father contained the girl's only explanation of her act. It read:

"You don't know how I am suffering. Please forgive me for what I have done; I cannot stand it any longer. Good-by, love.

"MARGARET."

Harding has asserted that it was the Washington social pace that killed his little girl, and there has been admission from several quarters that the younger society set at the capital is traveling at a rate that is no longer a laughing matter. Wild parties at the most popular cafes and clubs—where everybody smokes more than is good for him—or her—and the main business of the evening is disregarding the prohibition law—are nightly affairs.

persons refused to sign. Probably, if the dirt roads had not been hub-deep in mud, a thousand signatures could have been obtained in the county.

Met by Delegation of Citizens

Lesser returned to Memphis and it was arranged that last Tuesday he should present himself in court for the clearing of his name. Mayor R. L. Whitington and a delegation of the leading men of the community met the train and greeted Lesser as he stepped off at the Tunica station.

The loungers recognized him and the word passed that Lesser was back. They came from every direction, the friends of other days, and shook his hand and told him they were glad he had come back and tears came to Lesser's eyes.

They went to the courthouse, hindered at every step by greetings. Judge William A. Alcorn of Clarksdale was on the bench. Prosecuting Attorney Smith halted the case that was on trial and presented the petition, stated that in his opinion it would not be possible to find a jury in the county that would convict Lesser, expressed doubt whether the indictment itself would stand if subjected to attack and asked that the case be nolle prossed.

The charge was read, and Lesser was told to stand and plead.

"Guilty or not guilty?" asked the Judge.

"Not guilty," said Lesser.

The order dismissing the case was entered. Lesser and his friends left the courtroom and the trial proceeded. Outside Lesser was warmly congratulated. He accepted the dinner invitation of Will Houston and afterward he called on a few old friends and neighbors.

He was escorted along the main business street and the negroes lounging there gathered around him, calling him "Cap'n Lesah," and grinning their pleasure when he spoke their given names and shook hands with them.

The train bore him back to Memphis. Now he was ready to call up his wife. He got her on the telephone.

"Hello, honey, I'm coming down," he said.

"I'm waiting for you," she said.

He found her waiting for him at Senatobia and they made their plans, as far as plans could be made. It was agreed that he should go back West and wind up his affairs and that she should finish out the year she contracted to serve the grammar school, and then, somewhere, they would start life anew.

had developed a need for a "mental" mate and, as before, had gone to his mother's household to fill it. His new disciple was Doris Benson, a beautiful girl who had been adopted by Mrs. James A. Garland several years before.

Miss Benson was never so outspoken about her association with Garland as the other young woman had been, so, consequently, the public never learned so much about her. Though she lived at the shanty with him and went barefoot in the most primitive fashion, it appears there still lingered a little spark of consideration for conventions, for Alice Egerton, the fair-haired "Quaker Mate," it is said, first established her connection with the farm as chaperon for Miss Benson. Eventually when Miss Benson departed with her perfect understanding gained, the erstwhile bobbed hair chaperon ascended to the status of mate—whether it was soul, mental or otherwise has not been made entirely clear.

The young woman who gives her name as Bettina Hovey and asserts a claim to Boston ancestry, was the fourth to discover that she had spiritual lessons to learn in the camp. And she is learning them along with Alice on a 50-50 basis, for Garland prides himself upon being a just man who stoops to no favoritism in his teachings.

SIMPLY CONSTRUCTED SUPERDYNE RECEIVER

Two-Tube Set With Two Stages of Audio Amplification Described.

The Superdyne Receiver.

In a recent talk, before the American Radio Relay League in Chicago, Mr. C. D. Tuska gave interesting details about the superdyne receiver—a new circuit developed by Robert S. Miner of the Tuska laboratories.

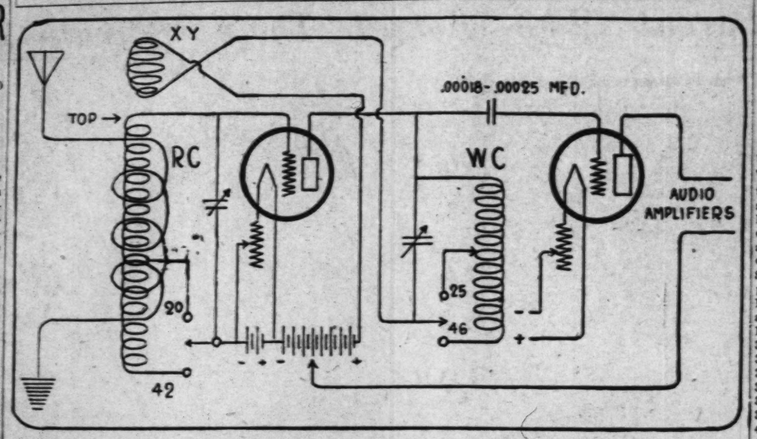
Mr. Miner, known to radio amateurs as 1RU, almost a year ago started to work on a receiver that would give results which would surpass the regenerative receiver and the many radio frequency outfits he had tested.

In seeking for this new supercircuit, he and his associates investigated all of the latest circuits and every modification of regenerative, radio frequency and other circuits about which they had information. In Mr. Miner's opinion, the only trouble with radio frequency is that it is not possible to get sufficient amplification per stage, and he decided to locate the difficulties and then to overcome them.

When the superdyne circuit was being perfected it became evident that resonant circuits must be used, but as soon as this was done the tubes started to oscillate and spoiled everything so that the investigators were in what might be called a "vicious circle." The method used to overcome this difficulty was to put in the conventional Armstrong feedback but feed the energy back in the reverse direction or negatively. The circuit was given just enough feedback to offset the positive capacity feedback of the tube. This stopped oscillation and made it possible to secure absolute resonance between the grid and the plate circuits. Not only was resonance secured, but the maximum impedence in the plate circuit was used which means the biggest voltage impulse which it can be hoped to build up.

The superdyne circuit is shown in the accompanying illustration. "RC" is the resonant circuit of the grid. "WC" is the resonant circuit of the plate while "XY" is the reverse feedback which stops oscillation. The detector is connected as shown. After it was found what the possibilities were with this circuit, experiments were made to see if it could be improved by changing the constants. All of the stages of increasing capacity and decreasing inductance as well as the reverse, were gone through. Every sort of coupling and every conceivable manner of turns ratio was tried. Hundreds of separate experiments indicated that the successful operation of the circuit depended to an extremely high degree on following dimensions carefully. Not only does this apply to instructions about sizes of wire and dimensions but in addition care must be taken not to parallel the grid and the plate wires of the radio frequency stage. These wires must be kept at right angles and as far apart as possible. If the reverse feedback coil is coupled too closely to the grid coil the capacity between the grid and plate windings exceeds the negative magnetic feedback and the set will not work.

Remarkable Results Achieved With the Superdyne



It is extremely important to avoid this trouble so care must be taken to copy exactly the specifications outlined.

The dimensions and constants of the various coils and condensers are shown in the following table. Reception on the detector has not been particularly successful, probably due in part to the capacity of the phones on the ungrounded circuit. When operating with a small indoor antenna, the filaments should be grounded and the antenna connected to the grid of the first tube, leaving out the antenna coupling turn. With this method, phones on the detector will probably be entirely satisfactory.

The maximum results can be obtained after the operator has learned how to carefully adjust the circuits, but it is not possible to get these results until one has had some experience in tuning faint signals.

The astonishing part about this outfit is that it operates without an antenna and gives signals of sufficient intensity to be heard through the use of a loud speaker. In Hartford, Conn., without the use of an antenna or loop or capacity of any sort, other than the usual ground connection, broadcast signals have been heard on a loud speaker from Chicago, Davenport, Kansas City and nearer station. Havana, Cuba, has been obtained without an outside aerial.

Desiring to compare this set with some of the sensitive sets on the market, it was recently taken to Washington and a series of tests made. First, a constant artificial source of power was set up. This was tuned on a regenerative receiver and the audibility measured around 50. With the same power, the same tubes, batteries, etc., the superdyne receiver showed an audibility of over 200. The same two outfits were tried under similar conditions with a broadcasting station as the source of power. Here the regenerative receiver showed audibility of about 60, while corresponding conditions showed the superdyne receiver to have an audibility of 10,000, which was the end of the meter.

The next test was of a more practical nature. Here the superdyne receiver under actual receiving conditions was compared with the naval six-tube universal radio frequency amplifier. The signals with the four-tube superdyne were probably three to four times louder than with the six tubes of the navy amplifier.

The last experiment was the most astonishing of all. In this test the four-tube superdyne was compared with the eight tubes on a super-hetrodyne receiver. Some of the signals on the super-hetrodyne surpassed this new circuit while in other cases the superdyne exceeded the super-hetrodyne. Taken all in all, and being very conservative, Mr. Tuska believed that the best that could be said for the super-hetrodyne was that the signals may have been slightly louder using the eight tubes than they were on the superdyne with four tubes.

In operating this circuit it has been found that it is highly desirable to adjust the plate circuit for the wave length to be received, then operate the reverse feedback coil, which has been called a "stabilizer," and the grid circuit in exactly the same manner as a regenerative receiver is operated. By carefully adjusting the reverse feedback against the positive capacity feedback astounding degrees of amplification can be gotten. It has been figured that the voltage amplification per stage probably runs in the neighborhood of 100 times. One tube of radio frequency regeneration of the old style rarely exceeds a voltage amplification of eight or nine times.

In order to simplify the operation the makers have omitted any tuned antenna circuit and simply used four turns of wire which are closely coupled to the grid circuit. This impulse excitation method of tuning seems to be sufficiently selective, probably due to the selectivity of the two resonant circuits.

Numerous attempts have been made to simplify the adjustments of the receiver, such as using fixed reverse feedback and gearing the two tuning condensers together, but this method decreases the sensitiveness of the receiver. The closed circuits do not affect each other's wave lengths, but the feedback varies with the wave length received. The reverse feedback has an appreciable effect on the grid circuit tuning. Fortunately, however, the plate circuit remains absolutely constant and may be calibrated in terms of wave lengths.

While the Tuska company expects to market complete superdyne sets, it is willing to assist amateurs building their own sets and will be glad to hear of successful efforts.

Pointers for Clear Signals.

Use a panel of good insulating material.

Avoid varnished coils.

Solder all connections.

Keep coils away from masses of metal.

Use good tube sockets.

Use coils which are insulated by air as much as possible.

Where rotating secondaries are used and on variometers use pigtailed connections.

Keep the grid lead away from the plate wire or the filament wires, particularly on the first tube.

Avoid taps to a coil if possible, but where essential so select the constants that the taps will be only on a few turns at one end.

Keep stray capacity down by locating the connecting leads to the inductances, condensers, etc., as far away from each other as possible.

An Addition Worth While.

When using a storage battery, damage from spilling acid on floor or carpets can be avoided by getting or making a small box, about three inches larger all around than the size of the battery. Paint or stain the outside to match the furniture. Paint the inside with several coats of heavy paint, or asphaltum paint, if possible. Have no open cracks. Put casters are easy-slide knobs on the bottom of the box. It will keep the battery safe, acid off the floor and afford a place to keep a receptacle for the hydrometer and a small bottle of distilled water, all together and safely.

LOCAL SIGNALS FOR CALIBRATION OF SETS

Waves of Standard Frequency to Be Transmitted for Benefit of Amateurs.

Beginning at 3 p. m. this afternoon, station 9AAL of the Radio Transmitters' Association will transmit a series of signals of scheduled frequency for the St. Louis Radio Traffic Committee, to enable the traffic officers and local amateurs to calibrate their receivers for amateur wave lengths. The St. Louis Traffic Committee is composed of four members from the Radio Transmitters' Association and four members from the St. Louis Radio Association.

3:00 to 3:16 p. m.....200 meters
3:10 to 3:16 p. m.....210 meters
3:20 to 3:26 p. m.....180 meters
3:30 to 3:36 p. m.....190 meters
3:40 to 3:46 p. m.....180 meters
3:50 to 3:56 p. m.....175 meters
4:00 to 4:06 p. m.....165 meters
4:10 to 4:16 p. m.....155 meters
4:20 to 4:26 p. m.....150 meters

The signal for calibration purposes will be "QST de 9AAL," repeated with very long dashes intervening, together with the wave length being used. Straight continuous wave for calibration purposes will be used except the initial transmission, which will be with phone.

These calibration signals are for the furtherance of the policy of the American Radio Relay League, which desires all transmitting amateurs to stay within their legal wave band, so that their signals will not interfere with broadcast listeners. E. A. Hogbin, 9COG, 5658A Cote Brilliante avenue, is secretary of the St. Louis Radio Traffic Committee, any any complaints from broadcast listeners should be addressed to him.

For the Notebook.

Keep the lead from the grid condenser and leak to the grid binding post of the socket as short as possible.

The wires used in headphones are smaller than human hair.

The wire leading from the antenna proper to the set is called a "lead-in" in this country, but in England it is called a "down-wire."

Take the tubes out of their sockets every once in a while and sandpaper both the pins and the springs. This treatment often

Miniature receiving sets are usually toys and not practical.

All plate batteries should be variable in steps of from two to 10 volts.

A vacuum tube is much more delicate than an ordinary incandescept lamp; treat it accordingly.

Use No. 14 rubber-covered wire for storage battery leads. The heavier the wire the better.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

The Stevens & Co., toolsmiths, have placed on the market a set of wrenches designed to facilitate work in unhandy places about the average radio receiver. They are obtainable in all sizes from 3-16" to 9-16," but the 3 most needed are ¼", ⅜" and 5-16", which are packed in a set. A hollow stem goes down over projecting screws and the hexagonal socket secures a firm grip on the nut. The handles are 6" long.

The "Dixie Junior" is a boxed screw assortment of 100 pieces, consisting of machine screws, wood screws, washers, nuts and terminals. The soldering lugs are stamped copper and the machine products are of solid brass, nickel-plated.

Radio findings, which may be selected from a tray, are offered at one store. They consist of lugs of different sizes, name plates for all the binding posts found on most sets, such as negative and positive "A", "B" and "C" battery, aerial, ground, loop aerial, loud speaker, switch levers and switch points, different sized bezels, separable phone cord tips, angle plates, cap nuts and lock washers. They are sold separately or in any quantity desired. Much time and labor can be saved by making use of these findings, which form a very necessary part of every radio set.

E-Z tune vernier dials, made by the Butler Manufacturing Co., are listed at a price somewhat higher than the usual dial of this type, but are better than the average. They are made of black bakelite, and calibrated with whitened figures—0-100.

The Frost Radio Manufacturing Co. is now supplying the market for a non-microphonic UV-189 vacuum tube socket. They are also made in two and three gang types. A new type of battery snap switch is also being produced by this same company.

Two sizes of cabinets—for panels 7 by 21 and 7 by 24 inches are obtainable at a local dealers. They are made of select kiln dried solid walnut and wax finished. A nickeled piano hinge adds beauty as well as reinforcement to the lid which is provided with a stop to prevent its opening too far.

Na-Ald Cogswell vernier variable condensers are made by the Alden Manufacturing Co. The plates are stamped of duraluminum and bakelite is used for insulation. The rotating plates are pig-tailed to insure perfect electrical connection. Na-Ald brown condensite dials are supplied in 2, 3 and 3½ inch sizes.

HEROISM DISPLAYED BY TACOMA RADIO ME

Remained on Vessel to Aid in Communication With Land Station.

Capt. Herbert G. Sparrow, N., commander of the United cruiser Tacoma, and four men, Lusser, Herrick, Chief J. V. Cooper, were to leave their vessel, wrecked Vera Cruz recently—and, in end, four of them were dead the chief injured. Old mine tions obtained, not alone the action of the ship through the four operators stood by with him in an effort keep radio communication

While the details of th are not available, Admiral chief of operations, said to have lieves all five men were in shack trying to maintain phone communication with American consulate at Vera which had been established preceding day, using batteries the dynamos were out of commission.

Then the hurricane struck old cruiser, whose bow was at reef, and thrashed her terribly, washing her with fierce and pounding her to pieces. a falling mast or an extra heavy sea is believed by the miral to have crushed the shack, formerly the Tacoma emergency cabin, which was based on the main deck just below aft of the bridge. The only patch bearing on the death of four men states: "They were killed on the main deck on Jan. having been struck by the wreckage and sea."

ALL-NIGHT PROGRAM MADE KSD HISTORY

Famous Professionals and Talented Amateurs Braved Discomforts to Do Their Part.

By MISS V. A. L. JONES.
Program Director of KSD.

Radio Station KSD broadcast last week what is believed by radio experts to be the longest studio program ever sent out by wireless telephone. That program lasted for 27 hours and 24½ minutes, and was given by 84 persons, all artists in their own line, many of them among the great ones of the world. Eighteen States of the United States and four nations were represented in the personnel of this remarkable concert. That it was a history-making event is conceded. It made history in its duration, in the manner of its transmission, the atmospheric conditions prevailing at the time, and in the spirit and enthusiasm of its participants.

As if to assist in giving this concert a distinction all its own, the night was clear and cold—which is the ideal weather for radio transmission—and the terrific static which had been making radio reception all over the United States a horror rather than a pleasure during the 10 days before the KSD all-night concert, was gone. All reports received thus far say that never in its history has KSD gone out so clearly and been received so distinctly as during its big distance test program.

The event was staged to ascertain the greatest distance at which radiophone messages may be received with distinctness, and cities in various parts of the world were notified of the test and asked to report if they got any of this lengthy program. As yet none of the foreign cities have reported, but messages already received from distant points on the North American continent indicate that some interesting distance records have been made.

The all-night concert of KSD made history also in the interest and enthusiastic co-operation of its participants. It is one thing to array yourself in your most becoming gown and walk out on a big stage before an inspiring audience and there do your artistic bit, receiving afterward your just meed of applause. It is quite another thing to put on your very best performances in a still, silent radio studio—technically known as a "dead-room" because of the sound-deadening manner of its construction—with no one to see you but your accompanist and the program director, and no knowing how many thousands of persons hearing you. There is an uncanniness about performing for radio that is highly disconcerting and that brings genuine stage-fright to even the most seasoned campaigner. Also, it is one thing to give a concert or make a speech, or present a reading at a reasonable hour of the day or night. It is quite another to sit down to a concert grand piano and present feelingly a portion of a great concerto at 4 o'clock in the morning, or to warble through an operatic aria at 5 a. m. Violin strings will not "stay put" when tuned in the wee sma' hours of the morning, and the cornetist has considerable trouble with his "lip" when called upon to play a cadenza somewhere around 3 a. m.

HEROISM DISPLAYED BY TACOMA RADIO MEN

Remained on Vessel to Keep in Communication With Land Station.

Capt. Herbert G. Sparrow, U. S. N., commander of the United States cruiser Tacoma, and four radio men, Lusser, Herrick, Slvin and Chief J. V. Cooper, were the last to leave their vessel, wrecked off Vera Cruz recently—and, in the end, four of them were dead and the chief injured. Old naval traditions obtained, not alone through the action of the skipper, but through the four operators who stood by with him in an effort to keep radio communication open.

While the details of the accident are not available, Admiral Eberle, chief of operations, says he believes all five men were in the radio shack trying to maintain radiophone communication with the American consulate at Vera Cruz, which had been established the preceding day, using batteries, as the dynamos were out of commission.

Then the hurricane struck the old cruiser, whose bow was on a reef, and threshed her unmercifully, washing her with terrific seas and pounding her to pieces. Either a falling mast or an extremely heavy sea is believed by the Admiral to have crushed the radio shack, formerly the Captain's emergency cabin, which was located on the main deck just below and aft of the bridge. The only dispatch bearing on the death of these four men states: "They were all killed on the main deck on Jan. 21, having been struck by heavy wreckage and seas."

Investigations, when the Prometheus reaches Charleston with the survivors, may reveal that the navy has in its ranks that same type of hero, who, in the commercial field, has always been known to stand by his key to the very last, giving his life if necessary to save the lives of his fellow men and, if possible, the vessel in distress.

A radio amateur should keep abreast of all that is "latest" in radio by reading everything concerning wireless communications.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

ALL-NIGHT PROGRAM MADE KSD HISTORY

Famous Professionals and Talented Amateurs Braved Discomforts to Do Their Part.

By MISS V. A. L. JONES, Program Director of KSD.

Radio Station KSD broadcast last night what is believed by radio experts to be the longest studio program ever sent out by wireless telephone. That program lasted for 7 hours and 26½ minutes, and was given by 86 persons, all artists in their own line, many of them among the great ones of the world. Eighteen States of the United States and four nations were represented in the personnel of this remarkable concert. That it was a history-making event is conceded. It made history in its duration, in the manner of its transmission, the atmospheric conditions prevailing at the time, and in the spirit and enthusiasm of its participants.

It is to assist in giving this concert a distinction all its own, the night was clear and cold—which is the ideal weather for radio transmission—and the terrific static which had been making radio reception all over the United States a horror rather than a pleasure during the 10 days before the KSD all-night concert, was gone. All reports received thus far say that never in its history has KSD gone out so clearly and been received so distinctly as during its big distance test program.

The event was staged to ascertain the greatest distance at which radiophone messages may be received with distinctness, and cities in various parts of the world were notified of the test and asked to report if they got any of this lengthy program. As yet none of the foreign cities have reported, but messages already received from distant points on the North American continent indicate that some interesting distance records have been made.

The all-night concert of KSD made history also in the interest and enthusiastic co-operation of its participants. It is one thing to array yourself in your most becoming gown and walk out on a big stage before an inspiring audience and there do your artistic bit, receiving afterward your just meed of applause. It is quite another thing to put on your very best performance in a still, silent radio studio—technically known as a "dead room" because of the sound-deadening manner of its construction—with no one to see you but your accompanist and the program director, and no knowing how many thousands of persons hearing you. There is an uncanniness about performing for radio that is highly disconcerting and that brings genuine stage-fright to even the most seasoned campaigner. Also, it is one thing to give a concert or make a speech, or present a reading at a reasonable hour of the day or night. It is quite another to sit down to a concert grand piano and present feelingly a portion of a great concerto at 4 o'clock in the morning, or to warble through an operatic aria at 5 a. m. Violin strings will not "stay put" when tuned in the wee sma' hours of the morning, and the cornetist has considerable trouble with his "lip" when called upon to play a cadenza somewhere around 3 a. m.

But all these difficulties were blithely brushed aside by the artists who took part in KSD's all-night concert and everybody did himself (which means herself as well) mighty proud.

Early Morning Episodes.

The big concert got under way on schedule time at 8 p. m. Tuesday, as KSD concerts do invariably, but it did not run according to schedule. Several extra notable events, obtained at the last minute, were rushed into the program, and some of the participants gave additional numbers not listed when the schedule was formulated. This caused the loss of about an hour and a half in the time card and caused a corresponding wait on the part of many of the participants. The time was made up, all but 10 minutes, before the all-night test ended, but it was at the cost of the little intermissions planned to give the radio staff a chance to breathe between whiles. These rests were willingly foregone by the staff in the enthusiasm for the success of the event.

But nobody complained at the waits. Everybody arrived shortly before the time appointed for his appearance in front of the microphone, and patiently waited for his predecessor on the program to finish.

There was no confusion, no overlapping, no dissatisfaction anywhere. Professionals came from the local theaters. Society men and women came from their comfortable homes, police officers left their beats, and one man drove all the way from Belleville, Ill., through the bitter cold night to play a half hour's piano recital at 2:30 a. m. And the wonder of it all was the smoothness with which everything moved. Each group of participants waited its turn, enjoying the odd experience largely, and sitting quietly in the reception room until as quietly entering the studio. Then when their turn was over they as quietly left, still in a wide-awake happy humor.

One of the groups brought breakfast in thermos containers, eating it while waiting in the reception room. Another group, an orchestra, stayed all night at the director's house so there would be no late ones, and all piled sleepily into their cars and arrived at the KSD station at the same time. In this group a young flute player couldn't get his instrument tuned.

"What's wrong with me?" he asked. "I can't get the darn thing up."

"Your 'lip' is asleep, that's all," laughingly replied the director.

Thirty-five police officers, patrolmen, most of them, but a captain and several sergeants as well, composed a band which gave a concert at 2:30 a. m. About half of these men came straight from their beats and their hip pockets bristled with heavy automatic revolvers. The Chief of Police himself came with the band, he, too, being armed. KSD would have been a bad place for a burglar that night.

That the all-night concert was an artistic success is gainsaid by none who heard it, and many there were among the listeners who are fully capable of judging its excellence in this regard. Men and women of international and national fame took part, amateurs who might have that same fame if they were so inclined, sang and read, and played their very best, and so helped in writing the latest chapter in the history of the development of that newest wonder of the world—radio telephony.

RADIO CONSIDERED A "LUXURY" IN FRANKFORT

German interests desiring a monopoly, or at least control of radio, assert that it is a "luxury," and should be subject to taxation, contending that it will only be possible to finance good broadcasting if the control remains with the Government. Recently, however, the Postoffice has granted permission to special companies to construct broadcasting stations, and has given private persons licenses to buy receivers.

Those who approve of private operation say such control will discourage initiative, and that it will be impossible to enforce regulations without spying out home-made sets. The system of Government control will, however, be continued temporarily, and those who listens in must use outside antenae and purchase sets stamped by the Government, as well as possess a Postoffice license, costing 25 gold marks a year. The first broadcaster licensed in Frankfort was the Sudwestdeutsche Rundfundienst, A. G., which will operate exclusively within a radius of 150 kilometers.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

All queries must be accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

Q. To listen to one particular local station I simply connect my receivers across the crystal detector binding posts which are in turn connected between the aerial and ground leads. Is this unusual? C. H. G.

A. No. This frequently happens. The explanation is that the natural period of the receiving aerial is very close to, or exactly the same as the antenae of transmitting station. If you altered your aerial by lengthening or shortening it, you would find that the signal intensity would be considerably weakened, or entirely inaudible due to the fact that the two aerials would then be out of resonance or "untuned" to each other.

Q. In the hook-up showing a variometer, which is the stator and which is the rotor winding? L. V.

A. The symbol for a variometer does not show which is the rotor and the stator. Such indication is unnecessary as the current flows through both coils in a continuous metallic circuit.

Q. What parts are required for a first-class crystal receiver? S. W.

A. A good pair of head phones, crystal detector, loose-coupler (or vario-coupler), and a fixed condenser. A variable condenser might be of some advantage.

Q. (1) In constructing a vario-coupler twin-variometer set which is the best method, placing the vario-coupler in the center, with a variometer on either side, or the variometers together with the vario-coupler at one side? (2) Using a Cockaday set, what might be wrong when stations can be hear, but very faint? The "A" and "B" batteries are new. Would a grid-leak or condenser of the wrong capacity cause this? H. W. B.

A. (1) The customary practice is to place the vario-coupler in the center, with a variometer on each side. (2) In a Cockaday circuit it is highly important that each instrument be of exactly the correct dimension and capacity. Look over all of the conections, and make sure that they are firm. Also inspect your aerial and ground connections.

Q. What is the proper size of fixed condenser to use between the grid and plate of WD-12 tubes in a two-stage amplifier? J. F. G.

A. Grid leaks are not placed between amplifier tubes. In the usual detector circuit a .00025 mfd. fixed condenser, or an 11-plate variable condenser is recommended.

Q. Will three crystal detectors give better results than one? C. G.

A. No.

Q. How can I connect two pairs of head-phones to my crystal set without decreasing the signal strength? F. W.

A. Try connecting them in parallel—that is—both tips together, and then try connecting a tip from each set into the two binding posts of the receiver and the other two together. Use which ever gives the loudest signals.

Q. What wireless code is used by ships? B. H.

A. The Continental Morse code.

Q. Will a UV-199 tube give as good results as an amplifier as a C-299? R. G.

A. Yes.

Q. (1) Does a phone condenser help on a crystal set? (2) Would a variable condenser increase the signal strength with a crystal receiver? Wm. S.

A. (1) A small fixed condenser connected across the phone binding posts of some sets does increase the signal strength. The best way to find out is to experiment—no two sets are exactly alike. (2) Sometimes a variable condenser will materially help in increasing signal strength and also the selectivity of a crystal set.

Q. Does a bare lead-in have any effect on reception if it is touching wood? R. S.

A. The chances are that it would —especially in rainy weather.

MAXIM, IN EUROPE, TO LISTEN TO AMATEURS

American Stations Will Be Checked Up While Cruising in Mediterranean.

With one of the first private receiving aerials ever permitted on board a vessel bound for Europe and his cabin snugly equipped with a sensitive short wave receiver, Hiram Percy Maxim, president of the American Radio Relay League, recently sailed on the Belgenland of the Red Star Line, after securing permission from the ship owners and the British Marconi Co., Ltd., to erect a private aerial to connect with the receiver in his stateroom.

By prearrangement with the headquarters of the A. R. R. L. at Hartford, Conn., Mr. Maxim, intends to keep in constant touch with League affairs and will acknowledge receipt of such messages by means of the vessel's regular radio service. Above all else he will spend most of his time listening to American amateur stations.

The receiving conditions on the ship should be such that with very little trouble he cold hear not only amateurs in the United States but also those in England, France and Holland. Should he have difficulty in hearing messages from American amateurs when he approaches the other side, arrangements have been made by which such communications will be transmitted first to England and from there relayed to him by amateurs in that country.

Mr. Maxim is looking forward with great interest to this test in order to prove his theory that the signals of American short wave amateur transmitting sets are carrying to points the other side of the Atlantic. He will keep in mind a possible route for an amateur relay around the world and will determine if there are amateurs in Bombay and Calcutta.

Radiograms.

The average American broadcasting station radiates from 500 to 1000 watts.

Honolulu is to become a radio center. A powerful station is to be operated for sending daily messages of good will and programs instructive, entertaining and enlightening to the peoples of all the countries bordering the Pacific Ocean.

Capt. MacMillan and his crew on the steamer "Bowdoin," frozen in the ice off the shores of Greenland, have heard concerts from stations in England, Germany, Holland, Mexico, France, Italy, Norway, Japan, Spain and the United States.

Head Phones.

Telephone receivers, like the other parts of the receiving set, often develop troubles of their own. If signals cannot be heard on one pair of telephone receivers it is possible that the diaphragm is resting on the magnet pole and consequently it cannot vibrate. Under these circumstances it is advisable either to tighten the cap a little or to place a thin paper washer beneath the diaphragm, where it rests on the case. When the cap is removed, if the diaphragm is not held up by the action of the pole pieces, it is evident that the poles of the receiver have lost some of their permanent magnetism.

Steinite Gives Distance
The Marvelous New Crystal
On Crystal Sets!
Steinite Laboratories, Atlantic, Kansas. Dec. 12, '23.
Dear Sirs:—
Steinite Crystal rec'd and open it is my set last night. It is the BEST and most sensitive crystal I ever used. It proves a set-saver. Here's a list of stations I received last night between 11:00 P.M. and midnight:
WJZ, Chicago, 370 mi.; WWJ, Detroit, 490 mi.; WMC, Memphis, 600 mi.; WEAF, Chicago, 870 mi.; WFAA, Dallas, 1,200 mi.; WSB, Atlanta, 1,100 mi.; WDAF, Kansas City, 810 mi.; WHAS, Louisville, 700 mi.; WSAI, Cincinnati, 650 mi.; WGY, Schenectady, 900 mi.; WBZ, Springfield, 1,000 mi.; WJAR, Providence, 1,100 mi.; WCAP, Washington, 1,000 mi.
Yours truly,
Edward B. Miller
Peabody, Kansas.
Manufacturers of Famous Blake Gold Tube Rods and Long Distance Crystal Rods (Mfr. 1922) describing literature on request.
RESULTS truly amazing like Mr. Gardner tells in his letter. Everyone established by STEINITE. It's an authority over Chicago, St. Louis, Denver, Kansas City, several others on my original test with your STEINITE crystals. Quit hooking distance. Get real clear, distant stuff. I heard Fort Worth, Tex., Omaha, Neb., St. Louis, Mo., and WJAZ and KYW at Chicago, Ill.
You can't beat what you get with STEINITE for power, distance, clearness and selectiveness. Read my guarantee and offer—then act.

LOCAL EVENTS IN THE AMATEUR WORLD

Several cases of complaints have been received by the Traffic Committee of the Radio Transmitters' Association, from broadcast listeners. When traced down by one who could read the code, they were found to be commercial radio spark stations operating on 450 meters.

The Secretary of Navigation has received so many complaints regarding these interfering signals that he has asked the commercial companies to use other wave lengths in the early part of the evening.

Many of the stations concerned have agreed, and are operating on wave lengths above 600 meters with the result that the "air" has been cleared, at least partially, of one of the most annoying sources of interference.

Several new radio phone transmitting stations in St. Louis are owned by former broadcast listeners who have graduated into the transmitting class. Like most new stations, each begin operation on wave lengths higher than they should have been. As a result, the R. T. A. has received complaints regarding them. Experienced amateurs are asked to help in getting these stations down to their assigned frequency.

All operators who are in doubt as to where 200 meters is located on their sets may learn by listening in any Sunday evening between 7 and 7:30 p. m. to 9AAL, the officially calibrated station of the St. Louis Radio Traffic Committee. This station transmits exactly on a wave length of 200 meters.

Station 9BED of St. Louis, recently received a card from British 5BV reporting the reception of his signals in London. Station 5BV was using only a one-tube set when the signals were heard.

Tests recently conducted at a local station showed that invariably, the signals on 170 meters with three amperes antenna current, were much more steady and consistent than on 198 meters with an antenna current of five amperes.

* * *

It is also quite noticeable that many stations are dropping down to the lower waves for "DX" work. With a fair amount of power, practically every station that is heard on the shorter wave lengths can be "worked." The minimum of interference which is encountered when operating on low wave lengths has resulted in some enviable distance records having been made.

125 radio manufacturers use Formica Panels
MORE than 125 of the leading radio manufacturers use Formica panels in their receiving sets.
There must be a good reason for this overwhelming preference of men who know all radio materials and who want a panel that will be most efficient, best looking, and in the long run, most economical.
Formica will not bend and warp when it gets a little warm; it will not flow or discolor. It will retain its high insulation strength and get better with use.
Formica is sold by dealers everywhere. It is a Bakelite product, made from Bakelite Resins manufactured by the Bakelite Corporation.

Making Inductance Coils.

The coils used are very important. The turns should be spaced to lower the distributed capacity between adjacent wires. This is accomplished in honey-comb, spider-web and bank wound coils. The honey-combs seem hard to handle on short waves, but the spider-web coils are almost an ideal inductance. They are small, compact, efficient, self-supporting, durable and can be easily made and mounted. Don't paint coils with shellac or varnish. If an adhesive agent is necessary use collodion. This keeps the wires in place, dries quickly, and does not appreciably affect the efficiency of the coil. Be careful in handling collodion as it is very inflammable. Single layer coils are most common and easily made, though they are not the most efficient.

Radio loud and clear or radio a la racket importance of proper amplifying transformers
IT'S no fun listening to a singer if your set makes her voice sound like cat calls. The real thrill in radio today is getting distant stations loud and clear as a bell. The secret of doing this is amplification without distortion.
It is easy enough to amplify. Anyone can do that. But to amplify without distortion is a different and difficult thing. The Acme Apparatus Co. have spent years solving this problem. The result is the Acme Radio Frequency Transformers (R-2, 3 and 4) and the Acme A-2 Audio Frequency Transformer. Ask your radio dealer to show them to you.
Use an Acme A-2 in the set you build and insist on its use in the set you buy. Send 10 cents for book, "Amplification without Distortion," to Acme Apparatus Co., Cambridge, Mass.

UNUSUAL MESSAGE ENDS SLEEP

Students Aroused by Unusual Command to Get Up.

At the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, where radio operators are trained, the new psychological method of increasing speed in code reception, while the partly trained Gobs sleep, is being used with as great success as met the initial sleep instruction tests at Pensacola. One night, after sending at high speed to 17 sleeping embryo operators, equipped with head phones, a petty officer ended his watch with the code message: "Hey Gobs, get up, its five-fifty-five!" Much to his surprise, the snoring ceased, three of the men awoke, and in a few minutes the other 14 rollled out, asking what was the matter. The flabbregasted petty officer now admits night code practice may increase receiving speed, but he knows it will get the students up at 4 bells.

A long aerial generally necessitates broad tuning, while a shorter aerial makes sharper tuning possible. The former is good for "DX" (long distance) work, and the latter for use in receiving local stations.

Manufacturer's Representative
One of America's largest radio manufacturers, with established business in this territory, desires a representative to work jobber and dealer trade. This is an unusual opportunity, with demonstrated large income possibilities. Do not apply unless you can prove selling ability and are thoroughly responsible financially. Straight commission basis. Address Box A-127, Post-Dispatch.

Radiogram.

Radio is changing the accent of the British. After a year of broadcasting, school teachers say children are changing their pronunciation. Most of the announcers who do the broadcasting have a fine Oxford accent.

A public radio set, costing several thousand dollars, has been installed in Pasadena, Cal. It will be used in broadcasting speeches, wireless, football plays and other exercises of all kinds.

Denmark now has officially licensed 3109 private radio receiving sets. School pupils rank first with 473 sets; commerce, shipping and industry, second with 440; officials and store employes have 354; mechanics, 234, and laborers 224.

The "Rolls-Royce" of Radio
The Atwater Kent Model 10 Receiver

The Shame of the Blemished Skin
For unsightly skin, eruptions, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms, or body, you do not have to wait, for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows daily.
Because of its germ-destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.
People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but, firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.
All the benefits of nasty, sickening, purging cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.
Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with liver and kidney complaint, with the attendant bad breath.
Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound, mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

MEMORIAL TO CUBAN PHYSICIAN PLANNED

Dr. Carlos J. Finlay Said to Have Discovered Mosquitoes Transmitted Yellow Fever.

HAVANA, Feb. 9. — Plans for erection of a monument at the entrance to Havana Harbor, and possibly another at Panama, in memory of Dr. Carlos J. Finlay, held by Cuban medical authorities to have been the originator of the theory that mosquitoes transmit yellow fever, are being made by a committee of leading Havana physicians.

Newspapers recently have published statements that the Rockefeller Foundation in its 1923 report mentioned Dr. W. C. Gorgas of the United States Army and the members of the United States Military Commission, which in 1900 proved the mosquito theory and paved the way for eradication of the disease, but failed to give mention of Dr. Finlay, a Cuban physician.

Dr. J. A. Lopez del Valle, director of the Cuban Department of Sanitation; Dr. Aristides Agramonte, a Cuban physician who was a member of the military commission, and other leading physicians, recently appeared before the Havana Rotary Club and asked its aid, and were requested to form a committee and make a definite proposal for a memorial. Dr. Lopez del Valle stated later that the committee of physicians would work out a plan and wouldp resent it to the public and to all Rotary clubs in Cuba. He declared he and his collaborators had no criticism to make of the Rockefeller Foundation, but simply sought to give Dr. Finlay his due.

Dr. Finlay, who was born in 1833 at Camaguey, capital of the Cuban province of that name, of a Scotch father and a French mother, was educated in Europe and in 1855 was graduated from Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia. Medical journals on file in Dr. Lopez del Valle's office credit Dr. Finlay with having first propounded the omsquito theory before an international sanitary conference in Washington, in 1881. He called the mosquito the "Cutex," but later it became known as the "Stegomyia Fasciata." He died in Havana in 1915.

DECIDE FATHER OF HISTORY WAS PAID PUBLICITY AGENT

Munich Academy Members Find Plutarch's Charges Against Herodotus Were True.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—Even Herodotus, the father of history, was only a paid publicity agent retained by a prominent leather manufacturer of his day to write only favorable things about Athens, in the opinion of the Munich Academy, which has been investigating the charges made against Herodotus by Plutarch.

Much ado was raised in learned circles of Central Europe in 1899 when Julius Schwartz, a Hungarian savant who investigated Plutarch's charges, held they were really supported by documentary proof, but subsequent investigations have convinced members of the Munich Academy that Schwartz was right, and it has decided to go on record to that effect.

It was in the year 405 before the Christian era that this leather merchant of Athens, whose name was Anytas, is supposed to have paid Herodotus the equivalent of about $14,000, on the condition that his historical works should contain only favorable mention of Athens. It is also pointed out that Herodotus was born a Persian subject in Asia Minor and did not acquire Athenian citizenship until after he was 30 years old.

MERCHANDIZING CONFERENCE

The Advertising Club of St. Louis will open its second move-more-merchandise conference with a luncheon at Hotel Statler tomorrow noon. The conference will last three days in conjunction with the convention of the American Retailers' Association.

A conference will follow the luncheon. Speakers will be D. E. Parr of Aledo, Ill., "Co-operative Community Sales Days"; A. S. Perry of Cuthbert, Ga., "Putting a Small Town on the Map," and Miss Marie Wathen of San Antonio, Tex., "What Men Don't Know About Advertising to Women."

There is to be another luncheon at the Statler Tuesday and Tuesday night the conference members will attend a banquet at Hotel Chase.

Thin Men and Women I DARE YOU!

To Let Me Increase Your Weight With Firm Flesh, Build Up Your Strength and Energy and Improve Your Appearance—at My Risk.

I WANT to prove to every thin, nervous, rundown man and woman who reads this paper that MASTIN'S VITAMON quickly increases weight and strength and puts on the needed pounds of firm, nerve-quieting, "stay-there" flesh; that it fills out hollows, makes weak, pale folks strong and vigorous, helps overcome debility, other nervous or physical, and revitalize the whole body until it fairly tingles with vibrant energy.

If you are too thin and want to put on firm flesh—if you are weak, nervous and run down and want to increase your strength, energy and endurance—if you suffer from poor appetite, dizzy spells, indigestion or intestinal trouble and want these quickly corrected—if you have pimples, boils, eruptions or sallowness and want a fine, clear skin, you will find it well worth while to make this simple test:

First, see how soon you tire just doing your every-day work. Then weigh and measure yourself. Next take two of MASTIN'S VITAMON Tablets with each meal regularly. Notice how fresh you feel—the sparkle in your eyes, the spring in your step, the firm flesh "pep" and the tingling energy. A two weeks' test should surprise you. Continue using MASTIN'S VITAMON until you are fully satisfied with your gain in weight, strength, endurance and improved appearance.

Doctors say there is no better, surer way to quickly increase weight, build up vitality, strengthen the nerves and improve the appearance—in fact, to help make strong, vigorous, red-blooded men and give to women radiant health and youthful beauty.

I—MASTIN, absolutely guarantee Success or you get back the little it costs for the trial. Ask for and take only MASTIN'S VITAMON, prescribed by doctors, recommended by druggists, athletes, successful men, attractive women and used by millions. At all druggists.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and lazy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you must relieve them, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink. Drink lots of soft water. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For Real Effectiveness, This Old Home-made Remedy Has No Equal. Easily and Cheaply Prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is very easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spend for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat and chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

New Safe Way to Whiten Teeth Instantly!

Marvelous Discovery Bleaches Dark Teeth White, Instantly

A new harmless treatment has been discovered which dissolves teeth stains instantly, giving the dullest teeth a charming whiteness and luster. This new treatment is called the Bleachodent Combination. It consists of a marvelous liquid and a new kind of paste. The liquid instantly curdles or softens all stains—while the paste removes them and prevents the formation of future stains. You just brush your teeth with a few drops of the liquid—then use the paste—and before your very eyes your teeth acquire a clear, flashing whiteness that even an hour's scouring by old-fashioned methods could not give them.

Absolutely Safe.

Bleachodent Combination is absolutely safe in every way, as its mild ingredients act only on surface stains—not on the enamel itself. Teeth stains, as all dentists know, are caused by a glutenous substance called "mucin" which collects on teeth, where it attracts staining substances and hardens. Formerly this hard coating of mucin could not be removed without grinding away a part of the enamel. But now, thanks to the Bleachodent Combination, these stains can be dissolved away without affecting the enamel in any way.

No More Tobacco Stained Teeth!

Surely nothing spoils one's appearance quicker than yellowish, tobacco stained teeth. Yet with Bleachodent Combination unsightly teeth stains are no longer necessary. No matter how stained the teeth may be from tobacco or other substances, the stains disappear with almost magical quickness, and the teeth acquire a wonderful flashing whiteness and glisten.

Fine for Children's Teeth.

It is vitally important that only a safe, mild preparation like Bleachodent Combination be used on children's teeth which are especially subject to stains and decay. Bleachodent Combination was first made for children's teeth to avoid the use of harsh, gritty dentifrices which are so ruinous to teeth in their formative stages.

Get Bleachodent Combination Today.

You risk nothing in trying Bleachodent Combination for unless you are more than delighted with results of first application, your money will be instantly and gladly refunded without question. Say good-by to dull, stained teeth!

Note: Do not expect Bleachodent Combination to remove stains caused by a silver filling. Bleachodent Combination will instantly remove surface stains, it has no effect whatever on enamel, and therefore cannot be expected to remove stains which go below the enamel's surface. DIRIGIBLE SERVICE IN ALASKA IS PLANNED

Project Under Way to Carry Miners, Equipment and Tourists Into Polar Silences.

By the Associated Press.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Jan. 9.—Prospectors, miners and trappers will be taken into the Arctic Circle by dirigible next summer, if a company, whose representatives now are in interior Alaska, carried out announced plans.

Those organizing the project say they believe the dirigible will prove a solution for the placer operator, who finds the long slow routes of waterways and dog trails a serious problem in time and financing. The "farthest north" trappers are confronted with the same difficulty.

The first airship will ply, according to the announcement, between Fairbanks, the Chandelar and Koyokuk. It is planned eventually to extend the service to other districts.

If dirigible transportation is thus installed, the traveler may reach the Arctic Circle within eight days after sailing from Seattle. He would travel by boat six days, landing in Anchorage, then by train 24 hours to Fairbanks, whence he would be whisked through the air for the last and hardest lap of the journey.

In Polar Wilderness.

With the passing of many of the famous old placer camps south of the Yukon, the prospector has pressed over northward, into the shadow of the Polar wilderness. However, the promising fields within the Arctic Circle often require hydraulic operations, and, even where a "pay discovery" has been made, it is a matter of weeks, sometime months, to get a force of miners and the equipment over the snow and ice trails into the remote sections.

The company's representatives declare they can carry two tons of men and equipment into the Arctic in a few hours, at a cost of about one-fourth that entailed by dog-sled transportation.

Into the Arctic Silences.

The dirigible also may be used to take summer tourists for visits to "the Arctic silences."

The announcement of the contemplated dirigible service has stirred in Alaskan towns a clamor for mail to be delivered by air to such points as Nome, the Upper Kuskokwim and the Kobuk country. At present this mail is carried by dogs and requires from two weeks to a month after it leaves the Alaska Railroad. The parcel post business has grown to such dimensions that it is costing the Government a heavy sum to supply points that are cut off from modern transportation. Steamers reach Nome in summer, but the Bering Sea town is ice-locked and dependent on communication by overland trail most of the year.

POSTAL EMPLOYES TO MEET

A THR

SALE OF CORNER H MARKS WEEK OF IN REAL ESTAT

Developments Indicate Large ations in This Sphere, P and Otherwise

By BERRY MOORE.

The introduction of February was marked by a notable expansion of activities in real estate, with the acquisition of corner holdings the most significant feature. Developments indicate a larger scope of operations in this field, both professional and otherwise.

The most important transactions embraced the northwest corner of Compton avenue and Locust street, the northwest corner of Tenth and Market streets, the northeast corner of Laclede and Euclid avenues, and the northeast corner of Kingsbury boulevard and Euclid avenue.

The northwest corner of Compton avenue and Locust street, with a modern reinforced concrete two-story structure, was acquired by the Durant Motors, Inc. of New York, the negotiations being conducted by W. R. Cady, real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

The grantor was the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. of Akron, O., which constructed the building several years ago, and which was reimbursed liberally by the transaction, it is understood. The building occupies a lot 85x134 feet. Henry W. Spalding, president of the Spalding Motor Co. of St. Louis, acted for the Durant interests.

The western half of the building will be occupied by the Spalding Motor Co., distributor of Durant and Star motor cars in the St. Louis district, in about 90 days or as soon as the Firestone company can obtain a suitable location here with trackage facilities.

Advantageous Location.

The corner is situated one block east of the Lindell cut-off, and is regarded as one of the most commanding on upper Locust street for the sale of automobiles.

Morris J. Miller purchased the northwest corner of Tenth and Market streets, the fifth corner on Market street, east of Union Station, exclusive of inside parcels, to change control since the passage of the $87,000,000 bond issue, which provides for the widening of this thoroughfare.

The sale was handled by Theodore Coleman, real estate officer of the Park Savings Trust Co., the property belonging to Leon Williams. The site has 22 feet on Market and 134 feet on Tenth street, and is improved with a three-story building.

Miller recently purchased the northeast corner of Tenth and Market streets, for which he already has declined a flattering offer, according to Coleman.

George M. Schen bought a handsome business and apartment block embracing the northeast corner of Laclede and Euclid avenues, with 92 feet on Euclid and 194 feet on Laclede, for an announced consideration of $125,000. The sale was promoted by the Weisels-Gerhart company for the Hasgall Realty and Investment Co., a holding corporation. The annual rentals are $18,500.

Schen's operations in the real estate field have been characterized by notable success, the most conspicuous of these involving the northeast corner of Twelfth street and Chouteau avenue, which he sold to the recently organized Twelfth Street National Bank at an unprecedented profit. He is proprietor of the City Hall drug store at the northeast corner of Twelfth and Pine streets, and has plans for a drug store in the block at Laclede and Euclid avenues, just acquired by him.

A lot 100 by 200 feet at the northeast corner of Kingsbury boulevard and Adelaide avenue was purchased by Joseph M. Kapman as a site for a three-story apartment building, through the Weisels-Gerhard company, in conjunction with the Botturff-Giles Realty Co., agent for Grant Seeley, seller. Contracts for the erection of the structure have been let to Vincent Chinberg. The estimated cost of construction, exclusive of the site, is $275,000.

Morgan Street Deal.

The Fischer Meat Co. has bought through the Mercantile Trust Co. the three-story building at 412-15 Morgan street. The entire building will be occupied by the wholesale department of the Fischer Co., which has quarters in the Union Market, which is to be replaced with a modern market structure to cost $1,000,000 provided for in the $87,000,000 bond issue.

The walls and ceilings of the first floor of the building are to

SALE OF CORNER HOLDINGS MARKS WEEK OF ACTIVITY IN REAL ESTATE MARKET

Developments Indicate Larger Scope of Operations in This Sphere, Professional and Otherwise.

By BERRY MOORE.

The introduction of February was marked by a notable expansion of activities in real estate, with the acquisition of corner holdings the most significant feature. Developments indicate a larger scope of operations in this field, both professional and otherwise.

The most important transactions embraced the northwest corner of Compton avenue and Locust street, the northwest corner of Tenth and Market streets, the northeast corner of Laclede and Euclid avenues, and the northeast corner of Kingsbury boulevard and Euclid avenue.

The northwest corner of Compton avenue and Locust street, with a modern reinforced concrete two-story structure, was acquired by the Durant Motors, Inc., of New York, the negotiations being conducted by W. R. Cady, real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

The grantor was the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. of Akron, O., which constructed the building several years ago, and which was reimbursed liberally by the transaction, it is understood. The building occupies a lot 85x134 feet. Henry W. Spalding, president of the Spalding Motor Co. of St. Louis, acted for the Durant interests.

The western half of the building will be occupied by the Spalding Motor Co., distributor of Durant and Star motor cars in the St. Louis district, in about 90 days or as soon as the Firestone company can obtain a suitable location here with trackage facilities.

Advantageous Location.

The corner is situated one block east of the Lindell cut-off, and is regarded as one of the most commanding on upper Locust street for the sale of automobiles.

Morris J. Miller purchased the northwest corner of Tenth and Market streets, the fifth corner on Market street, east of Union Station, exclusive of inside parcels, to change control since the passage of the $87,000,000 bond issue, which provides for the widening of this thoroughfare.

The sale was handled by Theodore Coleman, real estate officer of the Park Savings Trust Co., the property belonging to Leon Williams. The site has 32 feet on Market and 134 feet on Tenth street, and is improved with a three-story building.

Miller recently purchased the northeast corner of Tenth and Market streets, for which he already has declined a flattering offer, according to Coleman.

George M. Scheu bought a handsome business and apartment block embracing the northeast corner of Laclede and Euclid avenues, with 92 feet on Euclid and 136 feet on Laclede, for an announced consideration of $125,000. The sale was promoted by the Weinels-Gerhart company for the Hagall Realty and Investment Co., a holding corporation. The annual rentals are $18,500.

Scheu's operations in the real estate field have been characterized by notable success, the most conspicuous of these involving the northeast corner of Twelfth street and Chouteau avenue, which he sold to the recently organized Twelfth Street National Bank at an unprecedented profit. He is proprietor of the City Hall drug store, at the northeast corner of Twelfth and Pine streets, and has plans for a drug store in the block at Laclede and Euclid avenues, just acquired by him.

A lot 100 by 200 feet at the northeast corner of Kingsbury boulevard and Adelaide avenue was purchased by Joseph M. Kopman as a site for a three-story apartment building, through the Weinsle-Gerhard company, in conjunction with the Bottorff-Giles Realty Co., agent for Grant Seeley, seller. Contracts for the erection of the structure have been let to Vincent Chinberg. The estimated cost of construction, exclusive of the site, is $75,000.

Morgan Street Deal.

The Fischer Meat Co. has bought through the Mercantile Trust Co., the three-story building at 413-15 Morgan street. The entire building will be occupied by the wholesale department of the Fischer Co., which has quarters in the Union Market, which is to be replaced with a modern market structure to cost $1,000,000 provided for in the $87,000,000 bond issue.

The walls and ceilings of the first floor of the building are to be finished in white tile, while refrigerating equipment is to be installed, with a view to making the Morgan street building one of the most up-to-date and sanitary packing plants in the city. The Mercantile Trust Co. represented both the buyer and the seller.

The Fischer Meat Co. recently bought through the Ben Altheimer & Brother Real Estate Co. a five-story building in the 400 block of Washington avenue, extending through to Lucas avenue. It was announced that the Lucas avenue part of the building would be occupied by the Fischer Co.

The demand for stores on the part of concerns occupying space in the present Union Market structure, which is to be demolished soon to make way for the proposed structure, has had the effect of revolutioning rentals in the vicinity of this famed establishment, according to Ben Altheimer.

Places on Morgan street opposite Union Market, formerly renting from $75 to $100 a month, now are commanding as high as $150, while those on Broadway range from $250 to $300 a month, he stated. Stores on Morgan street west of Sixth street, which heretofore were available at $50 a month now range from $100 to $125 a month, Altheimer said.

The Ben Altheimer & Bro. Real Estate Co. has closed deals for two buildings in this district within the last week, one involving $75,000 and the other $85,000, aside from those already announced by the company.

The demand also extends to Franklin avenue, which manifestly is to regain its pristine glory, as the result of the widening of its downtown section. Negotiations are pending for several other corners of this thoroughfare, which are sought as sites for large business structures. Rentals are also on the upswing on downtown Franklin avenue.

LAST WORKS AT ROCHESTER LEASES ST. LOUIS BUILDING

The Rochester Last Works of Rochester, N. Y., has acquired a long term lease of a two-story and basement building at 3417-19 Chouteau avenue. This is one of the largest last manufacturing concerns in the United States and has a large plant employing several hundred people at Rochester.

The building leased has 25,000 square feet of floor space and a Missouri-Pacific Railroad siding. A large vacant lot adjoining provides room for expansion. About 100 men will be employed in the new factory at the start.

The lease was made by the Martin and Brettt Real Estate Co. for George F. Tower Jr.

HARRY GLEITNER FORMS NEW REAL ESTATE COMPANY

Harry Gleitner has opened an office at 807 Chestnut street as Gleitner Realty Co. He has a large acquaintance.

SITE BOUGHT FOR NEW PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Contract Also Let for Structure at 6166 Delmar in University City.

A site for a church building for the recently organized University Presbyterian Church, starting with 120 members, has been purchased at 6166 Delmar boulevard in University City. The price was announced as $200 a front foot. Eugene J. Altheimer handled the transactions. Contract for erection of the structure has been let to William P. Smith & Son, and the architect is George E. Smith. Dr. James E. Smith is pastor. The congregation now meets in a little church at Hamilton and Bartmer avenues.

The new church probably will be completed in the early summer. It will be of Gothic design. It is to be 78 feet long and 48 feet wide. The first floor will comprise the Sunday School room and kitchen and furnace room. Above will be the church auditorium, which will seat about 500, the pastor's study and the choir room.

The church women are planning to buy the pews and pulpit furnishings, also the heating plant. A friend of Dr. Smith has volunteered to present him with a pulpit from wood gathered in various parts of the world. Charles E. Schumacher is the treasurer of the church.

LOFTS ARE LEASED BY ISAAC T. COOK & CO.

The Pictorial Review Co., now occupying the eighth floor of the Hess and Culbertson Building, have taken a long lease on the entire eighth floor of the Drygoodsman Building, on the northwest corner of West Sixteenth street and Washington avenue.

The Primo Clothing Mfg. Co. has leased the third floor and the Forest City Manufacturing Co. has taken the fifth and sixth floors of the building at 1627-29 Washington avenue. The property is owned by the Frisco Building Co., for which Isaac T. Cook & Co. are exclusive agents.

NEW CYRUS P. WALBRIDGE SCHOOL FORMALLY DEDICATED

The new Cyrus P. Walbridge School at Lillian and Davison avenues was formally dedicated Friday night with addresses by the president of the Board of Education, Henry R. Rosskopf, Stephen A. Wagner and Richard Murphy, also members of the board, and Louis P. Aloe, former president of the Board of Aldermen.

The building, which was characterized by President Rosskopf as one of the most modern in the country, cost, including the site and equipment, $360,000.

There are 18 rooms with a capacity of 900 pupils.

The building is of brick construction and comprises three stories, with a front court as a notable feature.

Noteworthy among other feature are hidden wardrobes, access to which is through collapsible blackboards; sectional gymnasium, through which a separate corridor can be formed, and washing and purifying machines. The building in finished with marble and an incased stairway at the front entrance and semi-marble and tile incased stairways throughout the remainder of the building.

FLATS AND FACTORY BUILDING SOLD BY CHAUNCEY P. HEATH

The Chauncey P. Heath Real Estate Co. reports the sale of 4207 West Finney avenue, a 4 and 5-room flat, for account of Robert Verschleiser to Henry Glenn; double flat of 5 and 8 rooms, at 4369-73 Delmar bulevard, for Robert Verschleiser to Louis Mitleider; a factory building at Shenandoah and Dolman streets for client of Hauervor & Novelty Co., the building being of reinforced concrete, two stories, steam heat, and 50-foot front by 140 feet deep.

LONG TERM LEASE ON VISTA AVENUE CORNER

The John S. Blake & Bro. Realty Co. reports making a long term lease on a 2-story brick business building at Vista avenue and Carr Lane, to Wallerstedt Leather Goods Co. for P. H. Hale. The concern also sold 425-27A South Garrison avenue, a double 2-room brick flat, renting for $912, for S. Maguire to John S. C. Nichols, and 4468-68A Fairfax avenue, single flat, for S. Zideh to E. M. Lloyd.

DUNCKER MEMORIAL TO BE FINISHED JUNE 1

Construction of Hall of Commerce and Finance at Washington U. Well Under Way.

The Charles Henry Duncker Jr. Hall of Commerce and Finance of Washington University, now being constructed at the northwest corner of the University quadrangle, will be completed about June 1.

The building, costing more than $200,000, is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Duncker of Brentmoor Park, in memory of their son, who was killed in France in October, 1918, while serving as a captain in the 340th Field Artillery. Capt. Duncker's widow, Mrs. Ada Duncker, also shared in the gift. It is to be th equarters of the university's Department of Commerce and Finance.

Capt. Duncker was a graduate of the university in the class of 1914. He was in business, after his graduation, with the Trorlicht-Duncker Carpet Co.

The building conforms architecturally to the university group. The plans were prepared by the architectural firm of Cann & Corrubia & Henderson, in collaboration with James P. Jamieson, architect for the university.

GEORGE A. HELD HOME SOLD BY FEDERER REALTY CO.

Federer Realty Co. reports the sale of two new apartment flats at 3159-61-62-65 Bent avenue for William Baumgartner to Alfred Wittich and wife; steam-heated single flat at 3222 Arsenal street, just completed, for Lena G. Leonhard to Charles J. Doepke and wife; 9-room residence at 3627 Utah place for George A. Held, president of the Jefferson-Gravois Bank, to Thomas A. Hennigan of the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., who purchased for home; southwest corner of Gravois and Texas avenues for Harry J. Riefling to the J. H. Gebken Livery & Undertaking Co., where a funeral chapel is to be erected; single flat at 2329 South Jefferson avenue to a client; lot on the south side of Devonshire avenue to Max Poppler, who will improve with a bungalow; 40-foot lot on the east side of South Thirty-seventh street for Oscar Sontag to William C. Sullentrop; contracts signed for more than $200,000 of improved property within the last 10 days.

SHRINE HOSPITAL HERE TO BE UNIT IN A CHAIN

The Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children, on South King's highway, the exterior of which is practically completed, forms a notable addition to the Barnes' Hospital group.

The site has a frontage on King's highway of 380 feet, with an average depth of 330 feet.

The hospital here is the first step in the nation-wide plan of the Shrine order for the care of crippled children, a charity work undertaken by the Shrine four years ago. The plan of the Shrine is to establish a hospital for crippled children in every state of the Union, and in each province of Canada. The St. Louis hospital will be designated as the center unit in the hospital system.

A photograph of the building is shown on this page because of its proximity to Barnes Hospital and the Washington University School of Medicine.

MORE THAN DOUBLES ITS ASSETS IN SINGLE YEAR

At the annual meeting of the St. Louis Building and Loan Association it was announced that the assets had increased from $239,349 in January, 1923, to $515,745, more than doubling in a year. The regular semiannual dividend was declared, and there remains a surplus of $1160 in the treasury.

John C. Hall, president, reports that the demand for resident loans is still strong. The Association is just two years old. Its officers are in the Arcade Building, and the directors are as follows: J. B. Corby, Walter C. Doering, George L. Dyer, R. E. Einstein, Eugene A. Fuss, Sol. W. Gross, J. M. Kurn, John C. Hall, Emmett M. Myers, Albert D. Norton, James M. Rohan.

LOCUST BOULEVARD BUILDING LEASED BY MOTOR COMPANY

Oreon E. & R. G. Scott report having made a long term lease on a three-story brick building at 3227 Locust boulevard for the Motor Realty and Investment Co., to the Yahlem Motor Co. The lessees were represented by B. Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co. The Yahlem Motor Co. will occupy the entire building about March 1.

EARNINGS OF $79 A SHARE ON PARNELL BUILDING STOCK

The Parnell Savings and Building Association, with the approval of the Commissioner of Finance, has matured Series No. 30 of its monthly payment installment stock, at a value of $201.40 a share. This series matured in 111 months, the stockholders having paid in during this time $2 on each share monthly, or a total of $222.

The earnings of each share were $79.40 which was paid in cash $201.40 for each of their shares.

The Parnell Saving and Building Association was organized in 1889, is an old line association under State supervision, and loans money to its stockholders, repayable in easy monthly installments secured by first deeds of trust on property located in the city and county of St. Louis only.

Upon the maturity of a series a stockholder who has borrowed has fully paid off his loan and receives a clearance of his property by release of his mortgage. Series No. 39 of monthly payment installment stock is now open.

The Parnell association reports an increase in its loans of $35,000 during the past year. The officers are S. E. Grote, president; Michael E. Smith, vice president; Patrick Flood, treasurer; James D. Dockery, secretary; John M. McInery, Frank B. Costello and Leo J. Dockery, directors. The office of the association is at 1025 Chestnut street.

SITE ON MORGAN STREET PURCHASED FOR A GARAGE

A site comprising several parcels on the north side of Morgan street, just east of Eighth street and on the east side of Eighth street, extending through to the north and south alley of the block, has been purchased as a site for a five-story fire-proof garage building of the most approved type. The site was purchased in the name of O. A. Sommaers, represented by Julius Conrath Jr. The sellers of the ground were represented by the Mercantile Trust Co. The building which will embrace 16,000 square feet, will have accommodations for 200 machines.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when properly prepared and taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest quality Willow charcoal powdered to extreme fineness, then compressed in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being sweetened to be smooth and palatable.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no poss

TAX BILL PLACED FIRST ON PROGRAM BY G. O. P. LEADERS

Coolidge Agrees to Suggestion at Conference and Approves Proposal to Adjourn Congress June 1.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—President Coolidge, in a White House conference with Republican leaders, today agreed to a legislative program in which tax reduction legislation shall be regarded as the measure of first and primary importance and approved a proposal to adjourn Congress on June 1, next.

The President was told by Republican Floor Leader Longworth and Representative Snell of New York, chairman of the rules committee, who spoke for their colleagues in the conference, that the 25 per cent surtax maximum contained in the Mellon bill cannot receive approval by the House. While the administration forces will begin the fight for the 25 per cent surtax maximum, it will be with the view of eventual compromise. A poll taken today by Representative Begg (Rep., Ohio), showed, according to Begg, that a majority could be relied upon to pass a "Republican tax reduction measure," with a surtax rate above 25 per cent and below 42 per cent. Even a maximum of 40 per cent will be regarded as a Republican achievement and 35 per cent seems the most favorable solution.

Program Agreed On.

The legislative program agreed upon in the conference between the President and the Republican House leaders calls for consideration of the legislation in the order named: Tax reduction based on the Mellon plan; immigration legislation, disposition of Muscle Shoals, soldiers' bonus.

In this program tax legislation will be regarded as paramount and everything else will be sidetracked to give the tax bill the right of way. Various appropriation bills will be sandwiched in among the last three measures, but with the view of getting the legislative program through, if possible, before the date named for the adjournment of Congress for the summer recess. At the conclusion of the conference, Representative Longworth said it was certain the House would not approve a surtax maximum of 25 per cent, but the figure finally adopted would be considerably below 44 per cent, as provided for in the Democratic bill.

Democrats Shaping Plan.

The Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee put the final touches upon the revised bill which they will submit as a substitute for all other proposals. The income rate in the new Garner plan will call for 25 per cent on incomes up to $5000, 4 per cent on incomes from $5000 to $8000 and 6 per cent on incomes beyond that.

Plans among the Republicans call for the report of the Ways and Means Committee on Monday, as originally planned, but instead of waiting until the week following, it is expected to begin consideration of the revenue bill on Thursday next. Chairman Green of the Ways and Means Committee is confident the bill will be disposed of in the House much more quickly than has been anticipated, and Representative Longworth shares this view. It is believed the measure will be disposed of within from two to four weeks.

Frear's Separate Report.

Representative Frear today made a separate report on the revenue bill. Although he voted with the Republicans in committee to report the measure, he made it clear that he would not accept the Mellon income rates. Chairman Green and two other Republicans of the committee also voted against these rates and have indicated they would not support the Mellon surtax rates.

In his report Mr. Frear proposed a 50 per cent cut in the normal income rates, rather than the 25 per cent reduction adopted, and asked that the present maximum 50 per cent surtax rate be maintained. This would mean a loss of $184,000,000 in revenue, he said, compared with the loss of $92,000,000 which would result from the Mellon cut in normal taxes and $102,000,000 in surtaxes suggested by the Treasury Secretary.

Mentho-Laxene Helps After Others Failed

Dear Sirs: I had taken cold and the cough which followed became so bad I could not get any rest at night. I tried Doctors and patent medicines until I grew discouraged and "disgusted." Seeing an advertisement of Mentho-Laxene Cough Syrup, I decided to try one and one bottle wholly relieved that tight, hacking cough which had almost worn me out. I keep a bottle for family use and take a few doses whenever I begin to cough, as I am a coal miner and going so hot and clothing wet with sweat and then cooling off and breathing so much dust, makes it easy for one to catch cold. I am,

Very respectfully,
(Signed) GEO. PACK.
321 Hight St., Eldorado, Ill.

Blackburn's Mentho-Laxene is a highly concentrated essence. Has delicious flavor and many use it full strength, while others prefer to dilute it with sugar syrup or honey—thus making a full pint. It is six times stronger than ordinary cough syrups. Full directions with each bottle. Obtain Blackburn's Mentho-Laxene at any Drug Store.

St. Louis People State MENTHO-LAXENE STOPS COUGH QUICKEST

"COULDN'T DO WITHOUT IT"

From Mrs. L. E. Woodson, 2136 Chestnut st., came this letter. Like thousands of others, relating the typical "Power of Mentho-Laxene" to stop obstinate coughs and colds. Mrs. Woodson writes: "I have taken one bottle of essence Mentho-Laxene and am starting on another. It has helped me so much that I could not do without it. My coughing is almost gone and I don't suffer with the asthma now. I think it is gone for on the way of curing. I have not been so well in years."

NOTE: We do not claim that Mentho-Laxene cures asthma, but the benefit of relief alone is worth much to those who are so afflicted. Should it fail to help anyone, purchase price cheerfully refunded.

MRS. FROBST PRAISES MENTHO-LAXENE

Dear Sirs: Am writing a few lines in regard to your Mentho-Laxene cough medicine. Am now using my second bottle and I think it the best medicine on the market. My baby had such a cough, we thought she had whooping cough. I read so much of your medicine, and I had tried almost every medicine but yours. We don't have any rest at night for three weeks. Since I've been giving her Mentho-Laxene she sleeps fine. The first couple of nights I got up and gave her a dose in the night, but after a few days her cough was gone. Now I have a bottle for my other girl and sure wouldn't have any other. Sincerely yours, Mrs. R. Frobst, 913 Buchanan st., St. Louis, Mo.

St. Louis Family Have Used Mentho-Laxene For Past Three Years.

Mrs. E. Snedmeyer, 4307 S. 20th st., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I am writing in regard to your wonderful medicine Mentho-Laxene. I want say it has proven its worth in our family for the past three years, as we are all subject to colds in the winter months and especially my husband always had a bronchial cough all winter, but since using Mentho-Laxene, he is never troubled any more. We have bought six bottles since we began its use and many thanks to you for the good medicine and The St. Louis Star for the advertisement, which called it to our attention."

LEGAL NOTICE

SHERIFF'S SALE IN PARTITION. On March 1, 1924, under decree of the Circuit Court, at the Courthouse door in Montgomery City, Mo., I will offer for sale at public vendue what is commonly called the Scaland farm, consisting of 286 acres, located adjacent to the town of Montgomery, Montgomery County, Mo. Mineola has a well-established reputation as a health and pleasure resort. It is located 100 miles west of St. Louis, on the State Highway leading from St. Louis to Kansas City, which will soon be constructed as a hard-surfaced road, and is also located on Loutre River, seven miles southwest of Montgomery City, which is on the Wabash Railroad, and can be reached from there via the gravel road.

The farm has a large, commodious house and other good improvements. On the farm is located the celebrated Mineola Spring, noted for its medicinal virtues, in the treatment of stomach and kidney ailments.

Loutre River furnishes bathing and fishing.

The farm is a productive one. A subdivision of the land will be made before sale date to suit purchasers.

This farm is an ideal location for a hotel, country club, health resort or sanitarium. A good opportunity for some wide-awake person to form a company and take hold and improve it for the purposes for which it is suited.

Some other town property adjacent to the farm will be sold at the same time. Terms, part cash and the balance in notes. For further particulars, address Frank H. Haight, Sheriff, either or Emil P. Rosenberg, attorney for plaintiffs, Montgomery City, Mo. (c99)

$100.00 CASH FOR AN IDEA

High-class, ambitious salesmen are invited to a Special Meeting to be held in the St. Jefferson Hotel, Monday, February 11, 10 a. m. first, to contest for $100 Cash for the best sales idea or plan for the sale of our product, the award to be decided by three competent judges, no red tape, special offer or delay; second, to learn of the unusual selling opportunity open in St. Louis today.

Business is the financing, building and selling of fine homes, and we have just acquired properties in numerous locations where we intend to build 800 elegant, modern homes of various designs and of highest standards, ranging in price from $8000 to $15,000. We are not in the Real Estate business, do not contract the building of these homes, but own all of our properties completed and sold. We finance them on our 10-year payment plan if desired.

We are enlarging our sales force to handle this $8,000,000 worth of our product as rapidly as our capacity the past year was limited.

Appeal to men of culture and refinement, and agreeable employment that will exceedingly well. We are inviting men with vision who think for themselves and investigate before making connections. Such men will learn of a new line of things that is taking place and opportunity worth considering.

Those attering to those who attend this meeting a check of $100 for the best sales idea in the form of an argument in selling of our product. The contest is open to everyone present, regardless of their affiliations or intentions. This prize will be well worth attending. Don't care to change your present employment or not.

SALESMEN WANTED

WANTED
Two District Sales Managers
For Missouri and Illinois

The Williamson Heater Co. of Cincinnati, an old, reliable and nationally known manufacturer of heating apparatus, is marketing a gas, gasoline or electric cabinet clothes dryer, known as Snow White, suitable to new homes, profession, builders, architects, and the housewife through furniture stores, gas companies, household shops, hardware stores, etc.

Snow White dries, sterilizes and bleaches clothes in 10 minutes. Its installation makes the housewife independent of weather conditions. It eliminates the drudgery of carrying the clothes outside. It permits washing and ironing to be done the same morning. In smoky communities it is indispensable. Every woman appreciates its advantages. It appeals to the professional builder, as it enhances the salability of his building. It appeals to the apartment owner in eliminating the backyard problem. To the man owning or erecting a high-grade home it sells itself. The price is less than any other laundry equipment. Every residence and apartment should have one.

Other districts operating successfully. We have definite, workable, proved methods of sales porcedure with the dealerz. Large publicity campaign now under way. Very attractive literature. This is not a job, but a business opportunity—a chance to get out of the rut. Investment in stock, royalties or State rights not necessary. The initial requirements for further proceeding are: Successful sales experience of executive nature and past earning power in excess of $3000. Second—Sufficient capital to support yourself for 60 days. Third—An unimpeachable personal record. Fourth—In order to realize the potential possibilities. To such a person we can offer a mighty interesting proposition—a real money-making opportunity.

Tell us fully of your qualifications along the above lines, and of your ability to put this over in a big way. Address the Dryer Division of The Williamson Heater Co., Cincinnati, giving your telephone number.

80 SALESMEN EARN

$7500 TO $17,000 A YEAR EACH

WITH US

Read These Records for 1923!

Glascock earned $1250 in December, his first month. Mulligan earned $1120 in December, his first month in the field. Goodman made $1500 in 15 days. We paid Mills $4128 in one month. Jones made $3526 in one month. Stark, a new man, earned $1698 in one week. Ten other salesmen made over $5000 last month. Our average man earns around $11,000. Former advertising, specialty merchandise, specialty service and stock salesmen and men who have successfully sold an idea on the one-call basis are invited to write us on our force of 80 men earning at this rate. Here is an opportunity to become a member of one of the highest paid salesforces in the country. Permanent business, no dull periods. This is not stock, real estate or insurance; exclusive territory contract, straight commission, attractive settlement, large percentage of renewals, with full commission. We are an established industrial service organization, the leaders in our line in the country. You carry proof that our service is used and highly indorsed by thousands of leading firms all over the country in all lines of business. In replying, be sure to give age and experience last five years, especially last year. References need not necessarily be mentioned, although all replies will be held in strict confidence. It is essential, however, that you give in first letter a complete description of the nature of your previous activity. Only experienced salesmen need apply. Box J-323, Post-Dispatch. (c)

As a Poet Sees the Boy Lincoln

"Abraham Lincoln, his hand and pen.
He will be good, but God knows when."

Richard Le Gallienne thinks there was something of the Huck Finn and the Tom Sawyer types in young Abe — This distinguished writer studies the boyhood of the great President and concludes that he was a good and manly lad yet in no sense goody-goody or sissy ::

By RICHARD LE GALLIENNE.

IN AN old copybook used by Lincoln at the age of 14, and still preserved, is scratched in a boyish hand:

Abraham Lincoln
his hand and pen.
He will be good but
God knows when.

A good lad the young Abraham always was in the manly sense of that term, but in the copybook, "goody-goody" sense, never! He was already, as a boy, just as he continued to be as a man, far too much of an all-round human being for that. Seldom indeed has the dictum that "the boy is father to the man" had more striking proof than in Lincoln's case. He dared to do all that does become a boy. "Abe was right out in the woods about as soon as he was weaned," his cousin and schoolmate, Dennis Hanks, tells us, "fishin' in the crick, settin' traps fur rabbits an' muskrats, goin' on coon hunts with Tom an' me an' the dogs; follerin' up bees to find bee trees, an' drappin corn for his pappy. Mighty interestin' life fur a boy." * * *

But, like all good sportsmen, he hated deliberate cruelty, and his first childish compositions at school were written in protest against such boyish deviltry as catching terrapins and putting coals of fire on their backs.

Hunting ran in the family. His father, Tom Lincoln, though a good carpenter when he had a mind to it, was much better at hunting than at either carpentering or farming, and Abe's Uncle Mordecai had been a famous hand with his gun since, when a mere lad, he had shot the Indian who had murdered his father and was making off to the woods with his little brother Tom, then a child of 4.

Indeed, on his father's side, humble and poverty-stricken as their immediate circumstances were, Abraham Lincoln came by a rich inheritance of character. His father's family for generations had been wealthy ironmasters, with the virility and the gifts for organizing and ruling their fellows which ironmasters have ever been called on to possess. Though his own father happened to be shiftless and devil-me-care, albeit a kind husband and father for all that, this family virility ran strong in his son Abraham's blood, and with it an ambition to be and do something in the world.

In this determination he had his mother for a devoted ally. There wasn't much that poor Nancy Hanks could do for him, hard-working pioneer housewife that she was, but it was at her knee that he learned his letters and listened to the Bible stories, fairy tales and country legends which did much to determine the cast of his mind. When she died and his father took another wife, Sarah Johnston, the boy Abraham, then 10 years old, was fortunate in finding a second mother no less kind than his own, and better able to understand and to aid his ambitious spirit.

She it was, with the assistance of old Dennis Hanks, who helped him to get his first book, "The Arabian Nights;" and when, after supper, he'd sit by the chimney lost in his reading, "Aunt Sairy'd never let the children pester him. She always said Abe was goin' to be a great man some day. An' she wasn't goin' to have him hindered."

As one can imagine, "books wasn't as plenty as wildcats," but if the boy Lincoln's library was small, it was good, and he knew every book in it by heart. It consisted of the Bible, "Aesop's Fables," "Robinson Crusoe," "Pilgrim's Progress," a History of the United States, Weems' "Life of Washington," the Statutes of Indiana, the Life of Benjamin Franklin and the Speeches of Henry Clay.

Of Weems' "Life of Washington" a characteristic story is told. Lincoln had borrowed it from his schoolmaster, Crawford, a surly and mean-spirited man, and, having taken it to bed in the loft of the family cabin and read as long as his "nubbin" of candle lasted, he had placed it between the logs of the cabin, to read again with the morning light.

A rainstorm came on in the night and soaked it through. Unable to pay for it, he took it to the schoolmaster and offered to work out its value. Crawford fixed the exorbitant price of three days' work, to which the boy agreed only with a bitter determination to get even with the master. By this time he had developed a knack of doggerel rhyming, and he found a good subject in Crawford's preposterous nose, to which he gave "a fame as wide as to the Wabash and the Ohio."

Once started with books and writing, there was no stopping him. But paper and writing materials were even harder to get than books. Here his chum, Dennis Hanks, his elder by 10 years, once more came to the rescue, as he tells us in his own quaint language:

"Me 'n' Abe spelled through Webster's spellin' book twicet before he got tired. Then he tuk to writin' on the puncheon floor, the fence rails and the wooden fire shovel, with a bit o' charcoal. We got some wrappin' paper over to Gentryville, an' I made ink out o' blackberry brierroot an' copperas. It pestered Tom a heap to have Abe writin' all over everything thataway, but Abe was just wrapped up in it.

"'Denny,' he says to me many a time, 'look at that, will you. Abraham Lincoln! That stands fur me. Don't look a blamed bit like me.'

"An' he'd stand an' study it a spell. 'Peared to mean a heap to Abe."

Lincoln indeed thus early seems to have had a premonition that the name he was so boyishly fond of writing, after the manner of boys by no means destined to greatness, was to mean something in the world; and later, while still a very young man, he was often heard to say, "not in joke, but seriously, as if he were deeply impressed rather than elated with the idea":

"I shall some day be President of the United States!"

For all his humble conditions, there was evidently no "inferior complex" in Abraham Lincoln—those old ironmasters had looked after that—but there were likewise no signs of arrogance or youthful conceit. Already in the young Lincoln, a boy with all that gaiety and companionableness for all comers which made an affectionate welcome for him wherever he appeared, there was a deep, sad vein of philosophic and religious reflectiveness, a cosmic sense of, at once, the greatness and the littleness of man.

Like Socrates, he was always asking questions. Whenever a preacher, a circuit rider, a Judge, a lawyer, a stump-speaking politician or a schoolmaster would come riding by and stop at his father's door, Abe would come hopping out on his long legs, throw one over the top rail and begin firing questions. His father would tell him to stop, but "There's so darned many things I want to know," the son would retort, "an' how else am I goin' to git to know 'em?"

As a mere child, Abraham had taught himself his first lessons in public speaking from these traveling orators, and we are told that one of his chief delights was to gather his playmates about him and preach and thump until he had his auditors frightened or in tears.

When his mother was too busy to attend chapel he would repeat the sermon to her, with all the ministerial tricks of eloquence, gravely, from the beginning to the closing "Amen." Later he would often walk 15 miles to the courthouse at Boonville to listen to the trials, for very early his dream was to be a lawyer. When he got back home, he would get up mock trials and defend imaginary prisoners.

"Abe was right out in the woods," Dennis Hanks tells us, "settin' traps fur rabbits an' muskrats," etc.

Keeping the store at Gentryville added no little to his knowledge of human nature, and particularly the trip he occasionally would take on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans, as "bow hand" of some crazy craft laden with various merchandise. There was a good deal of Huckleberry Finn in the boy Lincoln's composition, and what he learned on these trips is easy to imagine. Probably, indeed, if one were asked to name the best possible kind of education for a future President of the United States the answer would be the education Lincoln was thus able to gain for himself in these multifarious ways.

And, with all his ambition, all his determination to rise above his surroundings and write his name across his country as he first wrote it on the trees of his father's lots, he was always conscientiously ready to do what Carlyle has called "the duty that lies nearest." It didn't matter what it was, he was always laughingly on the job, and always with some good story to tell to keep his companions in good humor. The ax that was put in his hands at the age of 10, when he helped his father to make his first clearing, was seldom out of his hands; and, as he himself said, "from that till within his twenty-third year, he was almost constantly handling that most useful instrument." He was not called "the rail-splitter" for nothing, and even as a lad, with his 6 feet 4 inches and his great strength, he was already worth three men.

"My, how he could chop!" said old Hanks. "His ax would flash and bite into a sugar tree or a white-more, and down it would come. If you heard him fellin' trees in a clearin' you would say there was three men at work, the way the trees fell."

He was a good carpenter, too, and his father would hire him out to the neighbors. There are houses still standing in and near Gentryville on which, it is said, he worked.

Lincoln had the sweet temper that sometimes goes with strength; but, for all his gentleness, when put to it he was a redoubtable fighter, and no one asked for a fight without getting it and regretting the request. One story is told of his handling a bully, throwing him down, holding him there as if he had been a child, and then rubbing "smartweed" into his face and eyes till the fellow bellowed with pain; and this he did without a sign of anger, washing his victim's face for him afterward. The bout ended in the two men becoming lifelong friends.

Not for nothing is Abraham Lincoln held up as an example for American boyhood. If ever there was a "manly" American boy, it was he. If he was not the original Tom Sawyer or Huckleberry Finn, he might well have been; and he was a "good kid," too, without a tinge of priggishness, or copybook propriety, a loyal son to his father, a tender, knightly son to his mother, and withal a lad of high ideals, with a will to make the best of himself and to serve his country as no other single American has ever served it.

THRILLERS IN REAL LIFE

TOLD BY IRVIN S. COBB

THE DEAD HAND WHICH CONVICTED A SLAYER

One of the reporters at a famous New York murder trial describes the most sensational moment in proceedings, and it came to tired courtroom like a thunderclap — There was only circumstantial evidence against Albert Wolter, who had killed pretty little 17-year-old Ruth Wheeler, until prosecutor in matter-of-fact way introduced a gruesome exhibit that clinched the case :: :: :: ;;

This is the first of a series of six feature articles by Irvin S. Cobb, in which the well-known newspaper man, story writer and humorist, will describe some of his most interesting experiences. The articles are vivid, compact and true. Moreover, Mr. Cobb knows how to be dramatic.

"What did you find, please?" "I found clutched in this hand six human hairs."

EVERY big criminal trial has its big moments—when the prisoner takes the stand, when the lawyers make their summing-up speeches, when the jury brings in the verdict—but these come at spaced intervals, like the climaxes of a play, dividing the action into separate acts.

The supreme scene of all breaks, nearly always, with no warning. Often it grows out of some seemingly trivial incident, some seemingly unimportant bit of testimony.

Nearly every time it comes as a surprise to one side or the other, sometimes it is a surprise to both sides.

But when it does come, it comes big with importance for the man or the woman whose life is the stake in the game, and on the instant the atmosphere of the courtroom changes. The reporters hunch their shoulders above the press table and send their pencils racing across the copy paper on the hop, skip and jump. The lolling jurymen straighten in their chairs. The judge on the bench bends forward, alert and watchful. Heads among the spectators come frontward at the same angle, like an assemblage at prayer.

The opposing lawyers are on their feet, one fighting to get this evidence in its entirety, the other fighting to keep it out or to blunt down its edge and cripple its force. It is the Big Moment.

One of the great murder trials that took place in New York was that of Albert Wolter for the murder of Ruth Wheeler. Albert Wolter was a half-grown immigrant boy, a sinister compound of ignorance and guile. He lived on the top floor of a tenement house with a girl called Katchen Miller.

There were no high lights to Katchen Miller. She worked as a kitchen drudge for $7 a week in a German cafe and, living on her earnings, Albert Wolter took his ease. His idle hands found some particularly bad work to do.

In the Help Wanted columns of a morning paper one day Wolter read the advertisements of a typewriting school seeking places for its graduates, and he answered three of them by mail, inviting the applicants to call.

Luck saved the first two girls. They distrusted the look of the house and turned back at the door.

Finally, on the third day, which was Good Friday, came Ruth Wheeler, 17 years old, a pretty, red-haired, blue-eyed girl, born in Alabama of native American parentage.

On this Friday morning she went to the school, dressed in her best clothes, and the principal handed her a postal card signed with a rubber stamp, "A. A. Wolter, Secretary," and giving an address in East Seventy-fifth street.

Ruth rode on a street car to East Seventy-fifth street. Two women tenants in the building saw her mounting the steps to Wolter's room. She never came down.

That night Wolter and Katchen Miller fled to other lodgings. The next day he was arrested—for abduction only.

On the third day one of Wolter's recent neighbors found a bundle wrapped in burlap on the fire escape outside the window of the flat lately deserted and discovered what was left of little Ruth Wheeler — a headless trunk. She had been choked, beaten, dismembered with a knife and burned with fire.

I doubt if there ever was a crime that stirred New York to deeper levels. In a little more than a month Wolter was facing a jury before Judge Warren W. Foster in the Criminal Courts Building. The Assistant District Attorney in charge of the prosecution, Frank Moss, had prepared a case that was well-nigh faultless.

Having to rely entirely upon circumstantial evidence for convicting Wolter, he had overlooked nothing and provided for everything.

For example, he had more than a hundred physical exhibits ready for introduction at the proper time—fragments of bone out of a fireplace where Wolter tried to destroy his victim's body, a string of fire-blackened, blue glass beads, a charred scrap of embroidery from a shirtwaist, a bent hatpin, a pathetically small gold finger ring, a little wisp of singed hair, even ashes and cinders of coal and wood, each in a small wooden box, with a sliding glass top.

At the press table we thought the Big Moment had been reached when Ruth Wheeler's sisters took the stand to tell of her departure from home on the last morning of her life, of their search for her that night after she failed to return, and—worst ordeal of all for them—to look at and touch some of the articles in the glass-topped little boxes.

I think no one who was there will ever forget how Adelaide Wheeler looked. She was a slender, pretty girl, with a fair skin, which seemed dead white against the background of her black hat and black mourning gown, and a great coil of red hair on her head.

One by one, she took the objects which Mr. Moss handed to her and in answer to questions said, clearly and quietly: "Yes, I recognize this bow of ribbon. I tied it in Ruthie's hair myself that morning," or "Yes, sir, I know this ring; it was my sister's and she gave it to Ruth on her sixteenth birthday. I would know it anywhere."

Nearly everybody who was there wanted to cry; a great many did cry, when she took into her black-gloved hands an umbrella and said it had been her Christmas gift to Ruth. It was such a simple, plain, little black umbrella.

But Wolter didn't cry. He stared at the dead girl's sister—only a year or two had separated the sisters in age and they were said to have looked very much alike—with a steady, insolent stare.

As I was saying just now, we reporters thought the Big Moment had come and gone when the sisters quit the stand, after perfunctory cross-examinations by Wolter's lawyers. But it hadn't.

A little later that same day, Mr. Moss called as a witness for the State, Dr. George S. Huntington, the eminent anatomist. And now it developed for the first time that the body of Ruth Wheeler had been privately disinterred and that Dr. Huntington after a series of wonderfully minute measurements, was prepared to establish the complete loop of evidence necessary to prove the corpus delicti—the body of the crime.

The reporters slumped back in their chairs. As a rule, expert testimony doesn't make interesting reading, and we welcomed the prospect of a little respite from a strain that had been wearing us down fiercely all day.

Presently it came out that Dr. Huntington had found the missing left hand.

All along we supposed that the left hand, like its fellow, had been cut off by the murderer and destroyed separately. Now we learned that the fire afterwards had burned the left arm in two, but that the hand was caught up under the shelter of the right arm hollow and escaped practically intact.

This point did not seem particularly important though, but Mr. Moss had something else in store.

William Travers Jerome, at once the most brilliant and the most spectacular prosecutor I ever saw anywhere, would have worked up the denouement which was now at hand as skillfully as a trained playwright. James W. Osborne would have done the same thing; for Osborne, like Jerome, has the dramatic instinct highly developed.

Moss, however, was of a different stamp.

Slowly, [illegible] unaware of the sensation he was about to unloose, he produced the skeleton of the little hand which Dr. Huntington had found. It was articulated and mounted in one of the glass-topped cases.

"Doctor," said Moss, droningly, "did you, in the

Those Mysterious Shipwrecks—

California scientist believes that neither erratic ocean currents, tidal waves nor other maritime phenomena caused long series of unexplained disasters on the Pacific coast—Many ships, at night or in fog, have crashed upon the rocks when navigators thought they were far from shore—A recent tragedy involved the loss of seven U. S. Navy destroyers and 23 lives—And latest theorist holds that the Sierra Nevada mountains are to blame! ::

THE long series of mysterious wrecks along the American shore of the Pacific Ocean, that "graveyard of ships," may have found its solution at last. From Vancouver Island, in British Columbia, to the Gulf of Lower California, extends the danger strip. And upon reefs, islands, isolated rocks and the shore itself hundreds of ships have come to grief.

Year by year, the battered old hulks of the wrecked ships break up and disappear, sometimes not a trace finally remaining of the catastrophe which happened there.

In scores of these disasters the story is the same—the commanding officers believed that they were miles from land or from any danger when the crash occurred, at night or in fog, and the unfortunate vessel's doom was sealed.

The situation is faintly reminiscent of the sirens of ancient legend, such as those whose coaxing voices fell harmless upon the stopped ears of Ulysses and his companions as the Greeks sailed past the dangerous shore to which the sirens would have lured them.

A sudden plunge from supposed safety to shipwreck was the fate which the sirens tried to bring upon seafarers when the world was young. It is just that kind of a fate which has overtaken many stout vessels along our western coast. But the siren of the Pacific, as an investigator in California believes he has disclosed her, is silent, invisible and furtive.

Perhaps the most spectacular of all these strange maritime tragedies was the one enacted on the night of Sept. 8, last, when seven destroyers of the U. S. Navy piled onto the rocks off Point Honda, California, while the navigators presumed that they were steering a safe course. But 22 men lost their lives that night, and the wrecked ships represented an outlay of $15,000,000.

Since the deplorable affair of the navy destroyers, scores of ships have been wrecked off shore in this area of the Pacific Ocean or have been in distress. On Oct. 9, six steamers were wrecked in one day along the coast, leaving 110 men adrift in small boats, besides a tanker which was missing, with 32 officers and crew.

On the very day of the disaster to the destroyers the liner Cuba, bound from Balboa to San Francisco, went on the rocks off the California coast, her passengers and crew being rescued from open boats. Then the tanker Hoven of the U. S. Shipping Board went down, and still later the steamship Flavel piled up on Pebble Beach, Cal.

All these wrecks have been mysterious. Mostly they occurred during periods of low visibility, but when compass, map and log indicated that the ship was on her proper course. Only—she wasn't, as proven by the discovery when it was too late that the vessel had gone miles closer to the shore than was intended. Result, another unexplained wreck.

When the steamer Santa Rosa plunged upon the rocks, a bright moon was shining, and the compass directions had been followed accurately. When a big, four-masted ship laden with pig iron struck a sand reef, never to be floated again, her captain had believed they were 10 miles from shore.

And the record of these strange wrecks runs back to the sixteenth century, when search began for the "Straits of Arian." Ships of all kinds and of all sizes have gone to smash upon the rocks of our western coast. In 1772, a whole fleet of merchant vessels on a voyage from China was wrecked off the coast of Oregon.

Perhaps two ships on the Pacific coast to one on the Atlantic coast have undergone this form of shipwreck—and the difference would be much larger if measured in the ratio of shipping which sails along the two coasts. Yet the Pacific received its name from its placidity, as compared with the other ocean!

Following every big disaster in the history Pacific coast shipping there have been rumors tidal waves and of freak currents, but such attempts at solving the mysteries have been discounted and again, with nothing better to take their place.

Now comes D. W. Starratt, California scientist with a new theory in explanation of these maritime puzzles. It is a surprising theory, too, and ingenious, whether or not it will be verified by investigation.

Briefly, Starratt believes that the Sierra Nevada range of mountains is to blame. It acts upon the in the shore waters as a magnet acts upon pieces of iron, he says. Ships may apparently be following their proper courses, and their compass directions, but an invisible "pull" from the mighty Sierra Nevadas brings them closer and closer to shore and finally they crash upon the rocks.

Is this the weird force which, from earliest has baffled mariners along our western coast, unknown factor which has wrought the destruction of many and many a good ship?

Starratt points out that the Sierra Nevadas are mightier than the Rockies, higher and of greater mass by many times than the land along the Atlantic coast. The excessive weight, mass and mineral content of the Sierra Navadas cause them to exert a strong "pull" on vessels in coastal waters, he believes, drawing them out of their courses toward the shore. As partial verification, experiments are being made in Starratt's laboratory to measure atomic attraction.

"The moon, with its many millions of cubic miles of matter lifts the water of the ocean several feet twice every 24 hours," says Starratt. "Now, one of the laws which Sir Isaac Newton discovered is the attraction of every particle of matter for every other particle. Since the moon contains matter like that of the earth, one may conclude that an agglomeration of matter will exert a similar force per cubic mile. Surveyors, using their instruments where there is a range of mountains on one side only, always make allowance for this pull.

"Study of a relief map of the United States will astonish one, from the preponderance of matter on the western coast which it reveals. Taking the length and breadth and height along the Pacific and the Atlantic coasts, one may calculate the 'pull' just as astronomers calculate the 'pull' of the moon upon the waters of the earth.

"By imaging a ship as a plumb bob, which closely resembles it in freedom to swing under pull, one may see the invisible lines of force radiating from the huge bulk of the Sierra Nevada range."

Of course, the drawing power of the mountain masses is made strong by their mineral nature, which adds to the density of the matter. The Sierra Nevadas, in the region of most mineral

A Strange New Theory About Them

Prof. D. W. Starratt, of Oakland, Cal., at whose laboratory experiments are being made in connection with atomic attraction, basis of the latest doctrine in the mysterious shipwrecks of the Pacific.

tain the great "mother lode," or gold vein, from which most of the world's present supply of gold has come, and most of the silver mined in the Western United States.

The purely magnetic possibilities in Starratt's theory are very interesting, although the factor with which he chiefly concerns himself is atomic attraction. The laws of magnetism which apply to the laboratory magnet, to the telephone and other practical applications of the force are well known.

But about magnetism in mass our definite information is scanty. Magnetic storms, sometimes of vast extent and sufficiently severe to cripple telegraph and telephone service, occur upon earth. There is believed to be a connection between these magnetic storms and sun-spot activities. More than a few scientists regard the sun as a source of electrical energy, which varies according to laws not yet understood.

But remembering the enormous mineral content of the Sierra Nevadas, it seems not impossible that they may exert a purely magnetic power. And with a varying flow of electrical energy from the sun, sometimes of proportions sufficient to cause magnetic storms as distinguished from the common electrical storms, it seems likely that the pulling power of a huge natural magnet like a mountain range would be stronger at certain times than at others.

A puzzling feature of the unusually large number of wrecks along the Pacific coast this winter has been the comparative lack of bad weather. Storms have been few and fog negligible. Even the rainfall periods have come with less emphasis than the general average. Yet the ships have continued to pile up on the rocks.

For one thing, Starratt believes that the increasing use of steel in ship construction has had much to do with increasing the number of maritime disasters along the western coast. A pulling power from the shore, whether of atomic or of magnetic origin, would have greater effect upon steel floating on water than upon wood similarly floating, because of steel's greater density.

Then, mineral cargoes may have an influence, too. Huge quantities of oil aboard a ship would seem to give the "pull" from shore a better chance to deviate the ship's course. And it is a fact that the tankers apparently are in greater peril of these strange wrecks than passenger ships or other freighters.

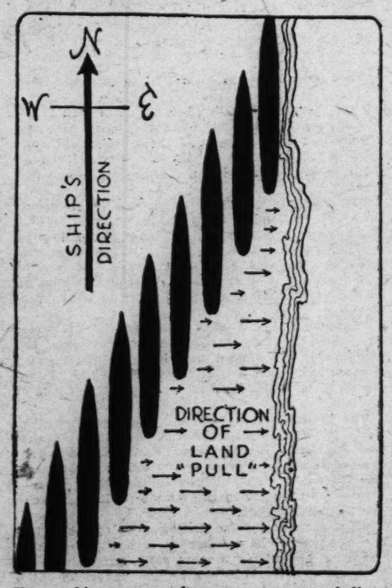
Thus, if Starratt is correct in his theory, it was the invisible "pull" of the high Sierras which drew the seven U. S. Navy destroyers to their ruin last September. Ship after ship—the Delphy, the Young, the Woodbury, the Chauncey, the S. P. Lee, the Fuller and the Nicholas—crashed onto the rocks off Point Honda, while their navigators followed the compass north, believing themselves far from danger.

Doubtless they did follow the compass directions. But another power had been exerting its influence, if Starratt's theory is correct, and for hours the "pull" of the Sierra Nevadas had been fastened upon the navy vessels' heavy steel construction, slowly but steadily drawing them sideways. All the wisdom of skilled sailormen could not balk the deadly lure of the mountains which parallel the coast line.

The first steamer to sail along the Pacific coast was the British ship Beaver, which rounded Cape Horn in 1836. It was sunk in a sudden wreck on the shore of British Columbia. Since then, says Starratt, wrecks in the Pacific coast region have increased about in proportion to the increased weight, or tonnage, of the ships.

Numerous and sometimes fantastic have been the speculations in past years to account for these unexplained wrecks. All the old theories have been studied by Starratt, who says:

"Well do I remember, when I lived on Puget Sound, of hearing as a reason for the many wrecks



How a ship may steer its proper course, as indicated by the compass, and at the same time be moving sideways, closer and closer to the coast and its dangers, under the steady force of the "land-pull" which, scientist says, has caused numerous wrecks.

each year off the coasts of Washington, Oregon and Vancouver, that a terrible ocean current continuously set in toward shore. In traveling from Cape Flattery to the mouth of the Columbia River, one will find the 'ribs' of stranded ships every few miles. The mysterious ocean current which was talked about does not exist, but the high, dense 'continent pull' does exist.

"Visualize a great ship steering north along the coast, making for Puget Sound. I have in mind just such an instance—an English iron ship loaded with railroad material, which was wrecked on the coast of Oregon. The skipper makes no allowance for mythical ocean currents, for he has not encountered any. And ocean currents have physical aspects which are too plain to escape discovery.

"But neither has the skipper allowed for the atomic attraction of matter, and the preponderance of the huge mass of atoms to landward. He is making a true course—true to the compass—as far as the angle of his vessel is concerned. Yet he is pulled broadside to the coast, and the fate of his ship is the fate of many others."

The great Western backbone of the continent extends about 1000 miles, from the forty-ninth parallel to the Mexican border, and averaging a mile in height. The pull of this extra mass above the average level of the earth's surface has an effect, perceptible or not, on loose objects and especially on ships at sea, according to the theory under discussion here.

Nor are the wreck phenomena along the coast the only proofs that atomic attraction is an element to be reckoned with in shipping, according to Starratt, who says:

"This same law acts to draw vessels together on dark nights and in fogs. There are instances like that of the steamer Chester and the steamer Oceanic coming together in the Golden Gate, despite the efforts of their pilots to avoid it. A somewhat similar case was that of the steamer Walla Walla and a lumber vessel colliding. There was the vessel Rio de Janeiro which went too close to the shore of the Golden Gate and sank, never to be seen again.

"In none of these cases was atomic attraction considered as a factor at the time. Yet I have no doubt that the day is coming when the men who navigate our ships will be able to calculate land-pull and atomic-pull generally with a sureness which will largely remove this strange menace of the tranquil Pacific Ocean."

One method already suggested is a fuller utilization of the radio. Already there are compass stations along the Pacific coast. By communicating with two of them and employing a well-known process of triangulation, vessels at sea may verify their position even at night and in storm. It has been suggested that such stations be placed along the coast at regular intervals, say every 25 miles.

The seven destroyers which were wrecked last September disregarded the bearings sent out by the compass station at Point Arguello. Officers testified afterwards that they believed the radio bearings were erroneous, and in addition there was some confusion over bearings being sent to the destroyer Reno, as it went to the aid of the Cuba. Moreover, said officers, the air was "jammed" with messages to and from vessels in distress. Lastly, the squadron commanders did not suspect that they were anything like so close to the shore.

As in the cases of many other navigators who had preceded them on that deceitful coast, the "pull" of the Sierra Nevada Mountains had outwitted them, if Starratt's theory is correct.

Flammarion Tells Of His

Noted French astronomer and scientist, after investigating some 5600 separate cases of alleged supernatural manifestations, insists that "there are invisible beings"—Weird, unearthly occurrences which are vouched for by priests, educators, business, professional and French Army men—The "haunt" of Calvados, which kept church dignitaries and municipal authorities excited, and sometimes frightened, for many months :: ::

Camille Flammarion, famous astronomer and scientist, is now 81 years old, with the unusual record of having devoted 60 years of his life to the study of the heavens and the production of scientific books which are famous. On June 14, 1922, this celebrated man was given a birthday fete at the Sorbonne by the Academie Francais in Paris, on which occasion tributes were received from scientists and astronomers all over the world. The most recent writings of Flammarion have dealt with the mysteries of death and what lies beyond. The famous author now presents testimony that he has painfully gathered as to the existence of shades or spirits on the other side of death.

INVISIBLE and often malevolent spooks—spirits of persons long dead, who try to reveal their existence after death by working strange happenings in scenes they once frequented—fill several hundred pages of a scientific study by M. Camille Flammarion, the noted astronomer and author, which is causing an unusual amount of discussion.

In his "Haunted Houses," M. Flammarion has made an authenticated review of such phenomena.

It is no book for nervous old ladies who need a few minutes of literary relaxation before retiring. It is a book to be kept well out of the reach of younger members of the family who are unable to appreciate scientific values.

But it is a book which undoubtedly will be read with deep interest in all parts of the world, and promises to be one of the most important factors in reviving the study of "haunts"—a subject which has been largely ignored since a progressive white population in America rid ...uled the belief of uneducated negroes in such manifestations of an existence after death.

"But there are invisible beings," insists M. Flammarion, and he has gathered testimony affecting 5600 separate cases, most of them highly authenticated and all worthy of the attention of anyone really seeking new light on the mystery of life and death.

"To take my observers as victims of hallucinations," he contends, "is not admissible," and for this stand there is some justification, as letters printed by M. Flammarion are signed by names of priests, educators, business men, professionals and men of high repute in the French army, against whom no charge of fraudulent misrepresentation seems possible.

"Suppose a jury should give the verdict: 'Whereas 10 persons saw the accused commit a crime, but 40,000,000 others failed to see him do it, the accused is acquitted!' Yet this is the verdict which is constantly given to our loyal researchers in the realm of mystery."

The French investigator goes back as far as 447 B. C. for examples of "haunted houses." In that year Pausanias, the Lacedemonian General, was condemned to die of hunger in the temple of Minerva. For years his spirit—although unseen by anyone—showed its presence in the temple by horrible cries and frightful noises.

Then there is the fascinating story told by Pliny the Younger of how Athenodose, having bought a "haunted house" for a mere song, suddenly found his literary labors halted by the apparition of a sorrowful old man who seemed to be dragging heavy chains behind him. Athenodore followed his visitor to the courtyard—and there the vision disappeared. Athens' Judges were summoned, and after a careful search, a skeleton wrapped in chains was found. A proper burial was ordered—and the ... this haunted house ceased forever!

Studies of "Haunted Houses"

A daily record immediately started shows, among other freakish inclinations of the Calvados "haunt":

Oct. 18 (1875)—Number of witnesses increasing, the vicar deciding to stay at the chateau. About 11 o'clock every one awakened by noise of great ball bumping from step to step on stairway from second to first floor.

Oct. 19—Cure of M., at our request, has come to sleep here. He heard very well heavy steps descending staircase slowly and is convinced it is "supernatural."

Nov. 10—At 1 a. m. a galloping in the vestibule and staircases. Heavy blow on banister is heard, followed by heavier one on door of "green room" in which slept the abbe. A tempest with wind, thunder and lightning made the night more horrible.

* * * Shortly after everyone heard three anguished cries, coming from outside, but approaching the house. Then a very long cry, as of a woman calling from outside, then three or four loud cries in the vestibule and stairway.

A month later the "haunt" adopted new tactics. After a few initiatory cryings, heard from locked and barred rooms, chairs were found turned upside down, placed on top of tables, sofas overturned, pendulums taken from clocks and hung over picture frames, music books were found inside pianos and, finally, bed clothing piled in the middle of the abbe's bedroom.

The climax arrived at 1 a. m., Jan. 29, 1876, when "we heard the voice of a man in the corridor of the first floor. It seemed to cry twice, 'Ha! ha!' and immediately 10 poundings were heard, which shook the entire house. Arising rapidly we could find or see nothing, but at the door of my wife's room a large earthen plate lay broken in 10 pieces."

The following day special masses were ordered at Lourdes, an exorcism was read by orders of the Bishop, and "everything stopped."

Br-r-r-r! Calvados is much pleasanter in apple-blossom time.

"Haunts" in France, moreover, are not confined to any special region. Down in the Correze, superstitious folk are still talking about the spook-ridden farmhouse known as "Constantine." M. Flammarion's study of this series of phenomena is supported by the official documents of M. Maxwell, a deputy of the Procureur-General, Col. de Rochas, a retired army officer, and M. Delmas, Mayor of the town of Objat.

Two old ladies named Faure and a 15-year-old servant girl, Marie Pascarel, occupied the farmhouse when the "haunt" appeared a little more than 25 years ago. Suddenly plates began to jump from shelves, Mme. Faure's bed was overturned and newspapers were scattered about the house by unseen hands.

"On opening one of these newspapers two drops of blood were found on an inside page. Five minutes later Marie Pascarel entered the room and counted six drops of blood on the same paper."

The same day a score of articles were broken in the house, including an iron boiling pot. Plates were snatched from the hands of the frightened domestic. For several days the pots hanging on the creamery wall had an annoying habit of suddenly flopping off their hooks; on one occasion Mme. Faure saw her bed parade several yards across her room.

The town Mayor was called in, and with official pomp placed brooms, plates and fire bellows on a table. He suspected Marie Pascarel of having something to do with the mysterious goings on which threatened the safety of his domain. But suddenly, according to M. Flammarion's report, beneath M. Delmas' very eyes, the broom was thrown into the fireplace with great violence. And the servant was some distance away from the table at the time.

"The ideas of the honorable Mayor were completely changed," comments M. Flammarion, "when, a moment later, he saw the bellows hop off the table and, avoiding several pans and kettles, prop itself against the side of the chimneypiece. He immediately ordered the house evacuated, and remarked that at the moment she went through the doorway young Marie Pascarel received a sharp blow in the back from an 18-inch wooden bar.

"A few hours later fire broke out in the Constantine farmhouse—a strange fire in the bed of Mme. Faure. Plenty of smoke but no flames, which suddenly vanished. The same phenomenon had been previously noticed coming from the skirts of Mme. Faure."

Either the "haunt" was tired or Marie Pascarel decided not to play any more tricks on her aged employers, for the next day, concludes the Paris author, "Marie left the service of Mme. Faure—and since then the calm of their household has not been troubled."

Yet M. Flammarion discards all suggestion of fraud on the grounds that it would only serve to lessen the reputation of its perpetrator, especially in an area where ancient traditions are observed as closely as in the Correze; besides, he asks, how could any young girl perform tricks which the cleverest prestidigitator could not repeat thrice without revealing his methods?

"No, like the chateau of Calvados," he insists, "the Correze incidents show the existence of invisible beings," and proceeds with scores of other forms of manifestations tending to support his theories of an external intelligence which the world may some day recognize and study to its material benefit.

For instance, in 1914, Mme. Boussoulade, wife of a well-known functionary of the French Ministry of Finance, and her three children decided to seek safety in Auvergne, convinced that war would bring the Germans into Paris. In September stupefying experiences were reported by all members of the family. Pictures were torn from their hooks, brass flower pots torn from their hangings and fell on the heads of servants, keys turned mysteriously in doors, imprisoning members of the family until a locksmith could be found.

A nephew, while sleeping, felt his bed lifted vertically; his cries aroused a servant, who witnessed this phenomenon. Clocks were opened and pendulums twisted, not a chair in the house remained in place!

As in similar incidents, the mystery ceased when a young nephew left to join the army, but M. Flammarion does not hold him responsible for the occurrences, although they ceased with his departure.

Falling photographs are the commonest types of manifestations by invisible spirits, M. Flammarion has deduced. After all, he suggests, this is only natural, and thousands of cases have been recorded where either a photograph tumbles or a clock stops at the very hour of death of someone identified with the article in question. At the archbishop's palace of Monaco high members of the Catholic clergy still talk in whispers of an incident which occurred during the winter of 1920-1921.

"Mgr. Beguinot, Bishop of Nimes, died at 6 a. m. on Feb. 3, 1921," relates M. Flammarion. "He was intimately friendly with Mgr. de Curel, the Bishop of Monaco, who died in 1915, and to whom he had given his portrait, a beautifully framed engraving which the Bishop of Monaco placed in his salon opposite his own portrait.

"On Feb. 3, 1921, the Episcopal Palace was occupied only by the Canon Perruchot, who, on crossing the salon, noticed the portrait fallen, the glass broken, and who immediately, he related, felt an uncontrollable impression that the fall of the portrait coincided with some misfortune."

A nephew, while sleeping, felt his bed lifted vertically; his cries aroused a servant, who witnessed this phenomenon. Clocks were opened and pendulums twisted, not a chair in the house remained in place.

"Talk about popularity! I'll hand it to you, Jarv," said Jane.

"Doesn't hurt the act any, does it, to have old Morgan Bloke's daughter appreciative of it?"

THE slim, graceful, whirling body of Jarvis Jessalyn, satin-clad, satin-shod, is a fillip to the most blase Broadwayite. Jane Jessalyn's black-fringed blue eyes, set in a small pink-and-white face, divide public favor with her tiny, white-flashing ankles and expert toes. The sleeked-back, black head of one, the pretty, flying corn-colored bob of the other, unite to collect for the pair between $2500 and $4000 weekly in revue, roof garden, musical comedy, or whatever the pair choose to favor with their graceful double presence. Nevertheless, Jarvis scowled down at two long satin cardboarded boxes. "Levre's soaking us lately."

Jane sighed. "I've been thinking the same. If white satin didn't soil so soon!"

"It does."

"I'll say if Levre does charge, he knows color and line better than Edison knows electrons."

"Yes," agreed Jarvis, reluctantly. "And you can't support a first-class reputation on tightwad costume effects."

"Should say you can't! Still—we ought to begin saving money, Jarv—some time."

"Haven't I been saying that for several years back?"

"Well, I've said it as often as you." Jane's pink-and-white prettiness could effect petulance. But it was the careless petulance of a wife of several years' standing. "That's my lip-stick you're using, Jarv."

"Looked like mine."

"I'll say a few stocks and bonds help two people to meet old age with a smile," observed Jane.

"Without some such stuff, it's nothing to meet," said Jarvis, curtly. He was staring into his mirror.

"What do you see, Jarv?"

"That hair tonic is not what it's cracked up to be, Jane. Day by day, in every way, my hair's getting thinner and thinner."

"Let me look, Jarv—— H'm—I don't think so."

* * * * * * *

Months and heels twinkle down an eternal incline. It was in May that the two, making graceful and vivacious exit hand in hand one night, as was their custom, flinging smiles on the upturned faces and applauding palms of crowded after-Lenten tables, hurried in white satin ruffs and perspiration to their dressing room and paused to face each other unsmilingly.

Behind them, at the table nearest the stage at the right of the runway, a tall, brown-eyed young thing in white-embroidered crepe and a sable coatee, was still applauding. Her gloves had split. Her handsome face was turned toward the wings which had received Jarvis Jessalyn.

"Talk about popularity! I'll hand it to you, Jarv," said Jane.

"Now, listen, Jane! If you're going to start that again"——

"I'm not starting anything. If there's something you'd rather not have mentioned at all, say so!"

"Go ahead, then."

"When it comes to be the sixth night, and her still gaping up at you with eyes like half-dollars, and her mouth open like her father's coupon scissors"——

"Doesn't hurt the act any, does it, to have old Morgan Bloke's daughter appreciative of it?"

Jane emitted short, staccato, exaggerated laughter.

"Go on," encouraged her husband, suavely. "These dressing room walls aren't sound-proofed, you know. Let everybody about the place, including the orchestra, hear you."

"Everybody, including the orchestra, knows it already."

"We can use any publicity that results." He smirked a little.

"She seems to think she can, too."

"She has a shapely head."

"And pocketbook."

"What do you mean, Jane?"

"One of these family's pets that has had almost everything she wants—that money could buy!"

"Go slow, Jane!"

She did not go slow. Like a palpitating arrow of emotion, she shot out of her scanty costume. Her pepsy blue eyes were dilated and dark.

In front of his own dressing table Jarvis was more leisurely getting out of a white satin ruff. He laid the delicate article away carefully before removing any of his makeup. "Daubed it this afternoon. Four dollars for the cleaners."

Jane was silent. A maid who had entered was discreetly helpful without words.

For all his apparent leisureliness, Jarvis was dressed for departure from the theater before she was. In the door of the dressing room he paused, lighting a cigarette. "Going right home?" he asked.

She said, briefly, that she was. "Nadine, don't bother with my hair till I get home."

"See you later, then."

She looked after the thin, supple figure, in its sleek, black garb. Often enough she went home directly the last curtain came down in maroon velvet folds. Sometimes she joined late dancing or card-playing parties that didn't tempt Jarvis. Often enough he remained downtown for an hour or so to eat and play around without her.

Thoughtfully, she slipped into the satin-lined cape which Nadine held out. Silently she sank into the back seat of the conspicuous ash-colored car which all Manhattan and Long Island knew by sight. Against the gray cushions her face tonight was not vivid.

She spoke briefly to the man. "Joe, did Mr. Jessalyn tell you to return for him?"

"No, Mrs. Jessalyn. He said he'd take a taxi home."

* * * * * * *

Under the calcium Jane can pass for 17. At a bedroom window, with the dawn breaking in cruel, revealing grayness, she is older. Huddled even in a silvery chiffon negligee, her graceful body betrays her thirties.

Jane once said sincerely that she detested dawn-time—that is, the pre-grayness which falls over the sleeping world like an imitation shroud. And Jarvis had agreed that it was neither fish nor fowl time, knowing not the velvet beauty of night nor the healthy bustle of sunlight.

Besides, it came at Jane's ebb-time; often enough too soon after work's end, when muscles are saturated with fatigue, and spirit knows a let-down after smilingly sustained effort.

She often privately admired Jarvis for his adaptability, his flair for primping and posing—unchanged underneath, she had always believed—cool-eyed, a little selfish, but loyal to her and fonder of her than he would ever be of another.

Of course, the world wouldn't believe this. There had been his affairs in the past, to be sure. Publicity stuff, as when he sent flowers daily to the Hungarian prima donna—and every other day he got, and Jane herself had to telephone the florist.

But that was some time back. Down in a dull hour. She turned away pettishly from the rain-silk-hung window and got into bed.

In bed, because sleep was not at hand, she frowned on the small sidelight. Her nerves were unstrung. Suddenly she got out of bed and slipped out of the room and across the hall to the living room. A gaudy heap of magazines lay on a hand-carved walnut table. She searched for one a month old. It's—what page? Nineteen—here! She had not been mistaken.

As she read the paragraph her lips curled.

"We are sure that our readers will be interested to know that H——a, the young and red-headed daughter of a well known rail man, no more lunches on Thirty-third street with Harry Semp, son of the oil king. It seems a railroad president does not welcome a Texan oiler as son-in-law. H——a was consoled with a brand-new twin-six Hyllndic. She has been fined twice this week for speeding. We would beg to remind Father and Mother H—— that in H——a's favor Harry was preceded by Ted Willis, the song writer, and Dan was preceded by Jean de Frere, of no visible occupation. We fear that some day the warm-hearted H——a will entertain a fancy too strong for parental force to overcome."

Jane flung the sheet back on the table. The—! But in her thin silk nightgown she shivered slightly and formed a wish that young Semp had been more of a Lochinvar—or Willis, or De Frere.

There was the faint click of a latchkey. She crept quickly back into bed, and her eyes were closed when Jarvis entered his own room, adjoining hers.

He moved about rather carefully, as if not to awaken her. There was the click of a cigarette case; and presently she felt, rather than saw, that he was standing in the doorway looking at her.

"Asleep, Jane?"

"Dozing—that's all."

"Guess I better spill it right away."

She was up at once on a propping white elbow. She knew that tone of Jarv's. Business!

"What?" she demanded. There was in her voice the fear of every professional worker. What if a—hand?

"Stamm was in the Algowan grill tonight. Mentioned next year's contract."

"It's about time!"

"Mentioned $2000—and a new Russian pair he's going to bring over."

"Two thousand for us!"

A New Sensation in Happiness
A Startling Discovery
A Mysterious Secret

No wonder men and women everywhere are excited over this startling discovery of a universal law and power by which a new meaning is given to every pleasure, function, action and to every joy, gratification and happiness.

Who could resist becoming excited if the pleasurable realization of life in all of its phases were multiplied and intensified?

You, too, will become excited over this great discovery because it will give you a new thrill—an intense and lasting thrill.

This new and startling discovery of a supreme natural law of life, health and pleasure is joyfully revolutionizing the lives of thousands of men and women all over the world. It is bringing them a new kind of pleasure, happiness, health, strength, confidence, energy and power of personality and success. It is giving them such marvelous energy of mind and body, and they enjoy life so fully, so intensely, so dominatingly, and so thoroughly, that the old life to which they were accustomed appears totally inferior in every respect.

The possession of this new and mysterious natural law gives a new idea of how truly vital, alive, joyful, healthy and happy a human being can be—how easily one can be overflowing with life, energy, bubbling vitality and the fire of triumph. Although thoroughly natural and simple, nevertheless it accomplishes seemingly impossible results without sacrifice, active effort or cost.

A new life with a unique thrill is yours when you possess this newly discovered natural law of supreme life, health and pleasure. It is no longer necessary for any one to spend money for treatments and drugs and dieting and books and cures and pills and devices, because perfect and supreme health and life are absolutely free through this marvelous natural law.

Why be weak, why be ill, why be fat, why be thin, when you may, absolutely free, become in every way perfect and supreme through this sensational natural law?

This extraordinary natural law yields amazing nerve force, amazing energy, amazing vitality and amazing power of every character of mind and body—a new and superior life.

Through this sensational natural law you may have all of the benefits of exercise without exercise; all of the benefits of conscious deep breathing without conscious deep breathing; the full and complete benefit of every vitamine and organic iron without drugs or dieting; all of the benefits of medicine and drugs without medicine and drugs; all of the benefits of auto-suggestion, hypnotism and psychology without auto-suggestion, hypnotism and psychology; all of the benefits of dieting and every other kind of treatment, device or assistance without these treatments.

Through this amazing natural law, anyone can rid self permanently of every human weakness. This unique, natural law gives immunity from every disease of the inferior life.

No matter who you are, this natural law can demonstrate to you that you do not yet know the full meaning of joy, pleasure happiness, vitality and gratification.

This natural law is ready to give you a new realization of the meaning of life and enjoyment.

This extraordinary and Universal Law does not require you to actively do anything or give up anything. It requires no exercise, no time, nor conscious deep breathing — no stretching, dieting, drugs nor medicine.

This natural and supreme law must not be confounded with hypnotism, auto-suggestion, psychology, spiritual science, psychic science, science, mental science, nor with electricity, osteopathy or any other method—mental or physical—ever devised in the past.

No self-hypnotizing phrases to repeat—no yielding, no recession, no giving up of anything, nothing to study, nothing to actively practice, no books to buy, nothing to memorize, no self-deception—nothing but truth—reality—Natural Law.

Perfect health cures every known and conceivable disease. This startling natural law is guaranteed to give perfect health.

If you are not enjoying life to the full—if you are in any way handicapped—if you are not in possession of all of the powers of mind and body to the highest degree, you owe it to yourself to at once procure for yourself, free of charge, this revolutionary natural law.

Through this supreme natural law, anyone may have the health and vitality of a lion or tiger.

Remember that demonstration and results are immediate and free.

This powerful natural law transforms the gloom of disease into the bloom of health, as the rays of the spring sun transform the dead soil into a "sea" of luxuriant vegetation. It is destined to revolutionize human health and happiness—Humanity.

This natural law is most marvelous, most simple, most subtle, and most powerful. It is the law of Creative Power.

Remember there is nothing active to do, nothing to study, nothing to believe, no time to waste, no habits to give up, nothing to lose—there is no mystery—it is merely Natural Law.

This secret is offered to you absolutely free. There are no "conditions" or "strings" attached to this offer. You would not be without this secret if you could imagine how delightfully transformed your life would be through the possession of this new and deeper realization of happiness. Proving Again That There Is No End to Love's Strategems

"I laughed in his face, of course."

"He's—he's insane!" Jane's cheeks were scarlet.

"No. Just oversharp."

"Why, we'll go"——

"Where, Jane? Not many miles from this home town. It happens that big money doesn't grow on a million bushes. Wish we owned a theater."

"You mean you're going to stand for"——

"Not this year. Of course not."

In the doorway he was silhouetted—slim, graceful, his black head attractive to the woman who was his wife. Clever as well as graceful, she knew. He could match his wits well enough with men like Stamm. But tonight for the first time she was a little afraid of that cleverness. Just what was he thinking now, his narrowed eyes not focussed on her?

"Not this year," he repeated to himself. "But we're not baby chicks, Jane. Bear that in mind. Some day"——

"Don't!" she cried, sharply. "You know it's bad luck to predict!"

"I'm not predicting, Jane." He laughed. "Merely thinking." He turned back into his own room. "And wishing!"

He strolled back to the door.

"By the way, Jane, we've a juicy invitation for our first off week-end. Last of this month, you know."

"Where?" she asked, sharply.

"Bloke Place. On the Hudson."

Jane flung herself up from her pillows with that inconceivably swift effect possible only to perfectly trained muscles.

"How sweet of Helena! Parents out of town, I suppose! Too bad that Helena's feelings are going to be hurt by our declining."

"We're not declining it, Jane." His eyes were direct on hers.

"But we are!"

"Going to hurt the Jessalyn act any, Jane, for us to swim a Saturday and a Sunday in old Morgan Bloke's private pool? Walk over his golf course? Or lighten his sideboard's private load? Think, Jane!"

"Is that what you're thinking of?" she sneered, angrily.

"And Stamm," he said, coolly. "And a new pair of Russian dancers." But his eyes were a shade too narrow.

"I won't go," she declared, sullenly.

"I made it the twenty-ninth," he observed, suavely.

* * * * *

Approaching Bloke Place by motor car one has an impression of a great orderly sprawl of white stone, dusky water, blue sky and huge green shrubbery.

Besides a noble view from all its four sides, it has splashing fountains, sumptuous driveways, garages, tennis courts, a polo field, a golf course, greenhouses, a great vegetable garden in the English style, and Druid groves.

"Some place!"

The exclamation was low and involuntary. Jarvis Jessalyn's long white hand tightened on his car's wheel.

Jane's face expressed something besides pure admiration of a white-and-green view.

"Looks like a new movie star's idea of home, sweet home," she said, briefly.

"No movie star draws enough in this country, even by report, to pay for this joint."

His voice drawled a little. He drove slowly.

"Must have stripped a marble mine," snapped Jane.

"All that's white isn't marble, Jane. Some of it's mere stone. But we couldn't even buy a back porch of this kind of stone."

"What's that beside the turn?"

"Early Grecian slave fountain," he said, unwittingly.

"You've been out here before?" inquired Jane, sweetly.

"Forgot to tell you. Crowd of us one afternoon while you had a fitting at Lulith's. Harry Semp"—he smiled faintly—"motored us."

Business of one Jessalyn, her eyes dark, staring over at a green cascade of hand-trained shrubbery. Business of the other Jessalyn, slightly constrained of manner, ostentatiously keeping his eyes fixed straight ahead on the road unwinding before the big ash-colored car like a smooth brown ribbon.

Jane spoke presently:

"You should have gone in for railroads, Jarv." There was the touch of a sneer.

"Yeah."

"But old Morgan didn't do all this with his heels," said she, sweetly. "It took a head."

"Glad you got that off your chest, Jane?"

She bit her lip. Then: "Didn't know you knew Harry Semp?"

"Lost $80 to him one night on a four of diamonds. That's all. He's lucky—at cards." Very faintly, straight ahead, Jarvis seemed to smile to himself.

A green-banked turn, and they drew up at a huge stone porch, cool-roofed and massive pillared, whereon were noisily and confusedly mingled many guests, many glasses, many servants and one tall, young hostess, in an orange-silk sport suit.

With inward cynicism Jane noted the guests, one by one. In the brief months since emerging from her fashionable school, Helena Bloke had picked friends fast and promiscuously.

There was Tilia Sloane, the film beauty; De Frere, a pastily plump idler of doubtful antecedents, with light-blue eyes; the swift Tucker sisters; Willis, horsily successful in his own line, but rodent-eyed; Gabriella Dunn, six times divorcee; and a collection of husbands and wives who did not belong to each other.

From under her white chiffon veil folds, Jane stared carelessly at the crowd, at individuals; she smiled up gracefully at her hostess, whose hands were extended hospitably, while a footman came for orders. Neither by twitch nor overcomposure did Jane betray her inmost feelings over Helena's divided greetings.

Careless single shake: "Hullo, Mrs. Jessalyn—glad you came." Quick, eager, outflung two hands: "Ah, ducky boy got here after all, didn't he!"

It rippled—the mirthful, sharp laughter. The younger Tucker shouted:

"Heard you called lots of names, Jarv! But never ducky boy till now."

Dan Willis began to hum, "But she once was a pal of mine, to-o-o!" accentuating the last word with a wave of a thin hand.

And 20 minutes later, in what was known as the daffodil suite and which did not suit Jane's pink-and-white charm, Jane confronted her husband wrathfully:

"Flattered! Leone Tucker"——

"Now, Jane"——

"Listen, Jarv! I don't pretend to be finicky. I never made my living by dancing for censor boards. But left to myself, I wouldn't pick the Tuckers and that De Frere for seatmates at the same dinner table."

"I'll admit that Helena's taste needs pruning."

It was not so much what he said, but the way he spoke, thoughtfully, with a little inflection of intimacy.

Against the feelings that threatened to take possession of her, Jane fought mechanically. Professional wisdom and professional training were strong. Facial lines mustn't be created; temper mustn't be permitted—not this week-end. Ah, not now!

But she aged in the next few hours—and knew it.

The crowd was openly interested in watching Jarvis and Helena. This did not seem to annoy young Miss Bloke, however.

Nineteen was the girl, no more—even in the broad glare of afternoon. Her face was firm of flesh, like an apricot hardly ripe. Her heavy, bright hair was young and rampant in the afternoon breeze. Her incessant laughter and movements had the rush of pure vitality. But, grimly conceded Jane, the girl also had the makings of a dowager and a strategist.

At dinner, Jane had a partner whose name she did not know. After dinner, when the moonlight became a white shawl for Bloke's shrubbery and a white torch for Hendrick's noble stream, Jane sat at a card table with De Frere. Somewhere out of doors were Jarvis and Helena. For all her fortitude, mist came to Jane's perky blue eyes.

Later there was dancing—Jarvis and Helena still out of doors. Against De Frere's too plump arm Jane danced mechanically. She did not talk much.

It was in their second turn together that De Frere murmured to her:

"If you ever need a professional partner, I'm ready."

Partner! That pasty, plump adventurer! In Jarv's place, in Jarv's white satin ruffs, in Jarv's spotlight. The thought was sickening, horrible.

"You'll bear me in mind?" he murmured.

"You flatter me," she mocked.

The following morning Jane Jessalyn lay on her pillow and stonily watched the yellow sunshine filter through the daffodil silk hangings. Two more days—two more long days!

From somewhere out of doors Helena's laughter sounded. And Jarvis was awake and dressed—Jarvis, who held 12:30 to be the ideal breakfast hour!

When Jane presently descended, she was annoyed at finding that Gabriella Dunn and the pasty De Frere were her only companions outside the huge, luxurious marble inclosure which the Blokes called a pool.

Gabriella and the younger Tucker later broke the unwritten law of salt by dissecting their hostess. This was early in the afternoon while Helena and Jarvis were playing tennis.

"She rushed that young Semp the same intensive way," shrugged Celly Tucker. "She seems to want the world to stop and take notice of whomever her fancy's fixed on. You'd think she asked the rest of us here chiefly to watch her and tell other folks what she's doing."

"She didn't have to ask us here. It was going the rounds in town before we got away."

"Well"—grumbling—"you really couldn't blame any man. Think—simply think of the income tax she'll hand some lucky fellow."

The two apologized in concert a few moments later.

"Jane! That stone balustrade is so huge—and your hair is so nearly the color of Tilla's!"

"Don't get excited," murmured Jane, with indifference.

After that, however, Helena's affair with young Semp was rehashed to its last bunch of violets. Gabriella related how Helena's father appeared unexpectedly from Florida and laid down the law. The younger Tucker idly retold how the same unexpected father had expurgated De Frere and Willis previously.

Jane wished, as she had wished before, that one of the three had proved a better Lochinvar. With each hour it grew harder to mask the small, deadly fear that assailed her. "You couldn't really blame any man!" That Michiavellian Tucker mouth! She couldn't really blame Jarvis—Jarvis, who was last first youth, and who so loved luxury and beauty.

Rapidly Jane winked her fringy black lashes. Heavens—what if Gabriella saw her wet eyes?

Presently the afternoon was enlivened by the appearance of fresh guests—among them Harry Semp, a tall, sandy-haired young man in goggles, brown cap and huge brown car.

The makings of a strategist in Helena? She gave Harry two limp white fingers to shake, and turned with a hostess' entreaty to De Frere. "Take 'em in and give 'em something to drink, like an obliging boy?" To the lovely light head in the chair nearest: "Tilla, you've looked bored for 40 minutes. Do you miss your megaphone? Here's a substitute."

Neither Tilla nor De Frere was particularly pleased. And half an hour later Tilla repaid Helena's little attention by motoring back to town with Harry Semp. But Jarvis, Jane noted, was faintly smiling with his eyes, a way he had when pleased with himself and events.

* * * * *

Dressing for dinner, the Jessalyns exchanged their first full five minutes' conversation of 30 hours.

"Did you phone Dusy Crane of the Weekly Revue that we'd be here over Sunday, Jane?"

"Forgot. Revue doesn't go to press till Tuesday, anyway."

"Don't see my pearl studs."

"Surely they were in the gray case?"

"Ye-ah. They're here."

Not much inclined to small talk, was Jane. In silence she finished dressing, keeping Nadine at hand until Jarvis had gone downstairs.

He did not offer to wait for her. She went down later—a small, lovely woman, who smiled easily, as a guest should.

Dinner—more laughter and cocktails.

More generalship from Helena. De Frere again at Jane's white elbow. The younger Tucker shamelessly amused.

It was perhaps 9:30 and the phonograph was tinkling out one of the Jessalyns' own numbers, when Helena in Jarvis' arms whirled to a tentative pause in front of a doorway in time to confront her entering father.

He was a large man, with a dominant nose and a full face.

Helena blew him a daughterly kiss, and then, resuming her whirling prog-tess, shook a white finger at him.

"Naughty, naughty! You said you wouldn't be home, Dads, for 10 days."

Said Morgan Bloke, grimly: "I got a telephone message last night that changed my plans. Your mother asks you to excuse her to your guests, as she has gone to her rooms with a headache."

"They didn't expect Mums, so they'll excuse her," called Helena, gayly. By that time she was half across the room.

Morgan Bloke withdrew. But immediately a maid entered the room and murmured something in Helena's ear.

Helena laughed. "Tell him after a while, Marie." And she continued to dance.

Jane saw that once Helena whispered something to Jarvis. Jarvis smiled faintly. Five minutes later Helena was missed from the room. Two minutes after that, Jarvis was gone.

Morgan Bloke appeared again, but it was Gabriella whose wits were quickest and whose incautious, eager confidence to the younger Tucker, a tone too audible, reached Jane's strained ears past De Frere's black shoulder:

"Quick, Ceily! They'll meet out there, past the tennis court and the Grecian slave fountain. And father's roaring at a maid to tell him in which direction Helena went. Let's not miss the fun."

Jane finished the turn with De Frere and then murmured that she was tired of dancing. His back turned, she herself slipped out an open window. Past the great stone porch she sped, past shrubs and fountains, hurrying—whither?

She skirted the main driveway, and then was aware of murmurs just ahead—the Tucker shrillness of whisper. Another swift step, and she would have been in their company.

In the shadows Jane hastily hid herself.

Across the illuminated driveway Helena came alone. Jane and the other eavesdroppers saw the form of Jarvis advancing over a wide space of velvet sod. But before Jarvis go' within 50 feet of Helena, who apparently did not see him, Morgan Bloke came crunching heavily down the driveway toward his daughter.

He was bareheaded, and the moon shone down on his passionately purple face. Jane saw Jarvis slip into the black shadows.

Morgan Bloke spoke in a furious voice.

"Helena, I'll give you just one hour to clear this riffraff out of the house. Or I'll clear."

"Not all are riffraff," she explained gently to her father. "Some of them are awfully amusing, Dads—and rather nice."

"I'll give you one hour—and that dancing fool goes first!"

"He isn't a fool, Dads. He's sweet!"

"Sweet!" Business of a father partially choking to death. "This is the limit from you, Helena! A married man"——

"Dads, you're so old-fashioned! Doesn't a man ever seek a divorce?"

"Helena!"

"And don't threaten to disinherit me," she went on. "Because I've learned there's money in heels as well as in rails. Jarv says I'd create a sensation on the New Centurion Roof."

Numbed for a moment, Jane missed some of Morgan Bloke's rejoinder. But she caught the last words: ——"what you are doing, Helena! A married man—you with the whole world to choose from!"

She cut in swiftly, sweetly:

"Ah! But I chose once, Dads—the only unmarried man I'll ever really want! And you didn't like him, either. I'll take this opportunity of letting you know, Dads, that it wasn't because I was an obedient daughter, but because Harry is stubborn, that it didn't come off. Harry's waiting for your welcome before he comes into the family."

Morgan Bloke gasped.

"That Texan oiler!"

"The only unmarried man for me, Dads! And if I can't have him I'll play around with the married ones. Jarvis Jessalyn isn't Harry, but he happens to be the best substitute I've found so far. And possibly in time"——

"In other words, you're threatening"——

"Not just that, Dads! Call it—call it using hook or crook. Harry said by the one or the other he'd have to be given a bona fide invitation into the Bloke family."

"I see, my daughter." Quiet, like

It Was REAL FUN
—Learning to Play the Piano in 90 Days

By A Wife

We had been married only three years, and already Bob's love for me was slipping. Instead of remaining in evenings, he used to spend his time elsewhere, or devote his time to playing on his violin, entirely indifferent to me. Frankly, I was living through days of misery.

One day, while reading a magazine I came across an amazing story—of a woman who had learned to play the piano in 90 days! Was it possible? Fascinated, I read on and on, and learned how she had mastered the piano by herself, in her spare time, without a teacher.

I stopped. A wonderful thought had occurred to me. Why couldn't I do what this woman had? And—how happy I could make Bob by accompanying him on the piano! Full of enthusiasm, I wrote to the U. S. School of Music, for their course. I, who had never known a single thing about music, was absolutely astonished at the remarkable simplicity of their print-and-picture method. As easy as the A. B. C!

My progress was wonderfully rapid, and soon I was rendering selections of music which pupils who study with private teachers for years can't play. You see, through this amazing short-cut method, all the difficult, confusing, tiresome parts of music are eliminated and the playing of melodies is reduced to a simple, easy-to-understand method that anyone can follow with ease.

But my greatest happiness came the day that Bob found out. Words can't describe his look of astonishment. And what a change seemed to come over him as he eagerly drank in my story. Then it was I realized what music had meant to him. As he expressed it, playing the violin was absolutely flat without the accompaniment of a piano.

Today Bob finds new delight in his violin, and I have kept right on with my piano studies. Our musical evenings are a marked success and we are able to offer our friends entertainment they enjoy.

Do you like music? Do you like to listen to it? Hum it? Do you find yourself tapping with your foot or drumming with your fingers when music plays? Then, by all means, write to the U. S. School of Music for a copy of the booklet, "Music Lessons in Your Own Home," together with an illustrated folder, explaining our easy print-and-picture method. The booklet gives complete information about this wonderful course in music, also about our special short-time Reduced Price Offer.

Remember, you can master any instrument, through this wonderful course. Whatever your favorite instrument, you can learn to play it in your spare time, through this short-cut method. now, seemed to fall from a waiting sky.

"I hope you see, Dads!" And she added in a little whimper: "Harry's all right—if you only knew."

A sharp and lucid brain had Morgan Bloke.

"If I get," he began, rumblingly, "a marriage license for you and this Texan before tomorrow noon, will you promise"——

Bubbled Helena, waiting not for him to finish: "I promise you'll never have to worry over anything the rest of your life but golf, grapefruit and grandchildren!"

Somehow Jane made the house and daffodil suite ahead of Jarvis.

But she had only 20 seconds to spare. Apparently as imperturbable as usual, he entered the room. But he was breathing rather hard. Their years together—she remembered them, and she had no desire to hurt him. He looked about for her maid.

"Want to pack and get back to town tonight, Jane?" Jarvis asked.

"Welcome worn out here?" Flippancy was the best note.

Surprisingly enough, he said, laconically: "Ye-ah."

Within the hour they were in the ash-colored car which all Broadway and Fifth avenue knew.

Behind them the Tuckers and De Frere were tumbling in Gabriella Dunn's low black car. A cool young person, Helena!

Jarvis sat silently at the wheel, his eyes fixed straight ahead on the road. Jane huddled in her seat, turning the silken collar of her motor coat high to hide her chin. A treacherous feature, the chin. It will wabble and betray.

The miles wound themselves back under the wheels. And then Jarvis laid a hand over her two.

"Got a piece of news for you, Jane."

"Yes?" She spoke listlessly.

"Like to have your own theater—our theater—The Jessalyn—onyx-walled foyer, blue velvet hangings, drops by Durban?"

"We're not apt to have it, Jarv," she said, languidly.

"We are, Jane. Friend of mine's promised to build it for us. Fifty-fifty—his dollars and our name. He's got lots of dollars. Made 'em in oil."

Above the silk coat collar Jane peered with wet, wondering eyes.

"What friend, Jarv?"

"Harry Semp."

"Jarv! You knew—you knew all along? You weren't tricked?"

"Know what?" he said, blandly. "I don't know what you're talking about, Jane—except that Harry said one good turn certainly deserves another, and his worst enemies had never accused him of ingratitude or breaking his word."

"You knew! Oh, Jarv"—voice breaking—"why didn't you tell me? I thought my heart was broken—you might have given me a hint."

"You see," he explained, "as an actress, Jane, you're such a good dancer."

He confided presently, hand attentively on wheel:

"I saw you in that statuary group, Jane."

"I don't care." Voice quavered. "She—she's young. And I'm not—very."

His free hand tightened on her two.

"Don't believe all you read, Jane."

"All I read, Jarv?"

"'Bout marriage being a weak animal this century."

"I didn't, Jarv"—a small sob—"until lately."

And presently, with anger: "How dare he call us riffraff!"

"Don't remind me of that, Jane," said Jarvis, with a faint grin. "I said 'Ouch' at the time. But" voice was somewhat wistful—"all of us can't be in rails."

course of the examinations which you have described, find anything in Exhibit K for identification—this hand?"

"I did."

"What did you find, please?"

"I found clutched in this hand six human hairs."

"What was the general condition of those six human hairs?"

"They were partly burned—that is, the ends of them had been scorched away."

"Did those hairs, in your opinion, come from the head of the body which you dissected?"

"They did not. They were of a different texture and a different color."

"That is all, Doctor," said Mr. Moss, and sat down.

For the smallest part of a minute there was a hush—and then a stir ran through the room like a breeze blowing suddenly into tree tops. The reporters began to write like mad—turning out rush copy, 40 or 50 sprawled words to the sheet.

For they knew, and the jurors knew—all there knew—that if there were hairs clutched in Ruth Wheeler's fingers and they were not from her own head, they must have been torn from the head of the man who killed her.

She could not have been killed by a chance blow—a suggestion upon which Wolter's counsel had been pinning his hopes for a mistrial or a compromise verdict. She must have met her death in a struggle, fighting for her life.

Literally Ruth Wheeler's dead hand had risen out of the grave to convict her murderer.

Waist and Hips Reduced in Ten Seconds With New Kind of Girdle

The Moment You Put On This New Kind of Girdle Your Waist and Hips Look Inches Thinner—And You Get Thin While Looking Thin, for This New Invention Produces the Same Results as an Expert Masseur. Makes Fat Vanish With Surprising Rapidity While You Walk, Play, Work or Sleep, Yet Does It So Gently That You Hardly Know It Is There. No More Heart-Straining Exercises—No More Disagreeable Starving Diets—No More Harmful Medicines—No More Bitter Self-Denials.

At last! A wonderful new scientific girdle that improves your appearance immediately and reduces your waist and hips almost "while you wait"! The instant you put on the new girdle the bulky fat on the waist and hips seems to vanish, the waist-line lengthens, and your body becomes erect, graceful, youthfully slender! And then—with every step you make, with every breath you take, with every little motion, this new kind of girdle gently massages away the disfiguring, useless fat—and you look and feel many years younger!

Look More Slender At Once!

Think of it! No more protruding abdomen—no more heavy bulging hips. By means of this new invention, known as the Madame X Reducing Girdle, you can look more slender immediately! You don't have to wait until the fat is gone in order to appear slim and youthful! You actually look thin while getting thin! It ends forever the need for stiff corsets and gives you with comfort, Fashion's straight, boyish lines!

Actually Reduces Fat

The Madame X Reducing Girdle is different from anything else you've seen or tried—far different from ordinary special corsets or other reducing methods. It does not merely draw in your waist and make you appear more slim; it actually takes off the fat, gently but surely!

The Madame X Reducing Girdle is built upon scientific massage principles which have caused reductions of 5, 10, 20 even 40 pounds. It is made of the most resilient rubber—especially designed for reducing purposes—and is worn over the undergarment. Gives you the same slim appearance as a regular corset without the stiff appearance and without any discomfort. Fits as snugly as a kid glove—has garters attached—and so constructed that it touches and gently massages every portion of the surface continually! The constant massage causes a more vigorous circulation of the blood, not only through these parts, but throughout the entire body! Particularly around the abdomen and hips, this gentle massage is so effective that it often brings about a remarkable reduction in weight in the first few days.

Those who have worn it say you feel like a new person when you put on the Madame X Reducing Girdle. You'll look better and feel better. You'll be surprised how quickly you'll be able to walk, dance, climb, indulge in outdoor sports.

Many say it is fine for constipation which is often present in people inclined to be stout.

For besides driving away excess flesh the Madame X Reducing Girdle supports the muscles of the back and sides, thus preventing fatigue, helps hold in their proper place the internal organs which are often misplaced in stout people—and this brings renewed vitality and aids the vital organs to function normally again.

Look Thin While Getting Thin

Without Girdle — With Girdle

Improves your appearance instantly—works for you every second of day to reduce the excess fat.

Now it is possible for some of the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattle Snake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide success all over the country.

Mr. D. Dey, a Nebraska resident, 67 years old, says, "I have used the treatment for only two weeks and my hearing is restored perfectly. The relief was almost instantaneous and now the head noises have disappeared. My catarrh, a case of many years standing, is improving wonderfully."

This compound, which is known as Virex, is easily used at home and seems to work almost like magic in its rapidity, on people of all ages.

So confident are we that Virex will cure you, that we offer to send a large $2 bottle for only $1 on 10 days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory, it costs you nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to the Dale Laboratories, 417 Gray Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of 10 days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this wonderful compound a trial.

68 and 17 Study English Together in St. Louis

How the 17 per cent of immigrants in the population of this city are being Americanized—Night classes at Public Library and in school buildings teach these men the fundamentals of good citizenship and help them on their way in this strange new land

LANGUAGE is the great Americanizer. A man 68 years old is spending two evenings each week in a room at the St. Louis Public Library, learning to speak, read and write English. A youth of 17 is in the same class. Both are immigrants. They are trying to know how to be Americans. They know enough already to know they never will know how unless they learn the language used in America. Other immigrants, between 17 and 68, are studying the tongue of their adopted land at the same evening gatherings. All hope to become good Americans. In order to become such, they must learn something about our civil government, our history, our ideals. But first they must know enough English to understand what the teachers tell them about these things.

These classes, under the auspices of the St. Louis Young Men's Christian Association's industrial and immigration departments, are supplemented in the public night schools and in the homes of many of the immigrants, where earnest young men do the teaching as volunteers in the work of Americanization. In December this work, locally, passed its tenth anniversary. Thousands and thousands of foreign-born men have profited by the teaching. The City of St. Louis, the State of Missouri, the United States of America as a whole, have profited. The profits are distributed generally and generously.

Ten years ago Harry ter Braak, an immigrant from Holland, having had several years' experience in Y. M. C. A. work at Ellis Island, where nearly all of the immigrants land, came to St. Louis. He became executive secretary for these departments of the local "Y." For a decade he has been directing Americanization work in St. Louis. A naturalized citizen, born and reared abroad, he is able to attack the problem from an international viewpoint. He knows how it feels to be an immigrant, a stranger in a strange land. He had but a slight acquaintance with English when he came to the United States. Being an educated man, it was comparatively easy for him to learn the language and the theory and practice of our civil government. He teaches his classes, therefore, with a deeper sympathy than could be the case with a native American.

"It is just like a mother instructing her children," said Mr. ter Braak the other day. "Many of these men have no knowledge of English when they come to our classes. We begin with the rudiments. We teach them, first, four or five simple words. Then we have them construct sentences from the words learned. Some of the sentences are fearfully and wrongfully made. But they persevere. Eventually they get a good grasp on the strange tongue. Their children—those who are married and have little ones—go to the public schools and learn English rapidly. But the parents, and the young bachelor immigrants, are subject to a slower process. For them it is hard, tedious work, but it is gratifying to be able to say that they take a keen interest in the classwork and are grateful for the instruction.

"This instruction makes good citizens out of raw material which, lacking it, might become dangerous additions to our community. The men are taught, through simple lessons, the value of American institutions and the duty and privilege of patriotism. They are made to understand that as Americans they no longer look upon themselves as foreigners; their old countries are made second to the new one; they are built over into Americans, so that when they go before the Judge to take the oath as new-made citizens of this republic they are able to understand what they are about."

Prior to the inception of this work, the 17 per cent of foreign-born people in St. Louis had to hoe their own rows in the matter of becoming Americanized. The tendency was for them to form groups, people of each nationality living in the same neighborhood, continuing to use the language to which they had been brought up, and also adhering to the customs and habits of people in their native countries. They had little knowledge of what America really is, what they as future Americans should strive to be, what privileges and duties they were to acquire as citizens of the United States. Thus it happened that they went about their ways in haphazard fashion; and always there was the disadvantage of an inadequate understanding of English, so that their contacts with native Americans tended to set them apart rather than to assimilate them.

In the past year no less than 137 immigrants have arrived in St. Louis carrying letters of introduction to Y. M. C. A. officials. These letters were written by Y. M. C A officials in the countries from which they came.

"So you are going to America?" would be the question asked of a young man, or of an older one, who was fortunate enough to come in contact with a "Y" organization at or near his old home. The Y. M. C. A. is everywhere, and it always operates under its Eng-

AMAZING NEW FARM OFFER

The Canadian Pacific Railway offers you a Farm Home in Western Canada on its Plan of Easy Payment. This makes it possible to own a farm home without paying profits to meet payments and leaves a surplus for comforts and enjoyments.

PAYMENTS EXTENDED OVER 20 YEARS—
FIRST YEAR FREE USE OF LAND

Under this plan all you pay down is 7% of the purchase price—One year's free use of the land without any interest. The balance of principal and interest will be arranged on an easy payment plan of 20 equal, annual payments which makes the second payment fall due two years after the purchase of the land, which is figured on the basis of 7% (including principal and interest) of the balance of the cost of the land. For example, on a purchase of 160 acres costing say, $2000, the down payment will be $320 and the second payment, at the end of the second year, will be $105.20. At the end of 20 years you will get clear title to the land—unless, of course, you wish to pay sooner, which is your privilege.

CANADA'S 1923 CROPS BEAT ALL RECORDS

In 1923 the wheat crop of Canada exceeded the 1922 crop by almost 104,000,000 bushels. The average yield was 16.5 bushels per acre and there were many individual cases where yields of 40 to 60 bushels were common. Other crops showed a corresponding increase with quality of high grade. These enormous yields on moderate priced land were at average prices for farm products. Every penny farmers on the highroad to success.

NO TAXES ON IMPROVEMENTS

There are moderate and there are no taxes on livestock, buildings, implements, improvements or personal effects. Good markets, modern schools, roads, churches, transportation facilities. Farm life in Western Canada desirable and attractive.

Irrigated land in Southern Alberta are also for sale. Irrigation means big crops and sure crops. Excellent water supply, unsurpassed markets. Government donation. Full details on application.

YOU CANNOT BUY UNTIL YOU INVESTIGATE

You must inspect the land before buying. It will be to your interest to see Western Canada before you decide. Cheap rates and Free will permit you to do so. Write TODAY for free booklet, maps, rates, descriptive literature and full particulars. Let us help you to select the right location. Let us arrange for complete information at the time and place you desire. Then come on and see for yourself. Your own farm awaits—instead of paying

..."I am going to America."
..."Do you any people over there, or ...w know anybody?"

..."I am going to St. Louis, a large city ...the State of Missouri."
..."Oh, yes—very good, then. Let us ...you a letter to the Y. M. C. A. in ...town."
...Armed with this introduction, a new-...comer has a distinct advantage over his ...fellows who lack it. The letter is an ...introduction to a job in St. Louis, if the ...immigrant is looking for a job and not going into business for himself. The "Y" is in touch with the big shoe factories and with other avenues of employment. Mr. ter Braak, let us say, calls up a shoe factory.

"Here is a lad from Germany who has no folks in this country. He is all alone and must find work. He has a Y. M. C. A. letter from his native place and he looks like a promising worker. What can you offer him?"

—"Send him around."

And around he goes, being told when he gets there just where to hang up his hat and coat and how to get busy. The new arrival feels rather much at home, right off; and he begins attending a night class and learning his way, word by word, fact by fact, step by step, up to the desirable summit of American citizenship. Then, when finally he goes before the Judge to be sworn in as an adopted son of Uncle Sam, with all the rights, privileges and duties of a native-blood member of the big family, he knows enough to keep from mixing up George Washington with Abraham Lincoln when the Judge asks him who's who in American history.

He has learned, for one thing, the big difference between a free republic and an absolute or a limited monarchy. He knows that the American Government has no intention to oppress any of the citizens who live under it and accept its ideals. He will have, he has discovered, an equal chance with all other Americans, with the solemn and deplorable exception that the persistent Satan of race prejudice is likely to be a handicap which he must fight hard to overcome.

The "Y" people in these 10 years just past have assisted many thousands of immigrants passing through St. Louis to get to their destinations elsewhere. It was through Y. M. C. A. efforts that the Mullanphy Fund management established quarters at Union Station to help immigrants upon their way.

The Americanization classes are taught largely by volunteers from Washington University, St. Louis University, Eden and Concordia Seminaries.

People of 28 nationalities are taking this instruction. Twenty-eight foreign tongues and the habits and customs of the people of 28 foreign lands are being supplanted by the English language and by the customs and habits of the American people.

With severely cold weather came ideal conditions for ice yachting on the Shrewsbury River, near Red Bank, N. J. Here are Robert Linton and his sister, Miss Helen M. Linton, making a trial cruise in their yacht "Tempest," in preparation for the races.

Those film-coats on your teeth

THIS is to offer you a test of a new way of teeth cleaning. Millions now employ it. The glistening teeth you see everywhere now show you how much it means.

New beauty, new protection come to users. No woman will ever go without the results when she knows them. Nor will she let her family go without them.

To combat the film

This method combats film on teeth—that viscous film you feel. It clings tenaciously. Unless you combat it, much of it remains. Food stains, etc., discolor it, then it forms dingy coats. That is why so many teeth lose luster.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They cause many serious troubles, local and internal. Very few people have escaped these film-caused troubles.

New ways to combat it daily

Dental science has found two effective film combatants. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring.

Able authorities have proved these methods by many careful tests. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

This tooth paste has brought a new dental era to millions of homes the world over. And largely through dental advice.

Two other great effects

Research proved two other things essential. So Pepsodent multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay. It multiplies the starch digestant in saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits, which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

These combined effects are bringing people everywhere a new conception of clean teeth.

You cannot doubt

No one can doubt these benefits. They are quickly seen and felt. One who once knows them will never again go without them.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

The results will amaze and delight you. Cut out this coupon so you don't forget.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

She Found A Pleasant Way To Reduce Her Fat

She did not have to go to the trouble of diet or exercise. She found a better way, which aids the digestive organs to turn food into muscle, bone and sinew instead of fat.

She used Marmola Prescription Tablets, which are made from the famous Marmola prescription. They aid the digestive system to obtain the full nutriment of food. They will allow you to eat many kinds of food without the necessity of dieting or exercising.

Thousands have found that Marmola Prescription Tablets give complete relief from obesity. And when the accumulation of fat is checked, reduction to normal, healthy weight soon follows.

All good drug stores the world over sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at one dollar a box. Ask your druggist for them, or order direct and they will be sent in plain wrapper, postpaid.

Youth Has Its Troubles, Too

That schoolgirl age, all arms and legs and good nature! Important changes are taking place in young bodies. One evidence of these changes is pimples—just when the impulse comes to look attractive! Pimples are not necessary, and should be eliminated.

Every girl can now have a clear, flawless complexion

A wonderful new treatment penetrates to the true skin and frees the complexion from pimples, blackheads, and other blemishes

Nearly all skin troubles have their root in the true skin. The true skin is not the surface covering we see, but a complicated organism of blood-vessels, nerves and millions of tiny glands lying beneath the surface.

In its important work of eliminating waste material from the body, the true skin often becomes a center of poisons, germs and infections. Its distress then shows on the surface in the form of pimples, blackheads, eczema and other disorders.

The L. D. Caulk Company, one of the oldest scientific institutions in the country, has developed a treatment which penetrates to the true skin, and there acts promptly and positively on the deep centers of skin disorders.

The Mercirex Treatment

This treatment consists of Mercirex Medicated Soap and Mercirex Medicated Skin Cream, which used in conjunction will positively rid the skin of pimples, blackheads and more serious disorders. There are two steps in the treatment:

1—Cleanse the affected area with Mercirex Medicated Soap, the most efficacious germicidal soap developed. It cleanses and disinfects the outer skin and stimulates the glands, preparing for the penetration of Mercirex Cream.

2—Apply Mercirex Cream thinly. Massage gently but thoroughly until the Cream penetrates. It goes quickly to the true skin, killing germ life and neutralizing poisons, thus enabling the true skin to function normally.

The effects of this treatment are remarkable! With the true skin restored to health, minor or serious surface defects disappear—often overnight—leaving the complexion clear and the skin beautifully smooth.

Mercirex is perfumed and flesh-tinted—it leaves no trace of grease or stain to betray its use.

Your druggist is offering a full-size Mercirex treatment consisting of two cakes of Soap and a jar of Cream—regular $1.55 value—at the introductory price of $1.25. If he cannot supply you, mail the coupon with $1.25, and we will send you the introductory package, together with a booklet on the care of the skin and scalp.

Mercirex was developed to enable every girl and woman to have the flawless complexion she desires. No matter what else you have used—no matter how serious or persistent your skin troubles are—you can depend on Mercirex. Take advantage of the introductory offer to-day!

Conspicuous nose pores can be reduced

On your nose there are more fat glands than elsewhere.

Sometimes fat accumulates in these glands, when the skin is not active enough. Then the pores become enlarged.

You can overcome this trouble by the following treatment:

WRING a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Finish by rubbing your nose for a few seconds with a piece of ice.

This stimulating method of cleansing will gradually reduce the enlarged pores.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks for this treatment and for regular toilet use.

Do You Envy the Health of Others?

Read these remarkable statements of what one simple food can do

There is nothing mysterious about the action of Fleischmann's Yeast. It is not a "cure-all"—not a medicine in any sense. But when the body is choked with the poisons of constipation—or when its vitality is low so that skin, stomach, and general health are affected—this simple natural food achieves literally amazing results.

Concentrated in every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast are millions of tiny yeast-plants, alive and active. At once they go to work—invigorating the whole system, clearing the skin, aiding digestion and assimilation, strengthening the intestinal muscles and making them healthy and active. Health is yours once more.

ABOVE

"A YEAR ago found me morose and irritable, with a nervous, rundown body and an exceptionally bad complexion. Horrid pimples on my face were the bane of my existence. One day while sitting at a soda fountain I read this ad: 'Try Fleischmann's Yeast for your Health's Sake,' and concluded to give it a trial Within a week I slept better, and everyone complimented me on my improved appearance. Today I am a picture of health, have a wonderful complexion, and everyone says I look five years younger."

(A letter from Miss Jane Branch of Houston, Texas)

ABOVE

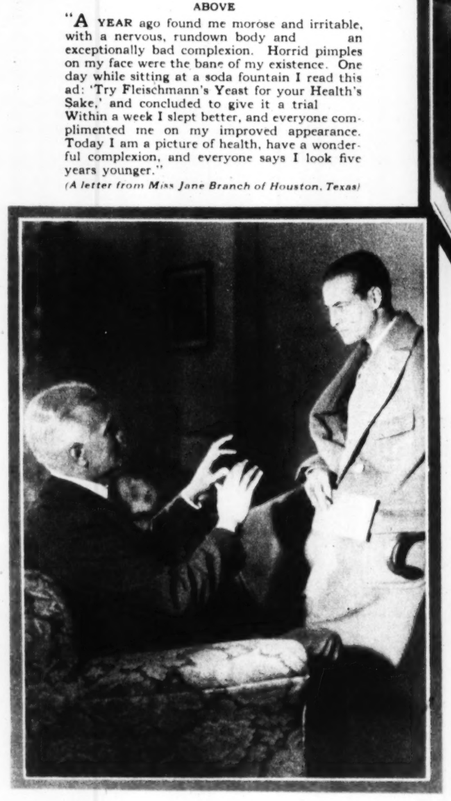
"UP to a couple of years ago I never have had regular intestinal action. I worked on this defect in many ways—abdominal exercises, vegetarianism, occasional medicine, Dr. Coué Fleischmann's Yeast has been the only agent that, with me, ever produced normal movement continuously. And as a natural consequence, I now feel finer in other ways—enjoy everything more: Food, work, play. Even my pipe seems to smoke better!"

(A letter from Mr. Henry J. Carroll of St. Louis)

AT LEFT

"I AM a graduate nurse. Back in 1911 while in charge of an operating room, I was afflicted with boils. I tried many remedies—still boils came, and I got run down and unable to carry on. Finally a physician told me to take Yeast That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a boil since. I have used Fleischmann's for hundreds of patients and for any number of different ailments. I am glad to say that twelve years have not dimmed my enthusiasm for Fleischmann's Yeast, or staled my appreciation of what it has done for me and for others in the course of my professional life."

(Miss Ann Batchelder of New York)



AT RIGHT

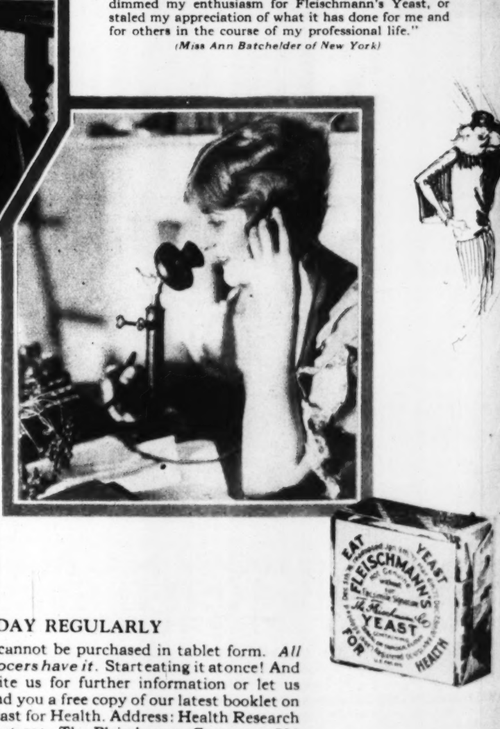
"RUN-DOWN and ill from overwork, I had local neuritis, stomach acidity and insomnia; a formidable array of enemies for the brave little yeast cake to tackle! Yet in two weeks friends began to take notice In a month my complexion was clear and lovely, stomach in perfect condition, nerves 'unjangled,' gone the 'All worn out' feeling, and I was able to sleep like a top."

(Extract from letter of a Chicago business girl, Miss Dorothy Deene)

AT LEFT

"IRREGULAR hours, eating in snatches, desperate hurry nervous, little or no appetite, slept poorly, and worst of all, suffered from constipation. Then I tried Fleischmann's Yeast." Almost at once "evacuation was easier, no stomach pains, no heartburn." Today—"practically complete elimination of bowel trouble, clearer skin, sounder sleep, better health."

(Extract from letter of a New York reporter, Mr. A. Kandel)



EAT 2 OR 3 CAKES A DAY REGULARLY

—before or between meals—plain, dissolved in water or milk or spread on crackers or bread. A cake dissolved in a glass of hot (not scalding) water before breakfast and at bedtime is especially beneficial in overcoming or preventing constipation. Fleischmann's Yeast comes only in the tinfoil package—it cannot be purchased in tablet form. All grocers have it. Start eating it at once! And write us for further information or let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Address: Health Research Dept. 521, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York City.

SALOON DARKENED AFTER MURDER OF PATROLMAN ON FRONT WALK

Five Automobiles Said to Have Disappeared From Place at Vandeventer and Natural Bridge Avenues About Time of Shooting.

INITIALED HOLSTER STRAP ONLY CLEW

Police Believe Two Shots Were Fired Through Head of W. H. Anderson After He Was Shot Down From Behind Yesterday.

The saloon at the southwest corner of Vandeventer and Natural Bridge avenue, in front of which Patrolman William H. Anderson was assassinated yesterday, has long been regarded by the police as a rendezvous for "red hots," the police term for suspected desperate criminals.

At 5 a. m., 25 minutes before the murder, the saloon bore signs of life; the barroom was lighted and five automobiles were parked in front of the building. At 5:56, 31 minutes after the tragedy, the saloon was dark and deserted and the automobiles had departed.

These significant facts and the finding of an army revolver holster strap, initialed "E. H. S." and "P. F. D." and inscribed "Rock Island Arsenal," are the only clews.

Slain Without Warning.

Patrolman Anderson was slain without any warning of attack, in the opinion of the Police Department. This is borne out by physical facts. The patrolman's revolver was in holster, his overcoat was fully buttoned and he was wearing his mittens. His nightstick, taken from him in the attack, has not been found.

Apparently two bullets were fired through his head from close range as he lay upon the sidewalk, after having been felled by a bullet in the neck. He was found lying on his right side. The two bullets had entered the left side of his head and become imbedded in the granitoid walk. This indicated, detectives said, that the head wounds were inflicted from close range.

The body was found at 5:45 a. m. by a man who was returning with his wife and daughter from a wedding anniversary celebration.

Patrolman Anderson made his hourly telephone call to the Dear Street Station from a patrol box at Sarah street and St. Louis avenue, the southern end of his beat, at 4:10 a. m., when he reported "nothing doing" on his beat. At 5:10 a. m., when he should have sent his next hourly call from a box a block away from where he was slain, he failed to do so. Detectives are trying to learn what he was doing in the 15 minutes between that time and when he was shot at dawn. He had passed through the saloon at 12:45 a. m. with another patrolman, at which time several men and women were in the wineroom.

The saloon, in front of which Patrolman Anderson was killed, had been raided frequently in search of liquor, following complaint that persons had left there seemingly intoxicated, and one of the bartenders had been fined for possessing liquor. Detectives also had included the saloon in their daily tours in search of suspicious characters and had arrested several persons there who were known to be associates of thieves.

"Friendly Copper."

On the other hand, Patrolman Anderson never bothered the place. He simply patrolled his beat and left the rabbling to other policemen and detectives who were not so well known to the habitues. To persons on his beat he was known as "the friendly copper."

The exact time of the murder was fixed by Henry Marmor of 4216 Page boulevard, who has a newspaper route in the neighborhood of the saloon. He was delivering Sunday papers at Vandeventer and Labadie avenues, six blocks south of the saloon, when he heard four or five shots. He looked at his watch. It was 5:25. His two brothers also were delivering papers further south and heard the shots. They did not note the exact time, but said it was around 5:30.

Autos Seen by Motorman.

Joseph E. Harrell, 3629A Page boulevard, motorman on the Vandeventer "owl" car, saw the lights in the saloon and the automobiles in front when he made the loop at
